Atterbury: Symbol of Job Corps Problem

Editor's Note: This is one of a series of spot reports by Haynes Johnson on how the hundreds of millions of dollars of Federal poverty money is being spent.)

By HAYNES JOHNSON

CAMP ATTERBURY, Ind.—"Hey, man, are you the reporter? I just want to say this. Put it down. We're not bums like the man said. You put it down."

The young man had come up, voluntarily, in a hallway. He said his few words and then walked away.

The incident was symtomatic of what is going on at this World War II Army base that has become one of the most troubled of the War on Poverty's Job Corps installations.

The young men and his fellow Corpsmen are at the center of a controversy over the camp and its inhabitants. Local hostility against them is growing. A congressman was widely quoted as describing them as "bums." Some of them have reached the point where they tear the Job Corps insignia off their jackets before leaving the center.

News Behind The Headlines

"We are very much concerned that we stand within a few weeks of a very serious situation," said an official of the center.

He referred to an incident in Indianapolis early this month in which Job Corps members on leave were threatened by local youths. One shot was fired at them, bottles were thrown and they were chased down the street.

A staff counselor, in writing of the incident, said he detected "a growing discontent" among the Corpsmen and warned that "there is a possibility of their planning an attempt to retaliate" if conditions don't change.

IN THE EARLY days of the War on Poverty everyone knew the Job Corps would be difficult, but no one could have anticipated the magnitude of the problems encountered here.

Atterbury is an embattled center. In classrooms and shops, Job Corps are learning basic skills and trades, preparing themselves for opportunities that can lift them above their environment. The classes and the training sessions are proceeding on schedule. But the spotlight continues to play on the isolated incidents rather than the over-all program.

In this, Atterbury has run up against an unpleasant and often unfair axiom in journalism: bad news drives out good. For Atterbury, this has had a particularly damaging effect. One of the results is that Atterbury has become something of a symbol of the supposed massive mistakes engineered by the federal government's poverty program. As one of the center's harshest critics, the Eugene Pulliam newspapers in Indianapolis, has put it:

"Federal do-gooders have foisted off a dubious scheme on the people of Indiana."

The Atterbury example, the papers say, shows that "the Job Corps is a flop from coast to coast."

REP. RICHARD L. ROUDEBUSH (R-Ind.) has called the center a "drop-out school." He is the man who was quoted on Jan. 19 as saying the center was inhabited by an "assortment of dropouts, juvenile delinquents and bums whose sole contribution to society is that they didn't have the fortitude to stay in public school."

On a number of occasions, Roudebush, a former national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, has compared the Job Corpsmen unfavorably with American servicemen in Viet Nam.

But Roudebush's attack is only one aspect of the center's troubles.

Atterbury represents one of the largest single investments in the War on Poverty. One of eight urban training camps in the nation, it operates under a $10.8 million Washington grant. That's slightly more than half of the entire federal poverty money allotted to Indiana.

The urban Job Corps centers take youths with higher basic aptitudes than those admitted to the smaller rural conservation centers such as the one at Winslow, Ariz., examined in an earlier article in this series. The urban centers offer advanced vocational training that may lead directly to a skilled job.

AT ATTERBURY the youths are offered training in one of six basic occupational skill areas: Automotive service maintenance and repair; building maintenance and repair; food service and preparation; appliance repairs; refrigeration installation and repairs; and heating installation.

A student divides his time between the vocational shop and formal classwork. The classes differ widely, however, from normal school curriculum. While mathematics and reading form the basis for the classroom work, the instruction is not rigid or stylized.

Students are learning practical things. In one class, they learn how to fill out employment forms, in another, how to prepare tax returns. They are also given instruction in such every-day matters as keeping informed by reading newspapers and magazines.

The day begins early at Atterbury, with the Corpsmen arising at 6 a.m. By 8:30 a.m. they are in their educational and vocational classrooms. The class day lasts until 4 p.m.

The schedule demands a major readjustment for many of the youths, most of whom have dropped out of school. Consequently, the teachers put an additional effort in trying to motivate the youths.

The government contract for the operation of Atterbury expires this June. Because of the intense controversy over the center, there is no assurance it will be renewed.

EVERY TIME a Job Corps member gets in trouble it is seized upon as one more reason for closing the camp.

No one at the center tries to minimize the serious incidents that have occurred. But they vigorously insist that the incidents have been exaggerated and that the acts of a few have been used against the majority.

Staff members say frankly they were not entirely prepared for the initial hostility they encountered from the early Job Corps arrivals. One member referred to a "profile of a Corpsman" put out by Washington, and said:

"I thought the Corpsmen and the program would be different. I didn't picture the big number of Corpsmen who have hostile tendencies. This is not to say people with hostile tendencies are not good for the program or that we can't do something for them. But it's entirely different from what we expected.

"We were prepared for bedwetters, kids who were tough or homesick or whose girls were pregnant. But the kid who gets his kicks tearing down a building—well, we had an awful lot to learn."

TO A MAN, the staff says that the initial adjustments have been made and that the program is working. The Job Corps members also seem enthusiastic.

That doesn't mean the staff is entirely happy. There appear to be serious morale problems, insecurity and tension. Some of this stems from outside criticism and the knowledge that their program may not be renewed. Some reflect dissatisfaction with certain administrative practices.

But when it comes to talking about the Corpsmen and the job they are doing opinion is unanimous.

"The good or the potential good that we do I think outweighs the instability or frustration we do have," the same staff man said.

Another man put the conduct problem this way:

"You kind of live with one foot in a nice, clean middle-class world—the world you go home to at night. And then you have your other foot in another world you didn't know anything about.

"These urban slum boys are rather difficult to understand, but by and by we find a relatively small percentage of the population gives you trouble. But when you get trouble, it can be the real thing."

SINCE ATTERBURY was opened in April last year, 50 youths have gone before the center's review board for serious disciplinary infractions. A total of 16 Corpsmen have been arrested for offenses that occurred on the center. (Since Atterbury is a federal reservation, the FBI makes the arrests in the center.)

The most serious incident involved seven in one sodomy case. At the end of January two Corpsmen were arrested when they were discovered with marijuana in a dormitory. The others were arrested on charges of assault.

Center officials make the point, as James J. McManus, the public affairs officer said, that "not one Atterbury Job Corpsman has ever been convicted of doing a dime's worth of property damage outside the center. Not one Atterbury Job Corpsman has ever been convicted of personal harm to a single person outside the center."

THERE HAVE BEEN incidents, both on and off the center, that did not result in arrests but which added to the already unfavorable public impression.

During the summer a group of Corpsmen were reported to have shouted obscenities at women and to have thrown sticks and stones into a crowd at the Indianapolis Speedrome.

In another case, a movie projector in the Center chapel broke down several times during the showing of a film on the night of Jan. 29. Cat-calls and shouts of derision kept up until the projector finally gave out. The film was halted. Amid the shouts, one Corpsman threw a hymnal. It tore a hole in the plasterboard wall. The damages came to $15.75. The public was given the impression a riot had occurred. There has never been a riot at the center, officials say.

Under pressure from critics and out of awareness that discipline is necessary, the center operates under strict rules.

Corpsmen now are being frisked each time they get off a bus from leave, even when they come back from church.

Corpsmen I have talked to, as well as some members of the staff, object strenuously to this. To some on the staff, such an action is viewed as helping to destroy their hard-won relationships with the youths. The Corpsmen think the search is an insult, although they admit there are those who try to smuggle in knives or marijuana.

MANY ON THE staff feel that what they regard as deliberate harassment has placed the center in an untenable position.

The Job Corps is forced into defending acts which are indefensible in ordinary living, but which are normal for many of the youths. The youths have come from problem areas, they are profane, many are accustomed to weapons, or even narcotics.

But they all came into the Job Corps voluntarily, and the greater percentage seem to regard this as a genuine opportunity to better themselves.

"What we fear," said one man, "is that the public will demand a neat program rather than an effective one. Our problems are far more complex than we anticipated, but I certainly don't want to see us become just another institution."

On paper Atterbury was supposed to handle a peak capacity of 2,600 youths. It has never reached anywhere near that number. Today there are 670 Corpsmen registered (of whom 37 are listed as absent without leave and 14 on administrative" — medical or disciplinary — leave).

Yet the total staff numbers 685. That figure, including every staff job from janitors and secretaries to top administrators, arouses sharp criticism. There are more employes than Job Corpsmen.

The center is presently adding about 75 youths each week and expects to reach the planned enrollment of 2,600 by this summer.

In the meantime, the staff struggles with its difficult job and tries to plan for a future that may never come.

Harriman Raps RFK Viet Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Roving Ambassador W. Averell Harriman Saturday criticized Sen. Robert F. Kennedy's Communist coalition proposal for a Viet Nam government as "premature" and as a "mistake."

Kennedy created an uproar in administration circles two weeks ago when he suggested that the leaders of the Viet Cong National Liberation Front be invited to take part in any postwar South Viet Nam government.

In a television interview Harriman commented:

"I think it's premature to discuss questions of that kind. I think the President is right. He's ready to go to conference and have unconditional discussions . . .

"We don't know who will be represented at the meeting, what the issues will be. To try to lay out ahead of time what's to be discussed, I think is a mistake."

* * * *

HARRIMAN, a leading figure in President Johnson's recent peace offensive, also predicted it will be hard to get the Communists to come to the conference table.

"They've got one determination," he said, "and that is to take over the south by force . . . to impose communism on South Viet Nam. That's their objective and that's the issue they're for and they're not going to take half a loaf. They want it all. They think they can win."

Of the eventual end of the fighting, Harriman said: "The Communists have learned from the teachings of Lenin to take a step backward when they have found they're not succeeding and it may be that rather suddenly the other side will take a step back. But, they'll only take a step back if they're convinced we're serious and we're going to stick it out."

Mrs. Meyers Again Association Head

Mrs. Dessie Meyers has been re-elected to a ninth term as president of the Lomita Property Owners Association.

Elected to the board of directors were Mrs. Lillian Cameron, E. R. Leland, Mrs. Frances Moore, Don Meyers and Mrs. Alice Parker.

Amphibious Force Plays Crucial Role

By BUCK LANIER
Naval Affairs Editor

CORONADO—You can bomb and shell a place to bits, but until that Marine or GI sits down with a rifle across his knees and says, "This piece of land is mine," you have not captured a thing.

"It is the amphibious forces business to see that Marine or GI gets ashore and stays there as long as desired," Vice Adm. Bernard F. Roeder, commander, Pacific Amphibious Forces, said Saturday.

Tuesday marks the first year of the real push in the Viet Nam war. On that March 8 ships of the Pacific Amphibious Forces, with Long Beach's Squadron 7 right in the thick of things, steamed into DaNang Harbor with 1,400 combat-ready Marines.

* * * *

"SINCE THAT initial landing 62,000 combat troops, 11,000 vehicles and 68,000 short tons of cargo have been lifted, landed, withdrawn or replaced in South Viet Nam. Our units, operating in the 7th Fleet, have done themselves proud," Adm. Roeder declared.

"It has taken dedicated effort under some bad circumstances," he said.

"Deployments are going to get longer as our efforts increase. The Navaro gets home to Long Beach on Mach 16 and will have been gone 10 months and 20 days," Adm. Roerder added.

He revealed also that 52 of his 76-ship force was deployed now.

"THE RESURGENCE in amphibious warfare is a product of the strategic consideration that limited war is the most likely form of warfare that our nation will be called upon to respond.

"We have been harassing the Viet Cong all along the coast of South Viet Nam. This strike capability of putting troops ashore quickly keeps the VC pushed back in the highlands with no safe haven.

"The conflict in Viet Nam is a classic example of the employment of sea-based power to contain aggression in a remote, strange environment,' he pointed out.

* * * *

THE ADMIRAL noted, too: New ships coming to the amphibious forces are going to help increase speed from the present 8-10 mph average to 20.

Training, testing new vessels and techniques continue daily at the vast base here.

Small jet boats with a draft of less than two feet are being shaken down for use in the shallow Viet Nam waterways. They will be commanded by a petty officer—in some cases a third class boatswain.

SEAL training continues—a program the Navy is readying for full exposure in the immediate future.

Air cushion vehicles that go 60 mph over water and land. And more.

"If we don't do it, then it doesn't get done," is a good motto for the Pacific Amphibious Forces.

Briton Tells Plan to Update Ports

By JACK BALDWIN

By decreasing the number of employers and by closing down some British ports, Great Britain hopes to increase employment of its casual dock labor force —longshoremen, as they are known in America.

This seeming incongruity was expressed this week by Sir William Garrett, member of Britain's National Docks Modernization Commission, while on an inspection tour of the Port of Long Beach.

Sir William, knighted by the Crown in 1958 for services on behalf of the United Kingdom's industrial complex, said unsteady employment among longshoremen is created by too many individual employers.

"We hope to persuade the employers to merge, thus forming a single parent company that would do all the hiring," he said.

* * * *

"BY REDUCING the number of dock employers, for example, in London alone from 467 to 45 and Liverpo from 417 to 11, through mergers, the commission hopes to achieve in each port a permanent force of steadily employed dock workers serving all docks," he added.

Sir William claims the commission's recommendations have the blessing of labor.

"In fact, the commission is composed of 19 members; eight from the employers, eight from the labor unions and three independent members," he pointed out.

The British visitor added that the commission had no relatory powers and could accomplish its goals only through persuasion that the program would benefit both employers and labor.

* * * *

SIR WILLIAM stated the commission will direct a $500 million program aimed at modernizing all of England's ports, including London, to meet shipping needs of the future.

During the six year undertaking, 18 English seaports will be affected, including one to be declared obsolete with the recomendation it be shut down entirely as a port. "Our goal is to provide dock workers with a steady 40-hour week and to raise the average pay of $50 per week up to at least $60," the British commissioner said.

Among other benefits the labor force might enjoy under the modernization plan—would be the instigation of "sick pay and pension schemes" the visiting official stated.

Sir William's tour included an inspection of the containerization handling facilities of Sea-Land Co. in Long Beach and the Matson Navigation Co. facilities in the Port of Los Angeles.

* * * *

HE SAID THAT at present there is no similar type of operation in England. He added however that the techniques used here would be examined under a program designed to create the world's first experimental dock at Tilbury.

Executives Install Leaders

Attorney Alfred D. Williams was installed president of the Long Beach Executives Assn. Saturday night in the Starlight Room of the Lafayette Hotel.

Master of Ceremonies John McKennon, general manager of the Lafayette, cited Jack N. Cochrane, outgoing president, for his leadership during the past year. Gordon McClenathen was also praised for his work in organizing the 44th annual installation dinner.

Installed with Williams were Weckford Morgan, first vice president; Leon Frazer, second vice president, and Norm Scott treasurer.

Other members of the board of directors are William Davis, Glen Sadler, Glen Hunter, Lamont Davis and Cochrane.

Williams was admitted to the bar in 1951 and has practiced here since that time. He and his wife, Betty, have three children. They live at 6454 Los Santos Dr.

Braden Raps Rafferty's Aide on Teacher's Play

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The president of the State Board of Education Saturday night accused a top aide of Dr. Max Rafferty of using "words far more embarassing" than those contained in a San Diego teacher's controversial play.

Thomas W. Braden chided the California Association of School Librarians for not defending Mrs. Geri Turner Davis whose teaching credential was threatened with revocation by a committee headed by Dr. Everett T. Calvert, chief deputy superintendent of public instruction.

* * * *

THE COMMITTEE investigated Mrs. Turner's one-act play, "A Cat Called Jesus," two months ago but found no adequate legal basis for stripping her of her credential. Calvert labeled the play "vulgar" and warned her not to write such things in the future.

"The other day a teacher who wrote a play was publicly rebuked for doing so — and in words far more embarassing than any in her play —by a man who holds of all things the post of chief deputy superintendent of public instruction," Braden, a candidate for lieutenant governor, said in remarks prepared for the association's 25th annual conference.

"The other day in Marin County, a book recommended by teachers of English for reading by superior students was banned from school library shelves because of the protests of the uninformed and by those who do not read.

"Where was your association?" he asked.

* * * *

BRADEN said it was the group's "chief business" to step into "public quarrels about books and the freedom of writers to write."

"If you who guard the written word will not defend the freedom to write and read, can you expect that freedom to be defended by the ignorant, by those who do not read or by the man who holds the post of chief deputy superintendent of public instruction," he said.

Orange County's Budget Requests at $115 Million

By BOB GEIVET

Budget requests totaling $115,209,606 have been filed with the Orange County Board of Supervisors by heads of the several county departments and will be up for review next month.

The total requests are for $16,551,264 more than the supervisors authorized for them this fiscal year.

County Administrative Officer David G. Hitchcock said that he will start reviewing the budget requests Monday and then will begin meeting with the department heads individually on April 26.

* * * *

SUPERVISORS begin hearings May 5, continuing them through May 20. By that time, Hitchcock will have pared down some of the requests — and possibly expanded others — and the supervisors will have the final say.

The board must adopt the budget by June 8, but has until July 14 for any final adjustments.

Only the Building Services Department cut its budget figure under that of the current fiscal year. Robert E. Thomas, the chief, asked for $2,101,160, or $169,000 less than his present operating budget.

The Welfare Department budget sliced $2 million off its programs by asking $21,081,300, but this was chiefly by a change in bookkeeping and does not necessarily reflect any savings, Hitchcock said.

Both the Orange County General Hospital and the County Road Department proposed budget increases of $2.5 million — and both of them represent "outside sources of funds" they'll spend.

The hospital budget is proposed at $10,771,006, and the road budget at $15,249,225.

Next largest increase would be an additional $1.1 million for welfare administration; it asked $3,742,195 for next fiscal year.

Requested budgets, and their increases, for other departments:

Assessor, $2,930,766, up $96,000; district attorney, $1,664,086, up $300,000; sheriff, $3,240,548, up $250,000; probation $2,732,331, up $500,000; juvenile hall, $1,201,379, up $300,000; building, $1,107,835, up $50,000; health, $2,512,859, up $510,000; refuse disposal, $1,780,740, up $17,000; and all others totaling $24,130,307 to show over-all increase of $4 million for them.

The county library budget, which does not apply to the entire county, was set at $2,456,030, up $300,000.

Structural fire protection by the County Fire Department, which is extended only to a portion of the county, would cost $40,000 more for a total of $344,562.

Supervisors asked for $3 million more in the capital projects budget, proposing to raise it to $11,369,875. They also proposed to add $1.5 million to the accumulative capital outlay budget, for a total of $3,799,372.

The fund for retirment for county employes would be pegged at $2,684,457 next year, an increase of $160,000.

Atterbury: Symbol of Job Corps Problem

Editor's Note: This is one of a series of spot reports by Haynes Johnson on how the hundreds of millions of dollars of Federal poverty money is being spent.)

By HAYNES JOHNSON

CAMP ATTERBURY, Ind.—"Hey, man, are you the reporter? I just want to say this. Put it down. We're not bums like the man said. You put it down."

The young man had come up, voluntarily, in a hallway. He said his few words and then walked away.

The incident was symtomatic of what is going on at this World War II Army base that has become one of the most troubled of the War on Poverty's Job Corps installations.

The young men and his fellow Corpsmen are at the center of a controversy over the camp and its inhabitants. Local hostility against them is growing. A congressman was widely quoted as describing them as "bums." Some of them have reached the point where they tear the Job Corps insignia off their jackets before leaving the center.

News Behind The Headlines

"We are very much concerned that we stand within a few weeks of a very serious situation," said an official of the center.

He referred to an incident in Indianapolis early this month in which Job Corps members on leave were threatened by local youths. One shot was fired at them, bottles were thrown and they were chased down the street.

A staff counselor, in writing of the incident, said he detected "a growing discontent" among the Corpsmen and warned that "there is a possibility of their planning an attempt to retaliate" if conditions don't change.

IN THE EARLY days of the War on Poverty everyone knew the Job Corps would be difficult, but no one could have anticipated the magnitude of the problems encountered here.

Atterbury is an embattled center. In classrooms and shops, Job Corps are learning basic skills and trades, preparing themselves for opportunities that can lift them above their environment. The classes and the training sessions are proceeding on schedule. But the spotlight continues to play on the isolated incidents rather than the over-all program.

In this, Atterbury has run up against an unpleasant and often unfair axiom in journalism: bad news drives out good. For Atterbury, this has had a particularly damaging effect. One of the results is that Atterbury has become something of a symbol of the supposed massive mistakes engineered by the federal government's poverty program. As one of the center's harshest critics, the Eugene Pulliam newspapers in Indianapolis, has put it:

"Federal do-gooders have foisted off a dubious scheme on the people of Indiana."

REP. RICHARD L. ROUDEBUSH (R-Ind.) has called the center a "drop-out school." He is the man who was quoted on Jan. 19 as saying the center was inhabited by an "assortment of dropouts, juvenile delinquents and bums whose sole contribution to society is that they didn't have the fortitude to stay in public school."

On a number of occasions Roudebush, a former national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, has compared the Job Corpsmen unfavorably with American servicemen in Viet Nam.

But Roudebush's attack is only one aspect of the center's troubles.

Atterbury represents one of the largest single investments in the War on Poverty. One of eight urban training camps in the nation, it operates under a $10.8 million Washington grant. That's slightly more than half of the entire federal poverty money allotted to Indiana.

The urban Job Corps centers take youths with higher basic aptitudes than those admitted to the smaller rural conservation centers such as the one at Winslow, Ariz., examined in an earlier article in this series. The urban centers offer advanced vocational training that may lead directly to a skilled job.

AT ATTERBURY the youths are offered training in one of six basic occupational skill areas: Automotive service maintenance and repair; building maintenance and repair; food service and preparation; appliance repairs; refrigeration installation and repairs; and heating installation.

A student divides his time between the vocational shop and formal classwork. The classes differ widely, however, from normal school curriculum. While mathematics and reading form the basis for the classroom work, the instruction is not rigid or stylized.

Students are learning practical things. In one class, they learn how to fill out employment forms, in another, how to prepare tax returns. They are also given instruction in such every-day matters as keeping informed by reading newspapers and magazines.

The day begins early at Atterbury, with the Corpsmen arising at 6 a.m. By 8:30 a.m. they are in their educational and vocational classrooms. The class day lasts until 4 p.m.

The schedule demands a major readjustment for many of the youths, most of whom have dropped out of school. Consequently, the teachers put an additional effort in trying to motivate the youths.

The government contract for the operation of Atterbury expires this June. Because of the intense controversy over the center, there is no assurance it will be renewed.

EVERY TIME a Job Corps member gets in trouble it is seized upon as one more reason for closing the camp.

No one at the center tries to minimize the serious incidents that have occurred. But they vigorously insist that the incidents have been exaggerated and that the acts of a few have been used against the majority.

Staff members say frankly they were not entirely prepared for the initial hostility they encountered from the early Job Corps arrivals. One member referred to a "profile of a Corpsman" put out by Washington, and said:

"I thought the Corpsmen and the program would be different. I didn't picture the big number of Corpsmen who have hostile tendencies. This is not to say people with hostile tendencies are not good for the program or that we can't do something for them. But it's entirely different from what we expected.

"We were prepared for bedwetters, kids who were tough or homesick or whose girls were pregnant. But the kid who gets his kicks teafing down a building—well, we had an awful lot to learn."

TO A MAN, the staff says that the initial adjustments have been made and that the program is working. The Job Corps members also seem enthusiastic.

That doesn't mean the staff is entirely happy. There appear to be serious morale problems, insecurity and tension. Some of this stems from outside criticism and the knowledge that their program may not be renewed. Some reflect dissatisfaction with certain administrative practices.

But when it comes to talking about the Corpsmen and the job they are doing opinion is unanimous.

"The good or the potential good that we do I think outweighs the instability or frustration we do have," the same staff man said.

Another man put the conduct problem this way:

"You kind of live with one foot in a nice, clean middle-class world—the world you go home to at night. And then you have your other foot in another world you didn't know anything about.

"These urban slum boys are rather difficult to understand, but by and by we find a relatively small percentage of the population gives you trouble. But when you get trouble, it can be the real thing."

SINCE ATTERBURY was opened in April last year, 50 youths have gone before the center's review board for serious disciplinary infractions. A total of 16 Corpsmen have been arrested for offenses that occurred on the center. (Since Atterbury is a federal reservation, the FBI makes the arrests in the center.)

The most serious incident involved seven in one sodomy case. At the end of January two Corpsmen were arrested when they were discovered with marijuana in a dormitory. The others were arrested on charges of assault.

Center officials make the point, as James J. McManus, the public affairs officer said, that "not one Atterbury Job Corpsman has ever been convicted of doing a dime's worth of property damage outside the center. Not one Atterbury Job Corpsman has ever been convicted of personal harm to a single person outside the center."

THERE HAVE BEEN incidents, both on and off the center, that did not result in arrests but which added to the already unfavorable public impression.

During the summer a group of Corpsmen were reported to have shouted obscenities at women and to have thrown sticks and stones into a crowd at the Indianapolis Speedrome.

In another case, a movie projector in the Center chapel broke down several times during the showing of a film on the night of Jan. 29. Cat-calls and shouts of derision kept up until the projector finally gave out. The film was halted. Amid the shouts, one Corpsman threw a hymnal. It tore a hole in the plasterboard wall. The damages came to $15.75. The public was given the impression a riot had occurred. There has never been a riot at the center, officials say.

Under pressure from critics and out of awareness that discipline is necessary, the center operates under strict rules.

Corpsmen now are being frisked each time they get off a bus from leave, even when they come back from church.

Corpsmen I have talked to, as well as some members of the staff, object strenuously to this. To some on the staff, such an action is viewed as helping to destroy their hard-won relationships with the youths. The Corpsmen think the search is an insult, although they admit there are those who try to smuggle in knives or marijuana.

MANY ON THE staff feel that what they regard as deliberate harassment has placed the center in an untenable position.

The Job Corps is forced into defending acts which are indefensible in ordinary living, but which are normal for many of the youths. The youths have come from problem areas, they are profane, many are accustomed to weapons, or even narcotics.

But they all came into the Job Corps voluntarily, and the greater percentage seem to regard this as a genuine opportunity to better themselves.

"What we fear," said one man, "is that the public will demand a neat program rather than an effective one. Our problems are far more complex than we anticipated, but I certainly don't want to see us become just another institution."

On paper Atterbury was supposed to handle a peak capacity of 2,600 youths. It has never reached anywhere near that number. Today there are 670 Corpsmen registered (of whom 37 are listed as absent without leave and 14 on administrative" — medical or disciplinary — leave).

Yet the total staff numbers 685. That figure, including every staff job from janitors and secretaries to top administrators, arouses sharp criticism. There are more employes than Job Corpsmen.

The center is presently adding about 75 youths each week and expects to reach the planned enrollment of 2,600 by this summer.

In the meantime, the staff struggles with its difficult job and tries to plan for a future that may never come.

Harriman Raps RFK Viet Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Roving Ambassador W. Averell Harriman Saturday criticized Sen. Robert F. Kennedy's Communist coalition proposal for a Viet Nam government as "premature" and as a "mistake."

Kennedy created an uproar in administration circles two weeks ago when he suggested that the leaders of the Viet Cong National Liberation Front be invited to take part in any postwar South Viet Nam government.

In a television interview Harriman commented:

"I think it's premature to discuss questions of that kind. I think the President is right. He's ready to go to conference and have unconditional discussions . . .

"We don't know who will be represented at the meeting, what the issues will be. To try to lay out ahead of time what's to be discussed, I think is a mistake."

* * * *

HARRIMAN, a leading figure in President Johnson's recent peace offensive, also predicted it will be hard to get the Communists to come to the conference table.

"They've got one determination," he said, "and that is to take over the south by force . . . to impose communism on South Viet Nam. That's their objective and that's the issue they're for and they're not going to take half a loaf. They want it all. They think they can win."

Of the eventual end of the fighting, Harriman said: "The Communists have learned from the teachings of Lenin to take a step backward when they have found they're not succeeding and it may be that rather suddenly the other side will take a step back. But, they'll only take a step back if they're convinced we're serious and we're going to stick it out."

Amphibious Force Plays Crucial Role

By BUCK LANIER
Naval Affairs Editor

CORONADO—You can bomb and shell a place to bits, but until that Marine or GI sits down with a rifle across his knees and says, "This piece of land is mine," you have not captured a thing.

"It is the amphibious forces business to see that Marine or GI gets ashore and stays there as long as desired," Vice Adm. Bernard F. Roeder, commander, Pacific Amphibious Forces, said Saturday.

Tuesday marks the first year of the real push in the Viet Nam war. On that March 8 ships of the Pacific Amphibious Forces, with Long Beach's Squadron 7 right in the thick of things, steamed into DaNang Harbor with 1,400 combat-ready Marines.

"SINCE THAT initial landing 62,000 combat troops, 11,000 vehicles and 68,000 short tons of cargo have been lifted, landed, withdrawn or replaced in South Viet Nam. Our units, operating in the 7th Fleet, have done themselves proud,' Adm. Roeder declared.

"It has taken dedicated effort under some bad circumstances," he said.

"Deployments are going to get longer as our efforts increase. The Navaro gets home to Long Beach on Mach 16 and will have been gone 10 months and 20 days," Adm. Roerder added.

He revealed also that 52 of his 76-ship force was deployed now.

"THE RESURGENCE in amphibious warfare is a product of the strategic consideration that limited war is the most likely form of warfare that our nation will be called upon to respond.

"We have been harassing the Viet Cong all along the coast of South Viet Nam. This strike capability of putting troops ashore quickly keeps the VC pushed back in the highlands with no safe haven.

"The conflict in Viet Nam is a classic example of the employment of sea-based power to contain aggression in a remote, strange environment,' he pointed out.

THE ADMIRAL noted, too: New ships coming to the amphibious forces are going to help increase speed from the present 8-10 mph average to 20.

Training, testing new vessels and techniques continue daily at the vast base here.

Small jet boats with a draft of less than two feet are being shaken down for use in the shallow Viet Nam waterways. They will be commanded by a petty officer—in some cases a third class boatswain.

SEAL training continues—a program the Navy is readying for full exposure in the immediate future.

Air cushion vehicles that go 60 mph over water and land. And more.

"If we don't do it, then it doesn't get done," is a good motto for the Pacific Amphibious Forces.

Briton Tells Plan to Update Ports

By JACK BALDWIN

By decreasing the number of employers and by closing down some British ports, Great Britain hopes to increase employment of its casual dock labor force —longshoremen, as they are known in America.

This seeming incongruity was expressed this week by Sir William Garrett, member of Britain's National Docks Modernization Commission, while on an inspection tour of the Port of Long Beach.

Sir William, knighted by the Crown in 1958 for services on behalf of the United Kingdom's industrial complex, said unsteady employment among longshoremen is created by too many individual employers.

"We hope to persuade the employers to merge, thus forming a single parent company that would do all the hiring," he said.

* * * *

"BY REDUCING the number of dock employers, for example, in London alone from 467 to 45 and Liverpool from 417 to 11, through mergers, the commission hopes to achieve in each port a permanent force of steadily employed dock workers serving all docks," he added.

Sir William claims the commission's recommendations have the blessing of labor.

"In fact, the commission is composed of 19 members; eight from the employers, eight from the labor unions and three independent members," he pointed out.

The British visitor added that the commission had no relatory powers and could accomplish its goals only through persuasion that the program would benefit both employers and labor.

SIR WILLIAM stated the commission will direct a $500 million program aimed at modernizing all of England's ports, including London, to meet shipping needs of the future.

During the six year undertaking, 18 English seaports will be affected, including one to be declared obsolete with the recommendation it be shut down entirely as a port. "Our goal is to provide dock workers with a steady 40-hour week and to raise the average pay of $50 per week up to at least $60," the British commissioner said.

Among other benefits the labor force might enjoy under the modernization plan—would be the instigation of "sick pay and pension schemes" the visiting official stated.

Sir William's tour included an inspection of the containerization handling facilities of Sea-Land Co. in Long Beach and the Matson Navigation Co. facilities in the Port of Los Angeles.

* * * *

HE SAID THAT at present there is no similar type of operation in England. He added however that the techniques used here would be examined under a program designed to create the world's first experimental dock at Tilbury.

Executives Install Leaders

Attorney Alfred D. Williams was installed president of the Long Beach Executives Assn. Saturday night in the Starlight Room of the Lafayette Hotel.

Master of Ceremonies John McKennon, general manager of the Lafayette, cited Jack N. Cochrane, outgoing president, for his leadership during the past year. Gordon McClenathen was also praised for his work in organizing the 44th annual installation dinner.

Installed with Williams were Weckford Morgan, first vice president; Leon Frazer, second vice president, and Norm Scott treasurer.

Other members of the board of directors are William Davis, Glen Sadler, Glen Hunter, Lamont Davis and Cochrane.

Williams was admitted to the bar in 1951 and has practiced here since that time. He and his wife, Betty, have three children. They live at 6454 Los Santos Dr.

Braden Raps Rafferty's Aide on Teacher's Play

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The president of the State Board of Education Saturday night accused a top aide of Dr. Max Rafferty of using "words far more embarassing" than those contained in a San Diego teacher's controversial play.

Thomas W. Braden chided the California Association of School Librarians for not defending Mrs. Geri Turner Davis whose teaching credential was threatened with revocation by a committee headed by Dr. Everett T. Calvert, chief deputy superintendent of public instruction.

* * * *

THE COMMITTEE investigated Mrs. Turner's one-act play, "A Cat Called Jesus," two months ago but found no adequate legal basis for stripping her of her credential. Calvert labeled the play "vulgar" and warned her not to write such things in the future.

"The other day a teacher who wrote a play was publicly rebuked for doing so — and in words far more embarassing than any in her play —by a man who holds of all things the post of chief deputy superintendent of public instruction," Braden, a candidate for lieutenant governor, said in remarks prepared for the association's 25th annual conference.

"The other day in Marin County, a book recommended by teachers of English for reading by superior students was banned from school library shelves because of the protests of the uninformed and by those who do not read.

"Where was your association?" he asked.

* * * *

BRADEN said it was the group's "chief business" to step into "public quarrels about books and the freedom of writers to write."

"If you who guard the written word will not defend the freedom to write and read, can you expect that freedom to be defended by the ignorant, by those who do not read or by the man who holds the post of chief deputy superintendent of public instruction," he said.

Orange County's Budget Requests at $115 Million

By BOB GEIVET

Budget requests totaling $115,209,606 have been filed with the Orange County Board of Supervisors by heads of the several county departments and will be up for review next month.

The total requests are for $16,551,264 more than the supervisors authorized for them this fiscal year.

County Administrative Officer David G. Hitchcock said that he will start reviewing the budget requests Monday and then will begin meeting with the department heads individually on April 26.

* * * *

SUPERVISORS begin hearings May 5, continuing them through May 20. By that time, Hitchcock will have pared down some of the requests — and possibly expanded others — and the supervisors will have the final say.

The board must adopt the budget by June 8, but has until July 14 for any final adjustments.

Only the Building Services Department cut its budget figure under that of the current fiscal year. Robert E. Thomas, the chief, asked for $2,101,160, or $169,000 less than his present operating budget.

The Welfare Department budget sliced $2 million off its programs by asking $21,081,300, but this was chiefly by a change in bookkeeping and does not necessarily reflect any savings, Hitchcock said.

Both the Orange County General Hospital and the County Road Department proposed budget increases of $2.5 million — and both of them represent "outside sources of funds" they'll spend.

The hospital budget is proposed at $10,771,006, and the road budget at $15,249,225.

Next largest increase would be an additional $1.1 million for welfare administration; it asked $3,742,195 for next fiscal year.

Requested budgets, and their increases, for other departments:

Assessor, $2,030,766, up $96,000; district attorney, $1,664,086, up $300,000; sheriff, $3,240,548, up $250,000; probation $2,732,331, up $500,000; juvenile hall, $1,201,379, up $300,000; building, $1,107,835, up $50,000; health, $2,512,859, up $510,000; refuse disposal, $1,780,740, up $17,000; and all others totaling $24,130,307 to show over-all increase of $4 million for them.

The county library budget, which does not apply to the entire county, was set at $2,456,030, up $300,000.

Structural fire protection by the County Fire Department, which is extended only to a portion of the county, would cost $40,000 more for a total of $344,562.

Supervisors asked for $3 million more in the capital projects budget, proposing to raise it to $11,369,875. They also proposed to add $1.5 million to the accumulative capital outlay budget, for a total of $3,799,372.

The fund for retiriment for county employes would be pegged at $2,684,457 next year, an increase of $160,000.

Boldnesian Makes The 'Saber' Dance

Kentucky-bred Boldnesian held off a second effort drive by Saber Mountain Saturday to win the 29th running of the $141,900 Santa Anita Derby.

Jockey Walter Blum in a skillful ride got Boldnesian under the wire two lengths in front of Saber Mountain, with Exhibitionist third as 56,624 fans roared in excitement.

Exhibitionist was third in the field of the dozen 3-year-olds, with a long shot, Fleet Shoe, fourth.

The victory was worth $96,900 to Boldnesian's owner, William Haggin Perry, while Howard B. Keck's Saber Mountain, unbeaten in five straight races before this one, had to settle for $20,000.

Ironically, the winning Bold Ruler colt was not nominated for either the Kentucky Derby nor the Preakness, the first two gems of racing's triple crown.

Owner Perry commented sadly he could kick himself for failing to nominate Boldnesian for the Kentucky classic.

"We just didn't think we had a derby colt when the nominations had to be sent in for the Kentucky Derby," he said. "If you want the honest truth, I'm kicking myself. I've never had a horse in the Kentucky Derby."

Trainer Jim Maloney said that Boldnesian had not raced as a 2-year-old because he was a big and ungainly colt and suffered shin splints.

The trainer was high in his praise of the ride given Boldnesian by jockey Walter Blum who took advantage of an opening on the rail heading into the turn although he had to move quicker than he desired.

"After my horse got to the front, he dug in and really ran game," Blum said. "I though I was a winner from the time I got the lead. I never saw Saber Mountain and Willie Shoemaker."

The usually taciturn Shoemaker, had no excuses for Saber Mountain's first defeat, declaring, "he just flat got beat. My horse made another run at that winner in midstretch but then started to hang."

With the Kentucky Derby not in Boldnesian's plans, Perry said the colt would be shipped to New York soon for the spring meeting and some of the rich eastern stakes for 3-year-olds.

The time for the 1¼ miles was 1:48 2-5, well back of the Derby record of 1:47 flat set last year by Lucky Debonair.

* * * *

IT WAS a rousing struggle down the stretch between Boldnesian, the second betting choice, and the favorite, Saber Mountain.

Two weeks ago Boldnesian demonstrated his speed in an overnight race which he won by 10 lengths, while Saber Mountain's unblemished record and victory Feb. 22 in the San Felipe Handicap set the scene for Saturday's run for the money.

It was the first encounter between the two front finishers, and the outcome halted the $100,000 stakes string by Bill Shoemaker, Saber Mountain's rider.

Blum, never far out of it behind the pace setting Ri Tux, got through on the inside near the far turn, passed the tiring speed horse and then Saber Mountain.

* * * *

FROM THERE on in, it was mostly a battle between Boldnesian and the Saber, but Mrs. Ethel L.

SC Thumps UCLA in Lung-Busting Relays

By JOHN DIXON

UCLA may be ranked as the nation's No. 1 collegiate team in Westwood, but that's just about the only place.

USC administered the Uclans a fearsome thumping Saturday in the silver anniversary Long Beach Relays. Analyzing the square root of the spikes, and other pertinent data, there are more thumpings ahead for the saucy Bruins.

"Yes, we had some bright spots," USC coach Vern Wolfe nodded.

He was correct. Bright spots such as the 100, shotput, discus, 880 relay, mile relay, two-mile relay, all won by the Terrific Trojans.

UCLA's bright spots were the sprint medley and distance medley relays and three-mile run.

It was a long, long day at the track. More than 1,600 gladiators, as garish as a Van Gogh Paris poster, clogged the infield of Veterans Stadium so thoroughly it looked as though a people main had broken.

The meet sparkled through eight hours and 17 records in weather so crisp and clear that Mt. Baldy resembled a giant marshmallow sundae.

Let's see, that's two records per hour.

The crowd of 3,500 was enthusiastic. The meet commenced at 9:30 a.m., and at 5:15 the 62 lung-busters in the three-mile exhaustion exam were drawing cheers.

The day's major achievement wasn't a record, only a tie. Lennox Miller of the Trojan frosh did it, a 9.4 100-yard dash against a 10-mile-per-hour wind. At least that's how the AAU badge-wearers credited the lanky Jamaican.

Miller thus deadheated the oldest record in the Relays book, the 9.4 world record 100 by Clyde Jeffrey of Stanford at Stephens Field in 1940.

The meet's only other antique was eradicated when Don Shy of San Diego State won the high hurdles in 14.0 with an aiding breeze of four mph, within the legal limit by a hair.

Other achievements of national note included Frank Covelli's 251-7½ javelin fling, Pasadena Athletic Assn.'s 40.8 440 relay, a relay double of 4:02.3 mile and 1:49.8 880 by UCLA's brilliant Bobby Day, 188-4½ discus throw by Gary Carlsen of USC, who must have transmitted his achin' back to his opponents, and a 13:34.6 Relays and UCLA record three-mile by Geoffrey Pyne.

This was not the best day in Long Beach State athletic annals.

But it wasn't the worst, either, for the 49ers got victories from Frank Harris, 9.9 in a 100 section; Gary Ordway, 172-10 discus, and Vince Sweetser, 10:14.0 steeplechase. Sweetser must have learned a lot about water jumps when he won the Beach Run.

Ordway also took third in the shotput at 54-2¾ and third in the hammer throw at 145-4½.

San Diego State and Redlands clearly were superior in the college class.

Long Beach City College was impressive with close-up finishes in almost every event. Cedric Rambo won a 100 section in 10.4 against the wind, Roy Thurman won the shot at 52-8½, Larry Freeman finished second in the open triple jump at 47-7¾ and third in the high jump at 6-4.

Jordan, Lakewood and Poly dominated high school competition.

Poly got two victories—both at record distances — from big John Hubbell, 63-10 in the shot, 166-2 in the discus.

Jordan and Lakewood figured in closest race of the three-score conducted.

An outstanding early season 1:58.4 880 by Terry Ascherin of the Lancers edged Jon Jones of Jordan, who anchored the Panthers in 1:59.2, by the length of a gnat's eyelash. Both were stopwatched in 8:04.4.

The day's feature event, the two-mile relay, was an upset only in that USC looked like the winner from the starter's pistol to tape bend.

USC and UCLA rank one-two in the country, and judging from the way they ran Saturday the

Williams Rips 1st Cub HR; Banks Wins

1,800 on Hand At Intrasquad; Go Again Today

By AL LARSON

Has Leo Durocher spawned two more future managers?

With 10 of his pupils currently managing major league clubs this season, Leo the Lion turned his whip over to Ernie Banks and Ron Santo as the Cubs played the first of a series of intrasquad games at Blair Field.

It was like old times for Cub followers as Billy Williams ripped a 375-foot home run over the right-field line and Banks stroked a first at-bat double for the day's first run.

However, Byron Browne's soft single in the bottom of the seventh inning finally settled matters as Banks' Battlers rallied to edge Santo's Sluggers, 6-5.

With 1,800 in attendance, the game was called after seven innings because Long Beach State College also had a game scheduled.

The squads renew festivities at Blair Field today at noon. There is no admission

NAMED to work three innings each today were Ernie Broglio, Lee Meyers, Billy Hoeft, Bob Humphreys, Larry Jackson, Bill Hands and Ken Holtzman.

Durocher even went so far as to tab his starting pitchers for next weekend's exhibition games against the Angels at Palm Springs. Broglio, Dave Dowling and Sterling Slaughter are scheduled to work Saturday while Hands, Holtzman and Paul Jaeckel will pitch Sunday.

The Cubs play seven spring games on the road, then return to Long Beach for a six-game stretch.

"For their first time out, the young kids did pretty good," Leo said afterward. "We made two big mental errors, something I hope we can correct this season.

"One occurred when Campbell (Hugh) didn't chase Covington (Wes) back to second the minute he got the ball. Instead, during the ensuing rundown, it allowed Boccabella (John) to take second

Twogie Farewell Not Happy One

By JEROME HALL

If the UCLA basketball team could play every game the way it plays against the USC Trojans, the UCLA basketball team would be going for a third consecutive national championship in the NCAA tournament the next two weekends.

But the Bruins are all through for the season, but it will be the ball-hogging Oregon State Beavers that will carry the AAWU banner that has fluttered on high, dominating collegiate basketball in recent seasons.

Saturday night, before a crowd of 11,345 at the L.A. Sports Arena, the Bruins applied another shellacking to the Trojans, the fourth this season and the 10th in succession in this throbbing intra-city rivalry.

The score was 99-62.

It was the farewell game for coach Forrest Twogood, the end of a 37-year coaching career and only the third time in his 16 seasons at USC that his team has lost more games than it won. The Trojans record this season was 13-14.

For fallen Bruins, who figure to rise again next season with the addition of giant Lew Alcindor & Co. to the varsity, the record was 18 wins and 8 losses, with a 10-4 conference mark that was good for undisputed second place.

USC's conference record was 6-8.

John Block, the conference scoring champion, closed his career with 20 points. He averaged 27 points in AAWU competition.

Freddie Goss of UCLA was the game's high scorer with 23.

Both teams had unusual starting lineups, following the custom of giving the honor to seniors. This worked to the advantage of USC because Fred Cassidy, who has seldom played, connected on his first four shots from long distance and the Trojans led, 12-5.

Bruin coach John Wooden quickly inserted his regulars. Within three minutes the Bruins had the lead.

It was farewell to college basketball for Kenny Washington and Doug McIntosh who were standouts on two national championship teams and it was the wind-up for Goss, who played on one.

UCLA coach John Wooden, asked if he believed the four key men on his freshman team had learned enough in their 21 victories this season to be ready for varsity play, replied: "Yes, I think so."

When questioned about the pressures of next season when the sports world will expect any team with Alcindor on it to win 'em all, Wooden replied, "We've got the type of boy who can carry such a heavy load. I would rather be on the spot when everybody thinks we should do well than to never do anything."

Both teams had unusual lineups for the season finale, following the custom of giving the honor to seniors. This worked to the advantage of USC because Fred Cassidy, who had seldom played, connected on four early field goals for a 12-5 Trojan lead.

Wooden quickly inserted his regulars. Three minutes later the Bruins were back in front.

But the Trojans fought off a collapse under the severe defensive pressure by the dethroned national

Lakers Score Wild Victory

SAN FRANCISCO — Jerry West's three free throws in the final 43 seconds, two following his clutch steal, gave the Lakers a 125-123 victory over San Francisco here Saturday night and further dimmed the Warriors hopes of making the playoffs.

It was a wild game in which both Fred Schaus and Darrall Imhoff of the Lakers were ejected and the verdict wasn't decided until the last few seconds.

The victory, their sixth in eight tries against the Warriors, gave the Lakers a six-game lead over runner-up Baltimore and reduced their magic number for clinching the Western Division title to three.

Baltimore and the Lakers play tonight at 7:05 in the L.A. Sports Arena.

Two key baskets by Elgin Baylor gave the Lakers a 122-120 lead with 1:08 left, then after Paul Neumann hit a free throw for San Francisco, West matched it for the Lakers at 0:43.

Then with 32 seconds left, West stole the ball from Neumann, drove for the basket and was fouled by Guy Rodgers. His two charity tosses wrapped it up, even though McCoy McLemore's two-pointer and Walt Hazzard's poor judgement almost cost the Lakers a win.

Hazzard, who topped all scorers with 30, was dribbling with 14 seconds to go and there was 15 left on the 24-second timer. He didn't need to shoot, but went for the hoop anyway and was called

'Ladies Day?'--Every Day in P-T Sports

Starting Monday, every day will be Ladies Day on the sports pages of the Press-Telegram.

That's when a humorous new cartoon feature called "Ladies Day" begins.

Women who don't know Mickey Mantle from Man O' War, baseball from badminton and think that "backfield in motion" is a snide remark about female anatomy, will now find something on the sport pages that will really interest them.

It's not only for the ladies because men can also depend on a daily laugh from "Ladies Day." This feature depicts what happens when women (or anyway some women) invade the field of sports.

'Cosmic Swing' a Bust at Blair

There's good news for the Dodgers' Buzzie Bavasi today: Jack Barron's self-styled "space age breakthrough" of baseball has flopped.

Barron's "cosmic swing" struck out at Blair Field Thursday as Jack's son, Bill, 29, failed to pass his test with the Chicago Cubs. The reason that the news should please Bavasi is because the Barrons have plagued the Dodger g.m. for years to utilize facilities of the Barron Method Laboratory, which features a "cosmic swing", the "astronaut pitch" and "space age balance".

Buzzie told the Barrons to get lost and the Barrons never have let Mr. Bavasi forget the slight. In their own publication, which is published at indefeinite times, the Barrons have ripped Bavasi as though the man were an old shirt.

A few days before the Cubs arrived in Long Beach, both Barrons visited me in the office. Their enthusiasm knew no bounds.

"My son, Bill, finally gets his chance to show the people who advocate horse-and-buggy baseball — and that's just about everybody in baseball today — that they're wrong," chirped papa Jack.

"And it took a big man like Leo Durocher to give my boy his chance to show that our method laboratory principles do work. Leo owed us this favor because I got him his job with the Cubs. I also got Eddie Stanky his with the White Sox and Alvin Dark his spot with Kansas City.

"Long Beach will be lucky, too, because here the moment of truth will be known. My son, through use of our principles, is a better pitcher than Sandy Koufax and a better hitter than Willie Mays."

BILL BARRON didn't get the chance to show if he was a better pitcher than Koufax, but he did demonstrate that he is NOT a better hitter than Willie Mays.

When the Cosmic Twins turned up at Blair Field Thursday, Durocher let Bill suit up and take some swings off rookie Bob Paarlberg, 20, who pitched for Quincy (!) and Treasure Valley (!) last season.

"The old man has been after me three months and the only way I could shut him up was to let the kid get in the batting cage," said Durocher.

Bill was less than a smashing success. He did hit one shot up the middle that would have been a single. Otherwise, all he did was pop up or foul the pitches into the cage.

WHEN ERNIE BANKS jumped into the batting cage and hit the first pitch off the wall, Bill Barron told Leo: "I could do that, too, if I had been out here all four days."

Durocher's reply: "I've got news for you. Banks could have done that the minute he got out of bed last winter."

Papa Jack came out onto the field and tried to talk with Durocher, but Leo told him that he didn't have the time.

Approached a few hours later at the Edgewater Inn, Leo was asked his analysis of the cosmic experiment.

"I can tell you in two words, Mr. Hollingworth," snorted Leo the Lion, "FORGET IT!"

Aw, Leo, now isn't that a heckuva way to talk about the program of the man who secured your job?

BEFORE THE FRUITLESS experiment, Papa Barron had some strong words about baseball in general. Labelled "a 24-karat diamond kook from Los Angeles (where else but)" by a Chicago writer last October, Barron Senior said he could not get his son a job in baseball because baseball is a business posing as a sport.

"Baseball has its own Cosa Nostra. This baseball syndicate even bans my revolutionary bat, which helps with the cosmic swing."

Subsequently, Jack Barron tells me, a column I had written about his bat was responsible for making the item recognized throughout baseball. All I wrote was that Jack came into the office last year, swung the bat a few times and almost knocked off the heads of three fellows on the staff. It also dented a filing cabinet and currently is in the hands of our Al Larson, a noted softballer.)

CONTINUED BARRON: "I list all of the baseball owners and officials in three categories — the puppet owners, puppet chiefs and syndicate operators. Mr. Bavasi is the only one who is listed in two classifications. Look at Bavasi's letter to me, which I have reprinted in my book, 'The Unreachables,' which tells lots about hitting and civil rights, too.

Bavasi's letter, in part says he is not interested in Bill and please leave him (Bavasi) alone.

"Do not worry," concluded the undaunted Mr. Barron, "I have called the whole matter to the attention of J. Edgar Hoover, Lyndon Johnson and Walter Winchell. With those people on our side, Bill and Jack Barron shall some day reign with their space age baseball theories."

"Sadly, the day of recognition will have to be delayed. This space program failed to get off the ground in Long Beach.

76ers Win, Eye Lead Today

Compiled from Wire Reports

Philadelphia and Boston, heading for a collision course later on in the playoffs, battle in Beantown today on television for the NBA's Eastern Division lead.

The 76ers forced the first-place showdown with a convincing 102-85 win over the Celtics in Philadelphia's Convention Hall Saturday night.

KABC (channel 7) will televise the titanic at 11 a.m.

Wilt Chamberlain and Hal Greer each scored 27 points to bring the hustling 76ers within one-half game of the perennial world champions after trailing them by 2½ games just last week.

Cincinnati also was a winner Saturday, beating New York in overtime 149-145, but the Royals are too far back to threaten Boston and Philadelphia for the title.

The 76ers have eight remaining games, four at home, and the Celtics seven more to play, three at home.

for travelling, thus giving San Francisco a chance to tie.

The bitter setback left the Warriors 1½ games behind third-place St. Louis in their battle to make the playoffs.

San Francisco led most of the way, but Hazzard twice brought the Lakers back into contention. He came off the bench to make a three-point play with 4:30 remaining to leave his club behind only 112-111.

Less than a minute later it was 116-116, then McLemore and Guy Rodgers made back-to-back baskets.

With 2:25 to go, Rudy LaRusso sank two foul shots and Baylor made his two key baskets, the last one at 1:08 when he deflected the ball to Hazzard, got a return pass and made a lay-in.

Imhoff was thumbed out when he was called for a foul and bounced the ball off the backboard support in his anger with about 10 minutes left. Schaus joined him one minute later.

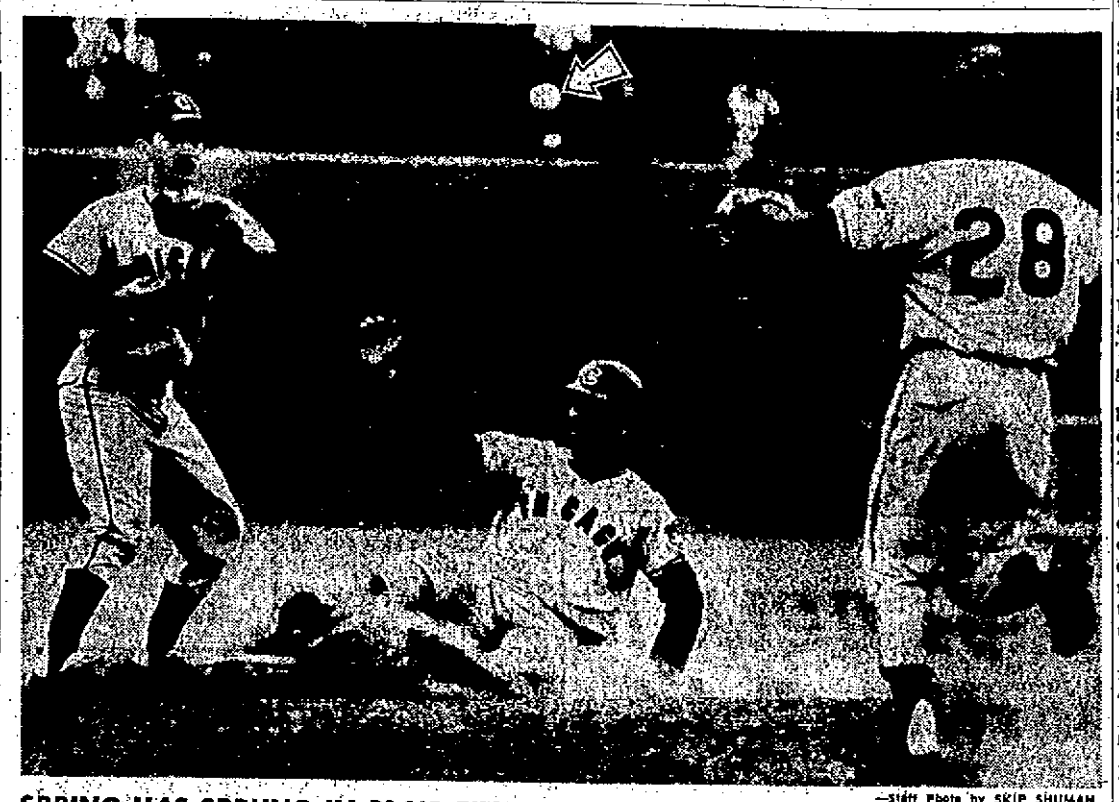
champions, and USC was leading until late in the first half when some stolen passes and ball-control errors gave the Uclans five easy baskets and a 10-point lead.

At intermission the score was 47-33 for the Bruins as they outscored USC by a 15-2 margin in the closing three minutes of the half.



Block, who earlier this year broke several school and conference scoring records, added another shortly before the Bruins explosion.

Block stole a pass and drove the length of the floor for a lay-in that boosted his season total to 646 points for USC single-season record.

The record formerly was held by all-America John Rudometkin. Block has broken five other USC shooting records this season.

STANFORD (AP)—The California Bears smothered arch-rival Stanford, 88-73, Saturday to conclude an otherwise disappointing basketball season.

California's junior center, Myron Erickson, led the attack with 21 points. Sophomore guard Russ Critchfield had 20.

The game completed the AAWU season for both teams. Despite the California victory, which reversed a 63-59 defeat by the Indians Friday night at Berkeley, the Bears still ended up in the league cellar with a 4-10 record.

Vols Spring 69-62 Upset On Wildcats

Texas Western Is Also Upset —No Unbeatens

Compiled from Wire Reports

There will be no unbeaten major college basketball teams this season.

The mighty fell with a thud Saturday as first Kentucky, then Texas Western, the only previously unbeaten teams in the nation, suffered their first setbacks.

Kentucky, which had won 25 straight games, counting a two-game carryover from the previous season, was upset by Tennessee, 69-62, in Knoxville, Tenn.

And, Saturday night Seattle University knocked over Texas Western, 74-72, in Seattle. Texas Western went into the game with a 23-0 record.

Rod Widby and Red Robbins led Tennessee's offensive charge against Kentucky with 22 and 18 points, respectively.

Kentucky lost the ball five times in the first five minutes on errant passes forced by Vol defenders and trailed throughout the first half, which Tennessee led, 31-28. However, the lead changed hands eight times in the second half.

Kentucky outshot the Vols from the floor 48.1 per cent to 41.3.

"We just made too many mistakes," Kentucky coach Adolph Rupp said afterward. "We weren't sharp." Kentucky beat the Vols last week, 78-64, on the 'Cats court. This time they played in Knoxville, Tenn.

* * * *

SEATTLE led Texas Western at halftime, 39-36, enroute to that upset.

Junior Tom Workman, who had 23 points and 16 rebounds, twice in the last six minutes put the Chieftains in front of the Texans. Seattle hit 54 percent from the floor and Texas Western 38.

Ninth ranked Nebraska was all but knocked out of the Big Eight Conference race by Colorado, 95-88. The loss left the Cornhuskers a full game behind Kansas, which earlier whipped Kansas State, 69-55.

Colorado's Chuck Gardner scored 42 points to close out his college career, setting a school record.

Mississippi State kept Vanderbilt from its best record in history by upsetting the Commodores, 92-90, on two foul shots by Paul Smith in the last seconds.

Vanderbilt thus finished its season with a 22-4 record and second to Kentucky in the Southeastern Conference.

All-America Cazzie Russell closed out his home collegiate basketball career at Ann Arbor, Mich., in a blaze of glory as he pumped home a school record 48 points in leading Michigan to a 105-92 triumph over Northwestern.

The Wolverines wrapped up their second straight Big Ten championship with the victory.

Michigan State lost all chance to battle the Wolverines for the championship Monday when it was tripped by Indiana's Hoosiers, 86-76, in Bloomington, Ind.

A 20-footer by reserve guard Paul Morenz with 11 seconds remaining gave Wisconsin a 69-68 squeaker over Purdue.

Dave Schellhase, the nation's top scorer, had given the cellar dwelling Boilermakers a one-point lead 20 seconds before the winning fielder by Morenz.

Bradley kept its hopes for a National Invitational Tournament bid alive with a 72-68 victory over St. Louis University. The Braves ended their regular season with a 20-6 record and at least a share of second place in the Missouri Valley Conference.

PAIRINGS LISTED FOR WESTERN REGIONALS

The Western Regionals of the NCAA national basketball championships, to be held next weekend at UCLA, will match the University of Pacific against the University of Utah, and Oregon State against an entry still to be decided.

The games will be played Friday and Saturday night at Pauley Pavilion with the winner advancing to the national finals at the University of Maryland March 18-19.

The fourth team will be decided by a playoff in Wichita Monday night between Colorado State University and the University of Houston.

Tickets for the games at Pauley Pavilion are available by mail from the UCLA ticket office.

Leafs Stop Hull, Hawks, 5-0

By the Associated Press

Dave Keon drilled in three goals and Bruce Gamble, Toronto's standin goalie, posted his second successive shutout as the Maple Leafs blanked Chicago, 5-0, Saturday night, dropping the Black Hawks out of first place in the National Hockey League.

The Hawks, beaten for the first time in their last four starts, fell into second position, one point behind the Montreal Canadians, who whipped Detroit, 7-2.

Gamble, called up from Toronto's Tulsa farm club earlier in the week when injuries sidelined regular goalies Johnny Bower and Terry Sawchuk as well as top standby Gary Smith, stopped 33 Chicago shots and thwarted Bobby Hull's bid for a record 51st goal.

Utilityman Jim Roberts got the Montreal attack rolling, then Jean Beliveau as the Canadians vaulted into first place.

Roberts, whose speciality is penalty killing, scored the first goal and added an assist, and Beliveau got two goals and an assist.

Idle Blades Fall Into Cellar as Seals Win, 5-4

By United Press International

Wayne Connelly's 33rd goal of the season gave the San Francisco Seals a 5-4 victory Saturday night over the first place Portland Buckaroos in a sudden-death overtime thriller.

With the victory the Seals climbed out of the Western Hockey League basement and now reside in fifth place by one point over the Blades.

Victoria exploded for four goals in less than four minutes of the second period Saturday night and went on to hand Seattle a 6-2 Western Hockey League setback.

Bob Barlow, who played with the Totems last season, paced the victory with his 29th and 30th goals.

MANNINO'S 38 NOT ENOUGH

Brubabes Romp Again

UCLA's freshman basketball team completed an unbeaten season Saturday night by waxing the USC Frosh for the second night in a row. The score was 108-74 in a game played at the L.A. Sports Arena before the two schools' varsities clashed.

The junior Trojans abandoned the stall tactics they had used in their 72-44 loss Friday night, and the quickened pace produced the night's leading scorer for USC.

Guard Vince Mannino, a 6-3 sharpshooter from Fermin Lasuen high school in San Pedro, scored 38 points, mostly on long-distance shooting.

But the game's dominant figure, as usual, was 7-foot-1½-inch Lew Alcindor. He scored 35 points, had 25 rebounds and blocked shots by the handful and prevented the USC team from playing anywhere near the basket.

This was only the second UCLA freshman team to go undefeated. The other one was the 1960-61 club which grew up to become a national championship squad three years later.

Boldnesian Makes The 'Saber' Dance

Kentucky-bred Boldnesian held off a second effort drive by Saber Mountain Saturday to win the 29th running of the $141,900 Santa Anita Derby.

Jockey Walter Blum in a skillful ride got Boldnesian under the wire two lengths in front of Saber Mountain, with Exhibitionist third as 56,624 fans roared in excitement.

Exhibitionist was third in the field of the dozen 3-year-olds, with a long shot, Fleet Shoe, fourth.

The victory was worth $96,900 to Boldnesian's owner, William Haggin Perry, while Howard B. Keck's Saber Mountain, unbeaten in five straight races before this one, had to settle for $20,000.

Ironically, the winning Bold Ruler colt was not nominated for either the Kentucky Derby nor the Preakness, the first two gems of racing's triple crown.

Owner Perry commented sadly he could kick himself for failing to nominate Boldnesian for the Kentucky classic.

"We just didn't think we had a derby colt when the nominations had to be sent in for the Kentucky Derby," he said. "If you want the honest truth, I'm kicking myself. I've never had a horse in the Kentucky Derby."

Trainer Jim Maloney said that Boldnesian had not raced as a 2-year-old because he was a big and ungainly colt and suffered shin splints.

The trainer was high in his praise of the ride given Boldnesian by jockey Walter Blum who took advantage of an opening on the rail heading into the turn although he had to move quicker than he desired.

"After my horse got to the front, he dug in and really ran game," Blum said. "I though I was a winner from the time I got the lead. I never saw Saber Mountain and Willie Shoemaker."

The usually taciturn Shoemaker, had no excuses for Saber Mountain's first defeat, declaring, "he just flat got beat. My horse made another run at that winner in midstretch but then started to hang."

With the Kentucky Derby not in Boldnesian's plans, Perry said the colt would be shipped to New York soon for the spring meeting and some of the rich eastern stakes for 3-year-olds.

The time for the 1⅛ miles was 1:48 2-5, well back of the Derby record of 1:47 flat set last year by Lucky Debonair.

* * * *

IT WAS a rousing struggle down the stretch between Boldnesian, the second betting choice, and the favorite, Saber Mountain.

Two weeks ago Boldnesian demonstrated his speed in an overnight race which he won by 10 lengths, while Saber Mountain's unblemished record and victory Feb. 22 in the San Felipe Handicap set the scene for Saturday's run for the money.

It was the first encounter between the two front finishers, and the outcome halted the $100,000 stakes string by Bill Shoemaker, Saber Mountain's rider.

Blum, never far out of it behind the pace setting Ri Tux, got through on the inside near the far turn, passed the tiring speed horse and then Saber Mountain.

FROM THERE on in, it was mostly a battle between Boldnesian and the Saber, but Mrs. Ethel L.

MILLER 9.4 AGAINST WIND

SC Thumps UCLA in Lung-Busting Relays

By JOHN DIXON

UCLA may be ranked as the nation's No. 1 collegiate team in Westwood, but that's just about the only place.

USC administered the Uclans a fearsome thumping Saturday in the silver anniversary Long Beach Relays. Analyzing the square root of the spikes, and other pertinent data, there are more thumpings ahead for the saucy Bruins.

"Yes, we had some bright spots," USC coach Vern Wolfe nodded.

He was correct. Bright spots such as the 100, shotput, discus, 880 relay, mile relay, two-mile relay, all won by the Terrific Trojans.

UCLA's bright spots were the sprint medley and distance medley relays and three-mile run.

It was a long, long day at the track. More than 1,600 gladiators, as garish as a Van Gogh Paris poster, clogged the infield of Veterans Stadium so thoroughly it looked as though a people main had broken.

The meet sparkled through eight hours and 17 records in weather so crisp and clear that Mt. Baldy resembled a giant marshmallow sundae.

Let's see, that's two records per hour.

The crowd of 3,500 was enthusiastic. The meet commenced at 9:30 a.m., and at 5:15 the 62 lung-busters in the three-mile exhaustion exam were drawing cheers.

The day's major achievement wasn't a record, only a tie. Lennox Miller of the Trojan frosh did it, a 9.4 100-yard dash against a 10-mile-per-hour wind. At least that's how the AAU badge-wearers credited the lanky Jamaican.

Miller thus deadheated the oldest record in the Relays book, the 9.4 world record 100 by Clyde Jeffrey of Stanford at Stephens Field in 1940.

The meet's only other antique was eradicated when Don Shy of San Diego State won the high hurdles in 14.0 with an aiding breeze of four mph, within the legal limit by a hair.

Other achievements of national note included Frank Covelli's 251-7½ javelin fling, Pasadena Athletic Assn.'s 40.8 440 relay, a relay double of 4:02.3 mile and 1:49.8 880 by UCLA's brilliant Bobby Day, 188-4½ discus throw by Gary Carlsen of USC, who must have transmitted his achin' back to his opponents, and a 13:34.6 Relays and UCLA record three-mile by Geoffrey Pyne.

This was not the best day in Long Beach State athletic annals.

But it wasn't the worst, either, for the 49ers got victories from Frank Harris, 9.9 in a 100 section; Gary Ordway, 172-10 discus, and Vince Sweetser, 10:14.0 steeplechase. Sweetser must have learned a lot about water jumps when he won the Beach Run.

Ordway also took third in the shotput at 54-2¾ and third in the hammer throw at 145-4½.

San Diego State and Redlands clearly were superior in the college class.

Long Beach City College was impressive with close-up finishes in almost every event. Cedric Rambo won a 100 section in 10.4 against the wind, Roy Thurman won the shot at 52-8½, Larry Freeman finished second in the open triple jump at 47-7¾ and third in the high jump at 6-4.

Jordan, Lakewood and Poly dominated high school competition.

Poly got two victories— both at record distances — from big John Hubbell, 63-10 in the shot, 166-2 in the discus.

Jordan and Lakewood figured in closest race of the three-score conducted.

An outstanding early season 1:58.4 880 by Terry Ascherin of the Lancers edged Jon Jones of Jordan, who anchored the Panthers in 1:59.2, by the length of a gnat's eyelash. Both were stopwatched in 8:04.4.

The day's feature event, the two-mile relay, was an upset only in that USC looked like the winner from the starter's pistol to tape bend.

USC and UCLA rank one-two in the country, and judging from the way they ran Saturday the

Williams Rips 1st Cub HR; Banks Wins

1,800 on Hand At Intrasquad; Go Again Today

By AL LARSON

Has Leo Durocher spawned two more future managers?

With 10 of his pupils currently managing major league clubs this season, Leo the Lion turned his whip over to Ernie Banks and Ron Santo as the Cubs played the first of a series of intrasquad games at Blair Field.

It was like old times for Cub followers as Billy Williams ripped a 375-foot home run over the right-field line and Banks stroked a first at-bat double for the day's first run.

However, Byron Browne's soft single in the bottom of the seventh inning finally settled matters as Banks' Batlers rallied to edge Santo's Sluggers, 6-5.

With 1,800 in attendance, the game was called after seven innings because Long Beach State College also had a game scheduled.

The squads renew festivities at Blair Field today at noon. There is no admission for any of the intrasquad contests, or daily workouts. Blair Field is located at 10th Street and Park Ave. in East Long Beach.

* * * *

NAMED to work three innings each today were Ernie Broglio, Lee Meyers, Billy Hoeft, Bob Humphreys, Larry Jackson, Bill Hands and Ken Holtzman.

Durocher even went so far as to tab his starting pitchers for next weekend's exhibition games against the Angels at Palm Springs. Broglio, Dave Dowling and Sterling Slaughter are scheduled to work Saturday while Hands, Holtzman and Paul Jaeckel will pitch Sunday.

The Cubs play seven spring games on the road, then return to Long Beach for a six-game stretch.

"For their first time out, the young kids did pretty good," Leo said afterward. "We made two big mental errors, something I hope we can correct this season.

"One occurred when Campbell (Hugh) didn't chase Covington (Wes) back to second the minute he got the ball. Instead, during the ensuing rundown, it allowed Boccabella (John) to take second

Twogie Farewell Not Happy One

By JEROME HALL

If the UCLA basketball team could play every game the way it plays against the USC Trojans, the UCLA basketball team would be going for a third consecutive national championship in the NCAA tournament the next two weekends.

But the Bruins are all through for the season, but it will be the ball-hogging Oregon State Beavers that will carry the AAWU banner that has fluttered on high, dominating collegiate basketball in recent seasons.

Saturday night, before a crowd of 11,345 at the L.A. Sports Arena, the Bruins applied another shellacking to the Trojans, the fourth this season and the 10th in succession in this throbbing intra-city rivalry.

The score was 99-62.

It was the farewell game for coach Forrest Twogood, the end of a 37-year coaching career and only the third time in his 16 seasons at USC that his team has lost more games than it won. The Trojans record this season was 13-14.

For fallen Bruins, who figure to rise again next season with the addition of giant Lew Alcindor & Co. to the varsity, the record was 18 wins and 8 losses, with a 10-4 conference mark that was good for undisputed second place.

USC's conference record was 6-8.

John Block, the conference scoring champion, closed his career with 20 points. He averaged 27 points in AAWU competition.

Freddie Goss of UCLA was the game's high scorer with 23.

Both teams had unusual starting lineups, following the custom of giving the honor to seniors. This worked to the advantage of USC because Fred Cassidy, who has seldom played, connected on his first four shots from long distance and the Trojans led, 12-5.

Bruin coach John Wooden quickly inserted his regulars. Within three minutes the Bruins had the lead.

It was farewell to college basketball for Kenny Washington and Doug McIntosh who were standouts on two national championship teams and it was the wind-up for Goss, who played on one.

UCLA coach John Wooden, asked if he believed the four key men on his freshman team had learned enough in their 21 victories this season to be ready for varsity play, replied: "Yes, I think so."

When questioned about the pressures of next season when the sports world will expect any team with Alcindor on it to win 'em all, Wooden replied, "We've got the type of boy who can carry such a heavy load. I would rather be on the spot when everybody thinks we should do well than to never do anything."

Both teams had unusual lineups for the season finale, following the custom of giving the honor to seniors. This worked to the advantage of USC because Fred Cassidy, who had seldom played, connected on four early field goals for a 12-5 Trojan lead.

Wooden quickly inserted his regulars. Three minutes later the Bruins were back in front.

WEST HERO, 125-123

Lakers Score Wild Victory

SAN FRANCISCO — Jerry West's three free throws in the final 43 seconds, two following his clutch steal, gave the Lakers a 125-123 victory over San Francisco here Saturday night and further dimmed the Warriors hopes of making the playoffs.

It was a wild game in which both Fred Schaus and Darrall Imhoff of the Lakers were ejected and the verdict wasn't decided until the last few seconds.

The victory, their sixth in eight tries against the Warriors, gave the Lakers a six-game lead over runner-up Baltimore and reduced their magic number for clinching the Western Division title to three.

Baltimore and the Lakers play tonight at 7:05 in the L.A. Sports Arena.

Two key baskets by Elgin Baylor gave the Lakers a 122-120 lead with 1:08 left, then after Paul Neumann hit a free throw for San Francisco, West matched it for the Lakers at 0:43.

Then with 32 seconds left, West stole the ball from Neumann, drove for the basket and was fouled by Guy Rodgers. His two charity tosses wrapped it up, even though McCoy McLemore's two-pointer and Walt Hazzard's poor judgement almost cost the Lakers a win.

Hazzard, who topped all scorers with 30, was dribbling with 14 seconds to go and there was 15 left on the 24-second timer. He didn't need to shoot, but went for the hoop anyway and was called

'Ladies Day?'--Every Day in P-T Sports

Starting Monday, every day will be Ladies Day on the sports pages of the Press-Telegram.

That's when a humorous new cartoon feature called "Ladies Day" begins.

Women who don't know Mickey Mantle from Man O' War, baseball from badminton and think that "backfield in motion" is a snide remark about female anatomy, will now find something on the sport pages that will really interest them.

It's not only for the ladies because men can also depend on a daily laugh from "Ladies Day." This feature depicts what happens when women (or anyway some women) invade the field of sports.

'Cosmic Swing' a Bust at Blair

There's good news for the Dodgers' Buzzie Bavasi today: Jack Barron's self-styled "space age breakthrough" of baseball has flopped.

Barron's "cosmic swing" struck out at Blair Field Thursday as Jack's son, Bill, 29, failed to pass his test with the Chicago Cubs. The reason that the news should please Bavasi is because the Barrons have plagued the Dodger g.m. for years to utilize facilities of the Barron Method Laboratory, which features a "cosmic swing", the "astronaut pitch" and "space age balance".

Buzzie told the Barrons to get lost and the Barrons never have let Mr. Bavasi forget the slight. In their own publication, which is published at indefeinite times, the Barrons have ripped Bavasi as though the man were an old shirt.

A few days before the Cubs arrived in Long Beach, both Barrons visited me in the office. Their enthusiasm knew no bounds.

"My son, Bill, finally gets his chance to show the people who advocate horse-and-buggy baseball — and that's just about everybody in baseball today — that they're wrong," chirped papa Jack.

"And it took a big man like Leo Durocher to give my boy his chance to show that our method laboratory principles do work. Leo owed us this favor because I got him his job with the Cubs. I also got Eddie Stanky his with the White Sox and Alvin Dark his spot with Kansas City.

"Long Beach will be lucky, too, because here the moment of truth will be known. My son, through use of our principles, is a better pitcher than Sandy Koufax and a better hitter than Willie Mays."

BILL BARRON didn't get the chance to show if he was a better pitcher than Koufax, but he did demonstrate that he is NOT a better hitter than Willie Mays.

When the Cosmic Twins turned up at Blair Field Thursday, Durocher let Bill suit up and take some swings off rookie Bob Paarlberg, 20, who pitched for Quincy (I) and Treasure Valley (I) last season.

"The old man has been after me three months and the only way I could shut him up was to let the kid get in the batting cage," said Durocher.

Bill was less than a smashing success. He did hit one shot up the middle that would have been a single. Otherwise, all he did was pop up or foul the pitches into the cage.

WHEN ERNIE BANKS jumped into the batting cage and hit the first pitch off the wall, Bill Barron told Leo: "I could do that, too, if I had been out here all four days."

Durocher's reply: "I've got news for you. Banks could have done that the minute he got out of bed last winter."

Papa Jack came out onto the field and tried to talk with Durocher, but Leo told him that he didn't have the time.

Approached a few hours later at the Edgewater Inn, Leo was asked his analysis of the cosmic experiment.

"I can tell you in two words, Mr. Hollingworth," snorted Leo the Lion, "FORGET IT!"

"Aw, Leo, now isn't that a heckuva way to talk about the program of the man who secured your job?

BEFORE THE FRUITLESS experiment, Papa Barron had some strong words about baseball in general. Labelled "a 24-karat diamond kook from Los Angeles (where else but)" by a Chicago writer last October, Barron Senior said he could not get his son a job in baseball because baseball is a business posing as a sport.

"Baseball has its own Cosa Nostra. This baseball syndicate even bans my revolutionary bat, which helps with the cosmic swing."

Subsequently, Jack Barron tells me, a column I had written about his bat was responsible for making the item recognized throughout baseball. All I wrote was that Jack came into the office last year, swung the bat a few times and almost knocked off the heads of three fellows on the staff. It also dented a filing cabinet and currently is in the hands of our Al Larson, a noted softballer.)

CONTINUED BARRON: "I list all of the baseball owners and officials in three categories — the puppet owners, puppet chiefs and syndicate operators. Mr. Bavasi is the only one who is listed in two classifications. Look at Bavasi's letter to me, which I have reprinted in my book, 'The Unreachables,' which tells lots about hitting and civil rights, too.

Bavasi's letter, in part says he is not interested in Bill and please leave him (Bavasi) alone.

"Do not worry," concluded the undaunted Mr. Barron, "I have called the whole matter to the attention of J. Edgar Hoover, Lyndon Johnson and Walter Winchell. With those people on our side, Bill and Jack Barron shall some day reign with their space age baseball theories."

Sadly, the day of recognition will have to be delayed. This space program failed to get off the ground in Long Beach.

76ers Win, Eye Lead Today

Vols Spring 69-62 Upset On Wildcats

Texas Western Is Also Upset —No Unbeatens

Compiled from Wire Reports

There will be no unbeaten major college basketball teams this season.

The mighty fell with a thud Saturday as first Kentucky, then Texas Western, the only previously unbeaten teams in the nation, suffered their first setbacks.

Kentucky, which had won 25 straight games, counting a two-game carryover from the previous season, was upset by Tennessee, 69-62, in Knoxville, Tenn.

And, Saturday night Seattle University knocked over Texas Western, 74-72, in Seattle. Texas Western went into the game with a 23-0 record.

Rod Widby and Red Robbins led Tennessee's offensive charge against Kentucky with 22 and 18 points, respectively.

Kentucky lost the ball five times in the first five minutes on errant passes forced by Vol defenders and trailed throughout the first half, which Tennessee led, 31-28. However, the lead changed hands eight times in the second half.

Kentucky outshot the Vols from the floor 48.1 per cent to 41.3.

"We just made too many mistakes," Kentucky coach Adolph Rupp said afterward. "We weren't sharp." Kentucky beat the Vols last week, 78-64, on the 'Cats court. This time they played in Knoxville, Tenn.

* * * *

SEATTLE led Texas Western at halftime, 39-36, enroute to that upset.

Junior Tom Workman, who had 23 points and 16 rebounds, twice in the last six minutes put the Chieftains in front of the Texans. Seattle hit 54 percent from the floor and Texas Western 38.

Ninth ranked Nebraska was all but knocked out of the Big Eight Conference race by Colorado, 95-88. The loss left the Cornhuskers a full game behind Kansas, which earlier whipped Kansas State, 69-55.

Colorado's Chuck Gardner scored 42 points to close out his college career, setting a school record.

Mississippi State kept Vanderbilt from its best record in history by upsetting the Commodores, 92-90, on two foul shots by Paul Smith in the last seconds.

Vanderbilt thus finished its season with a 22-4 record and second to Kentucky in the Southeastern Conference.

All-America Cazzie Russell closed out his home collegiate basketball career at Ann Arbor, Mich., in a blaze of glory as he pumped home a school record 48 points in leading Michigan to a 105-92 triumph over Northwestern.

The Wolverines wrapped up their second straight Big Ten championship with the victory.

Michigan State lost all chance to battle the Wolverines for the championship Monday when it was tripped by Indiana's Hoosiers, 86-76, in Bloomington, Ind.

A 20-footer by reserve guard Paul Morenz with 11 seconds remaining gave Wisconsin a 69-68 squeaker over Purdue.

Dave Schellhase, the nation's top scorer, had given the cellar dwelling Boilermakers a one-point lead 20 seconds before the winning fielder by Morenz.

Bradley kept its hopes for a National Invitational Tournament bid alive with a 72-68 victory over St. Louis University. The Braves ended their regular season with a 20-6 record and at least a share of second place in the Missouri Valley Conference.

for traveling, thus giving San Francisco a chance to tie.

The bitter setback left the Warriors 1½ games behind third-place St. Louis in their battle to make the playoffs.

San Francisco led most of the way, but Hazzard twice brought the Lakers back into contention. He came off the bench to make a three-point play with 4:30 remaining to leave his club behind only 112-111.

Less than a minute later it was 116-116, then McLemore and Guy Rodgers made back-to-back baskets.

With 2:25 to go, Rudy LaRusso sank two foul shots and Baylor made his two key baskets, the last one at 1:08 when he deflected the ball to Hazzard, got a return pass and made a lay-in.

Imhoff was thumbed out when he was called for a foul and bounced the ball off the backboard support in his anger with about 10 minutes left. Schaus joined him one minute later.

champions, and USC was leading until late in the first half when some stolen passes and ball-control errors gave the Uclans five easy baskets and a 10-point lead.

At intermission the score was 47-33 for the Bruins as they outscored USC by a 15-2 margin in the closing three minutes of the half.

Block, who earlier this year broke several school and conference scoring records, added another shortly before the Bruins explosion.

Block stole a pass and drove the length of the floor for a lay-in that boosted his season total to 646 points for USC single-season record.

The record formerly was held by all-America John Rudometkin. Block has broken five other USC shooting records this season.

Cal Bears Trounce Indians, 88-73

STANFORD (AP)—The California Bears smothered archrival Stanford, 88-73, Saturday to conclude an otherwise disappointing basketball season.

California's junior center, Myron Erickson, led the attack with 21 points. Sophomore guard Russ Critchfield had 20.

The game completed the AAWU season for both teams. Despite the California victory, which reversed a 63-59 defeat by the Indians Friday night at Berkeley, the Bears still ended up in the league cellar with a 4-10 record.

STANFORD finished in third place with a 8-6 record.

In the final 20 minutes, it was all California as guards Critchfield and Jim Ashcraft forced their Stanford counterparts into numerious ball control errors.

The Indians were led by senior co-captain Ray Kosanke, center, who scored 19 points.

Leafs Stop Hull, Hawks, 5-0

By the Associated Press

Dave Keon drilled in three goals and Bruce Gamble, Toronto's standin goalie, posted his second successive shutout as the Maple Leafs blanked Chicago, 5-0, Saturday night, dropping the Black Hawks out of first place in the National Hockey League.

The Hawks, beaten for the first time in their last four starts, fell into second position, one point behind the Montreal Canadians, who whipped Detroit, 7-2.

Gamble, called up from Toronto's Tulsa farm club earlier in the week when injuries sidelined regular goalies Johnny Bower and Terry Sawchuk as well as top standby Gary Smith, stopped 33 Chicago shots and thwarted Bobby Hull's bid for a record 51st goal.

Utilityman Jim Roberts got the Montreal attack rolling, then Jean Beliveau as the Canadians vaulted into first place.

Roberts, whose speciality is penalty killing, scored the first goal and added an assist, and Beliveau got two goals and an assist.

Idle Blades Fall Into Cellar as Seals Win, 5-4

By United Press International

Wayne Connelly's 33rd goal of the season gave the San Francisco Seals a 5-4 victory Saturday night over the first place Portland Buckaroos in a sudden-death overtime thriller.

With the victory the Seals climbed out of the Western Hockey League basement and now reside in fifth place by one point over the Blades.

Victoria exploded for four goals in less than four minutes of the second period Saturday night and went on to hand Seattle a 6-2 Western Hockey League setback.

Bob Barlow, who played with the Totems last season, paced the victory with his 29th and 30th goals.

MANNINO'S 38 NOT ENOUGH

Brubabes Romp Again

UCLA's freshman basketball team completed an unbeaten season Saturday night by waxing the USC Frosh for the second night in a row. The score was 108-74 in a game played at the L.A. Sports Arena before the two schools' varsities clashed.

The junior Trojans abandoned the stall tactics they had used in their 72-44 loss Friday night, and the quickened pace produced the night's leading scorer for USC.

Guard Vince Mannino, a 6-3 sharpshooter from Fermin Lasuen high school in San Pedro, scored 38 points, mostly on long-distance shooting.

But the game's dominant figure, as usual, was 7-foot-1½-inch Lew Alcindor. He scored 35 points, had 25 rebounds and blocked shots by the handful and prevented the USC team from playing anywhere near the basket.

This was only the second UCLA freshman team to go undefeated. The other one was the 1960-61 club which grew up to become a national championship squad three years later.

UCLA (108)		USC (74)
Shackelford (17)	F	Clemo (2)
Taylor (4)	F	Klein (2)
Alcindor (35)	C	Taylor (4)
Allen (22)	G	Mannino (38)
Heitz (20)	G	Blesich (18)

Halftime score: UCLA 48, USC 35.
UCLA subs: Newell (4), Simmons (4), Lincoln (2).
USC subs: Harmon (2), Menneely (4), Nungesser (4).

RICH ROBERTS

Just a Guy Named Joe

"I think I know my spot on this team. I'm a swing man. I play when somebody gets hurt or in a slump, and then I play until I play myself out."—Joe Amalfitano of the Chicago Cubs.

It's easy to play major league baseball when you hit .300 and know without looking that your name is scribbled on that lineup card taped to the wall of the dugout.

It's not so easy when you're Joe Amalfitano . . . a swing man, a utility man or whatever you choose to call the little man who's always there but not so anybody would know it.

Joe has spent more time in dugouts than Willie Sutton spent in prison, and has felt approximately the same about it. Where he has callouses, he'll never need sliding pads.

Managers can't remember his name and linotype operators can't make it fit in a box score, but the job does have its compensations. He leads the league in splinters and sees more games free than the commissioner.

And, like he says, he gets to play with the other guys when somebody gets hurt or slumpy or maybe even a little tired in the second game of a doubleheader on a hot day.

OR, IF HE'S LUCKY, he'll be sitting on the bench in the ninth inning of a cold night, frozen to the joints and waiting for the third out so he can go get warm, when the skipper calls his name.

There's Amalfitano, frozen stiff in the dugout, and there's Koufax, out on the mound with a good sweat going, curve ball just an optical illusion and his fast ball coming across about the same time the catcher gives the sign.

"One time I was called upon to pinch hit and the manager called me by the wrong name," Joe recalls wryly. "That's kind of encouraging, y' know.

"He called me Aspromonte and I didn't move. I just sat there. Then he called me again and I didn't move. Finally he came up and said, 'Don't y' wanta hit?' I says, 'Sure, I'll hit.' He says, 'Get a bat.' I says, 'Get a scorecard.'

"Aspromonte was there two years ago and we're both Italian, so he must have forgot. It was in the heat of battle, y' know. So after I made out I asked him, 'See if you can put that on Aspromonte's record'."

IT'S AMALFITANO'S lot to have been the 26th out in Koufax' perfect game against the Cubs at Dodger Stadium last season. He didn't even have the distinction of being the 27th.

"If it's a cold night and I see I'm gonna hit I'll try to get my hands warm," Joe says. "But there's other nights when Koufax pitches you hide.

"I knew he had a perfect game going and I knew I was 2-for-2 off him pinch hitting prior to that time. I should have quit. I knew I was fighting the law of averages going up there. And he knew it, too, because he was agitatin' me before the game.

"Well, he was gettin' his curve ball over pretty good so I says, 'He's gonna start me with a curve . . . and that was the biggest mistake I made. By the time the thought registered in my head that it was a fast ball it was in Torborg's glove."

Sparing the details, Joe struck out, although he did feel pretty good about fouling one off.

HE'S HAD MORE glorious times, like in '61 and '62 with the Giants when he took over at second base because somebody else got hurt (naturally) and, batting second, thoroughly enjoyed getting on base with a consistent bat and scoring runs for Willie Mays.

"I've done that," he says wistfully, "but then I come back to spring training and I never have the job. It's somebody else's job.

"I must be looked upon in that respect and I guess I'm not gonna change it. That's one thing about this game. They form opinions of you and they usually stick.

"Don't get me wrong, though. I'm very happy. Leo likes to move people around a lot, and if somebody's not going good he's not going to be in there. Maybe I will."

The fact that Amalfitano is starting his eighth year in the majors without every really having a job to call his own indicates that somebody up there likes him. The Houston Astros liked Joe enough in 1963 to pay $125,000 for him in the draft.

"I'll have to go out and get more life insurance," he said at the time. "I didn't know I was worth that much."

For that matter, Amalfitano says, "I'm like an insurance policy. Some guy gets hurt, I can go in for a week or a month and I'm not going to embarrass anybody. You never know . . . you may get lucky and you may just stay in there the rest of the year."

Seagren Hits 17-1 in AAU Indoor Meet

49er Track Club Speeds to 2-Mile Mark; Gals Excel

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Bob Seagren became the first indoor pole vaulter to go over the 17-foot mark in the final event Saturday night of the 1966 National AAU Indoor Track and Field Championships, going 17-1¼.

The previous indoor record was held by Pennel, a 16-10 vault in a Los Angeles indoor meet earlier this year.

The 49er Track Club from Long Beach sped to a 7.27.4 mark in the men's two-mile, bettering the mark of 7.28.2 by Villanova University in 1965.

Four women's indoor records were broken and six AAU meet records fell before a crowd of 11,673 at Albuquerque's Tingley Coliseum.

The near-capacity crowd watched Tennessee State's Edith McGuire break the indoor record in the 220 at 24.1 seconds and Wyomia Tyus set an indoor mark at 6.5 in the 60-yard dash.

ART WALKER of the Striders bettered his own record in an exhibition triple jump. He hopped, skipped and jumped to 54-0¼. His previous mark was 54-0.

VILLANOVA'S HOLD BROKEN

Terrapins Clinch IC4A Title

NEW YORK (UPI) — Maryland's Atlantic Coast Conference champions clinched their first IC4A indoor track and field championship and three meet records fell Saturday night before a crowd of 9,144 at Madison Square Garden.

Maryland, already the IC4A outdoor title holder, broke Villanova's four-year stranglehold on the indoor crown on the strength of four gold medals picked up by high-jumper Frank Costello, (16-10); long jumper Ed Marks, (24-10¾), shot-putter Ernie Hearon (57-7½), and pole-vaulter Tom Gagner (15-4).

But the meet records went to other stars. Dave Hemery, a Boston U. sophomore from England, turned in a 7.1 clocking in a trial heat of the 60-yard hurdles before winning the final in 7.2, Ricardo Urbina of Georgetown ran the 1,000 yards in 2:18.8 and Dave Patrick of Villanova churned the mile in 4:06.7 to upset Notre Dame's Ed Dean.

The victorious Terrapins, compiled a total of 28 points for an 11-point edge over Villanova, in second place at 17. Harvard was third with 14, followed by Georgetown with 13 and Manhattan with 12.

In addition to its four victories, Maryland scored on Jim Lee's third place in the 60-yard dash, third in the hurdles by Bruce Carson and a fourth in the pole vault by Pete Kowzun.

Other individual winners:

Tommy Farrell, St. John's, 600 in 1:11.4; Sam Perry, Fordham, 4.2 for 60-yard dash; Eamon O'Reilly, Georgetown, 1:57.8 two-mile; Manhattan's Bob Mead, 60-5¼ in 35-pound weight.

U.S., POLAND SET BERKELEY MEETING

BERKELEY (UPI) — The U.S. men's and women's track and field teams will meet Poland in a dual meet at the University of California July 16-17, it was announced Saturday.

The meet will take place one week before the U.S.-Russian track meet in Los Angeles.

The event, to be held at Edwards Field on the UC campus, will be conducted under the sponsorship of the San Francisco Examiner. It has been approved by the Amateur Athletic Union and the U.S. State Department.

At Warsaw last year, the U.S. men defeated Poland, 118-93, while the U.S. women's squad edged the Polish female team, 59-57.

Trojans Sparkle in Relays

Bruins will still be No. 2 when school lets out.

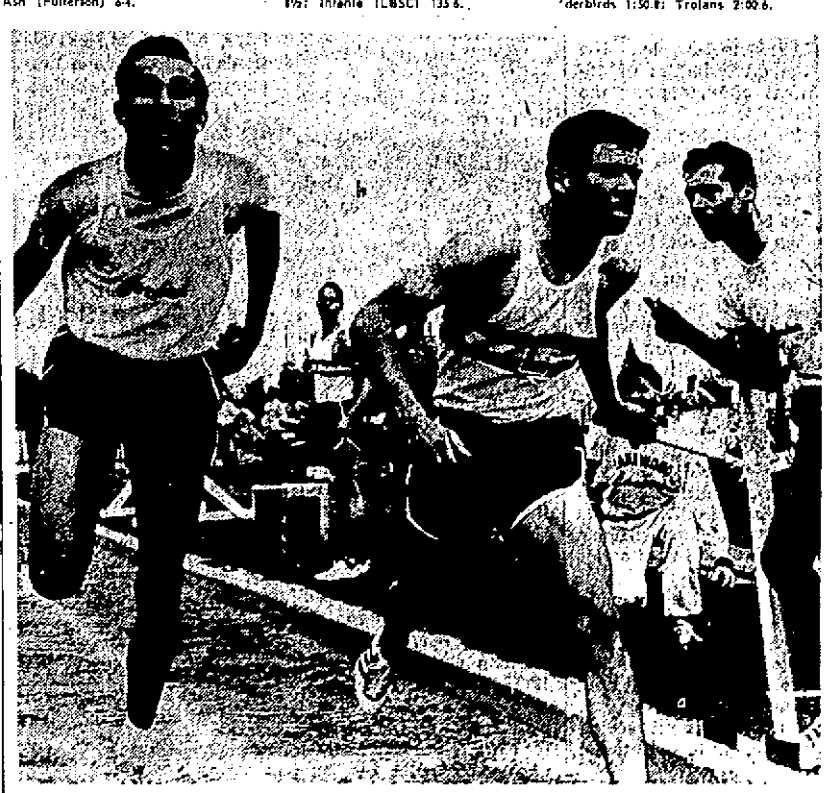
Sophomore John Link set the pattern for the University Ave. swifties. He figured third but ran first on the opening leg, passing off a yard in front of Jim Cerveny of the San Diego Track Club and three yards up on Les Fendia of UCLA. Times were Link 1:53.0, Cerveny 1:53.1 and Fendia 1:53.2.

Bruce Bess made it as certain as a 1:50.6 second leg to the 1:52.5 by Kurt Klein of UCLA, a full 12-yard advantage, as San Diego fell out of win-place contention.

But did UCLA have a chance, with co-captains Bob Day (1:46.1) and Dennis Breckow (1:48.8) coming to bat?

It didn't.

Day glided through an effortless 1:49.8, but Dave Buck maintained the advantage with 1:49.7. Still, Breckow gave it a game try.



He sliced the deficit to two yards with a 52.6 first lap to the 54.9 of Dennis Carr, and they stayed that way until the last curve, 110 yards from the payoff. Then Carr kicked like a Missouri mule and Breckow kicked as though he had thrown a horseshoe. Final margin was eight yards, times were 1:50.4 for Breckow and 1:51.2 for Carr.

USC's time of 7:24.5 will rank among the year's best when those long lists are computed at football time. UCLA also broke the meet record of 7:26.4 it established in 1965 with a 7:26.0.

Bruin coach Jim Bush was optimistically pessimistic.

"I knew we couldn't run with them at this time. Why, they've got a bunch of kids who can run 1:48 or 1:49 right now. I'm happy we were that close, disappointed we didn't run a little faster. USC really wanted this one. We'll be tough—real tough—a little later.

The 25th Long Beach Relays was one of the best of all—a strong kickoff to the track season.

THE GREAT RACE

Dozens of races were run Saturday at Long Beach Relays, but none delighted crowd more than eyelash victory for Lakewood in high school two-mile relay. Lakewood's Terry Ascherin ran 1:58.4 880 anchor leg to edge Jordan's Jon Jones (1:59.2) by grimmace.

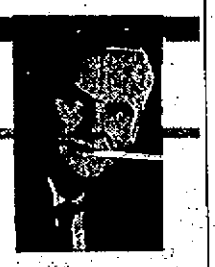
Spartans Sweep Big 10 Indoor Title

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Michigan State's Gene Washington, Clinton Jones and Bob Steele ran one-two-three in both hurdle events Saturday to amass 24 of a possible 30 points and lead the Spartans to their first Big Ten indoor track championship.

Michigan State, with victors in four of the 14 individual events, totalled 50 points for a convincing decision over Wisconsin with 38 and Iowa with 35.

Michigan was fourth with 34 points, followed by Minnesota with 22, Northwestern with 18, Illinois with 15, Indiana with 11, Ohio State with 7 and Purdue with 1.

The Spartans, who won the outdoor championship last spring, missed the indoor crown by only half a point last year with 45½ to Wisconsin's 46.



Washington, an all-conference end on the Spartan football team, was the meet's individual standout, but he was hard pressed by his football teammate, all-America halfback Jones.

Washington set one of the three conference records to fall with a clocking of 8.3 in the 70 high hurdles, eclipsing a mark set 18 years ago by Lloyd Duff of Ohio State.

Other individual winners:

Cyril Pinder, Illinois, 6.2 in 60-yard dash; Larry Wieczorek, Iowa, 4:09.7 mile; Wisconsin's Steve Whipple, 48.5 in 440; Indiana's Randall Wedder, 32.3 in 300; Mike Mondane, Iowa, 1:11.1 in 600 run; Tom Stuart, Minnesota, a 6-6 high jump; Jim Mercer, Michigan, 3:13.1 in 1,000 run; Michigan's Jack Harvey, 58-3¼ shotput; Northwestern's Jim Albrecht, 15-0 pole vault; Ken Lalonda, Wisconsin, 880 in 1:52.2; Michigan State's Dick Sharkey, record 9:01.4 in two-mile; Wisconsin took the mile relay with 3:17.0.

Fastest Bat in the League

During Leo Durocher's first session with the press when the Chicago Cubs opened spring training here last Monday, he declared, "I'll give you Willie Mays, Hank Aaron and even Mickey Mantle, crippled or not; then name me a better outfielder than Billy Williams."

Leo went on to say he wouldn't trade Williams right now for Mays . . . "and you know how I love Mays."

At 27, Billy's most productive years are still ahead of him and from what he has done so far . . . they should be great ones.

Baseball men for the past three seasons have been predicting that Williams is destined to someday win the National League batting crown.

He's been getting closer each season and last year led the Cubs with a .315 average—4th highest in the league—and 5th best in the majors—hit 34 homers and drove in 108 runs.

Blessed with quick hands and lightning wrists, Billy the Kid is said to swing "the fastest bat in the National League."

And in comparing him to Mays, one top veteran says that the Cub right fielder is a far better looking hitter than the Giant ace. "Mays just overpowers the ball," he says, "but Williams is an artist at the plate."

Dodger vice president Buzzie Bavasi is another Williams fan. "He has one of the most level swings I've ever seen," Buzzie says.

WHAT FIGURES TO BE THE biggest hurdle for the lefthand-swinging Williams to clear on the way to the batting crown?

"Putting together a good start and a good finish," he says. "So far, I've had either one or the other. If I start good, I finish slow. And if I get off to a slow start, I finish strong in the last couple of months."

Williams hit .405 through the first six weeks of the 1962 season—leading even Mays at that stage in a year when everyone figured Willie might be headed for his greatest season.

So, he has shown he can hit at a blistering pace. Now, he must strive to spread it over a longer period.

Like Mays, Williams hits in the No. 3 spot—and prefers it to any other as does Mays. "I've always hit third since I've been in baseball," Billy reveals.

He feels hitting in that spot has helped him considerably because opposing hurlers have to pitch to him more than if he perhaps batted in a lower spot.

"Pitchers can't afford to walk me," he points out, "because Ron (Santo) and Ernie (Banks) bat right behind me and they are always threats to hit a home run. So they take their chances with me and I get a greater opportunity of getting base hits."

ONLY TWO CUBS HAVE WON the National League batting title—Heinie Zimmerman in 1912 and Phil Cavaretta in 1945, the last year the club won a pennant.

Joining such select company as batting king, of course, admittedly would be nice, but Billy is more interested in team victories and the league title than personal achievements.

"I'd gladly settle for .220 if it meant the Cubs would win the pennant," he says, stressing the fact that his main ambition is to play on a championship club.

However, it is agreed by teammates and observers alike that if the Cubs win the pennant in the next few years, they would need at least .320 or more from Williams rather than .220.

On the subject of a quick upsurge by the Cubs in the pennant race this year, Billy is rather cautious, feels it might be asking too much all at once to become a serious contender—"but maybe by next year. . . "

One thing is certain, a healthy new spirit has gripped the club since Durocher took over the past winter. "We feel we have a chance to go someplace now," Billy says.

WILLIAMS IS THE LAST TOP PLAYER to be given the stamp of approval by the late Rogers Hornsby. The immortal "Rajah" was one of the great hitters of all-time—batting over .400 three times and recording the highest average in history, .424 in 1924.

Thus, Hornsby knew a little bit about the art of hitting when he looked at Williams and recommended him for immediate advancement to the Cubs.

The Cubs, wallowing in the second division as they have now for the past 20 years, were hopefully trying to build for the future in 1960 when they sent Hornsby out to look for help.

When he landed in Houston and saw Williams play only one game, he telephoned the Cub front office and suggested that they get Billy to Chicago as fast as possible because there wasn't anybody on the team then that could swing a bat nearly as good. It was silly, he told them, to keep a kid like that in the minors.

BILLY PLAYED 12 GAMES in finishing out the 1960 season with the Cubs; was the league's "Rookie of the Year" in '61 on the strength of a .278 batting average with 25 home runs and 86 RBI's, and in '62 he was named the "Sophomore of the Year" as he boosted his average to .298 . . . being over .300 until the final series of the season.

Williams was only 15 when he made a barnstorming junket with Satchel Paige and Hank Aaron in 1954, and also toured with them again in 1955 before joining the Cub organization in '56 and was assigned to Ponca City.

He never hit under .300 in the minors . . . and now that he has zeroed in on that bracket in the bigtime, it's going to be difficult for rival pitchers from keeping him from becoming the No. 1 hitter in the National League—perhaps all of baseball.

His Aim Not to Flinch in Pinch

By GEORGE LEDERER

MARSHALL

VERO BEACH, Fla. — At an age when a half-dozen ex-Dodgers tossed in the major league towel and fled to Japan, 33-year-old Jim Marshall has a chance to reverse the trend.

Marshall, a veteran of five major league clubs, is here on a trial basis after three seasons with the Nagoya Dragons of the Japanese Central League. His mission is not to flinch in the pinch.

Walter Alston is looking for a lefthanded pinch-hitter and Marshall is the No. 1 candidate for the job that was weakest in the world champions' armor.

Alston looked 62 times for a pinch hit by a lefthander last season and was disappointed 50 times. Wally Moon, who commanded $38,000 for he specialty, batted .200 as the most frequent pinch-hitter and failed in his last 22 times up after June 17.

The team pinch-hitting average was .201 and by lefthanders it was .194.

"It's a tough job, but I've done it for a couple of clubs and I hope to have the chance for this one. Pinch-hitting is a matter of mental conditioning between dugout and plate. The idea is to get a piece of the ball," says Marshall, who will try to give Alston some peace of mind.

Marshall batted .270 as a pinch-hitter for the Pirates in 1962, his last in the majors. The year before he compiled the most points among the Giants under manager Al Dark's plus-minus grading system.

"I didn't have the best average, but we earned points for advancing a runner and were docked for striking out."

Marshall might have been reunited with Dark at Kansas City this season were it not for a chance meeting three weeks ago with Dodger general manager Buzzie Bavasi.

"I saw Al during the winter and he told me to call him before spring training. Only last month I dropped in at Dodger Stadium to see my old friend Danny Goodman (Dodger concessionaire) and it was there that I met Buzzie.

"He asked me what I planned to do and I told him I'd like to stay in baseball, at least a couple more years. He told me to come back at 10 the next morning."

Marshall was prompt for the interview, which was to be brief.

"Buzzie asked only two questions. The first was, 'How are your legs?' I told him I'd missed only nine games the last three years and I'd never been hurt.

"Then he asked, 'Do you strike out much?' I said, 'No, only 39 times my last year in the majors.'

"That was it. He told me if I was willing to take a chance, so was he. I don't have a contract, but Buzzie said not to worry about money if I made the club."

Money, in the neighborhood of $30,000 a year, took Marshall to Japan, but the language barrier brought him back to his adopted home in Belmont Heights.

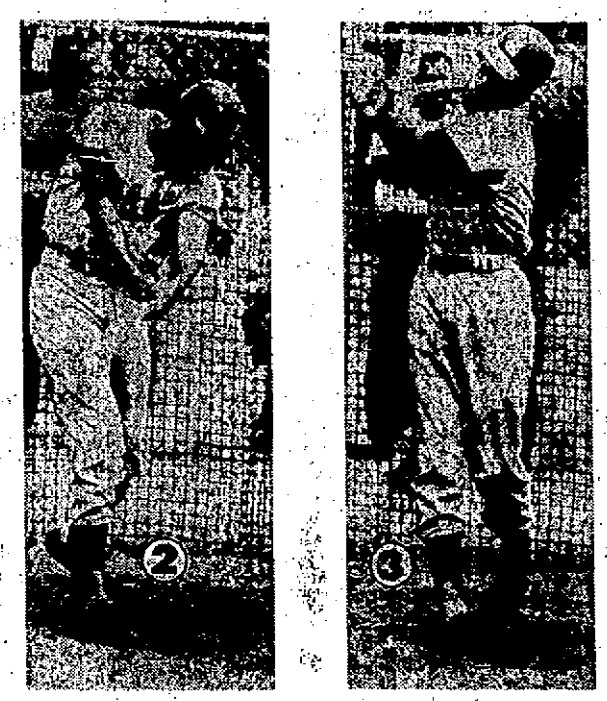
Because there are no English schools in Nagoya and only a few citizens speak English, Marshall's wife and three children established residence in Tokyo, 280 miles away.

"It can be pretty lonely when you go for three weeks without hearing a word of English.

"After a while I picked up enough Japanese to get by. I knew what they were talking about in the clubhouse meetings, which got to be monotonous.

"They had a meeting every night and talked about the same things: 'Their starting pitcher is so-and-so and he pitches this way.' All they talked about was how we could hit their pitcher. They'd never discuss how we'd pitch to them. Our signs didn't change all season."

* * * *



DIS AND DATA—Marshall hit 90 home runs and averaged .286 in his three seasons with the Dragons . . . "Japanese pitchers are of good Triple-A caliber. Their control is excellent, but they lack the velocity of a Koufax, Gibson, Maloney or Veale." . . . Japan's version of Koufax is a lefthander named Kaneda . . . He's won 20 games 14 years in a row and earns $100,000 a year, by far the most in Japan . . . The leading slugger in Japan is a fellow named Oh, . . . He led the league with 50 home runs last season and drove in 150 . . . Marshall was named most valuable player of the Japanese all-star game in 1964 . . . He averaged between 90 and 95 rbi for the three years.

ANGEL BOSS LOT LIKE 'THE LIP'

Rigney a Durocher Disciple But Manages His Own Way

By ROSS NEWHAN
I. P-T Staff Writer

PALM SPRINGS — As one of 10 Leo Durocher disciples currently managing in the major leagues, Bill Rigney was pictured in a recent issue of a national magazine.

Under the mug, Rigney analyzed this unique evolution by former members of the Lion's Den thusly:

"We figured if he can manage anyone can."

Over breakfast at Gene Autrey's Ocotillo Lodge Saturday, Rigney amended the statement.

"Hell," snapped the Angels' skipper, "Leo was lucky to have fellows like us to manage."

Besides Rigney, "the fellows" include Eddie Stanky (White Sox), Alvin Dark (A's), Charley Dressen (Tigers), Bill Herman (Red Sox), Gil Hodges (Senators), Bobby Bragan (Braves), Herman Franks (Giants), Gene Mauch (Phils) and Wes Westrum (Mets).

It is Rigney, however, who has emerged most like Durocher, combining the fire and verve of dynamic leadership with tactical shrewdness and a flair for the dramatic.

"There is no way I can believe that the game will ever pass Leo by," said Rigney, in the midst of preparing the Angels for the exhibition opener with Durocher's Cubs here March 12-13.

"I sincerely believe that he'll make the Cubs a better team. The players might not even realize it's happening, but he'll do it. And, you can bet that guys who really want to play, the hard-nosed ones, will love him."

* * * *

FROM HIS position as a sometime-starter, mostly-utility infielder, Rigney observed Durocher's methods at the Giants' helm from 1949 through 1953.

As the Giants swept to the world's championship in 1954, Rigney was in Minneapolis guiding the Millers to third place in the American Ass'n. A year later, he was the association's Manager of the Year, and a year after that he was manager of the New York Giants, replacing Leo Durocher.

"I don't feel that I owe Leo anything, but I certainly profited from playing for him," said Rigney.

"He was no doubt the best manager I ever played for and certainly the most colorful. Some things were bound to rub off.

"Many of the things I preach, I heard from Leo for the first time. The importance of an offensive out, different methods to score a man from third, the many ways to avoid a double play.

"At the same time, I knew that I'd have to manage my way, not his. It would have to be the way I felt, I couldn't substitute his feelings. Sure, we're compared because we're both explosive but I'm explosive because it's my nature, not just because Leo was explosive."

* * * *

ONE SEEKS the correlation between Durocher and the arrival of 10 of his former players among the managerial cadre. Rigney calls it "phenomenal" and credits the 1951 "Miracle of Coogan's Bluff," when the Giants ascended from a 13-game August deficit to the pennant, as directly responsible.

That team alone spawned Rigney, Dark, Westrum, Stanky and Franks, plus Larry Jansen, Whitey Lockman and Sal Maglie, who are currently coaching in the majors.

"Maybe it all started during those final weeks in '51," reflected Rigney. "We had a group of guys who loved the game in the same manner Leo did and who understood his intolerance for losing.

"Well, we got the streak going in late August and we'd get together often and talk about what we had to do tomorrow to keep it alive. Mostly it was Stanky, Dark, Maglie, Jansen and myself. Maybe Leo knew about the meetings and maybe he didn't, but he never interferred.

It is ironic that when the Angels and Cubs meet next weekend, William Joseph Rigney will find himself the American League senior manager and Leo Durocher the National League's newest.

Rig Cracks Down, Fines Star $250

PALM SPRINGS — Bill Rigney, implementing his get-tough policy, fined shortstop Jim Fregosi Saturday for violation of curfew regulations.

FREGOSI This was the first spring training fine here since 1962 when Dean Chance and Bo Belinsky were each taxed $250 for reporting late for a workout.

Fregosi refused to comment and, while Rigney would not reveal the amount, the I, P-T learned it was in the $250 neighborhood.

"As far as I'm concerned this is a closed matter," said a stern Rigney. "I simply will not tolerate curfew violations this spring. I made that clear the first day."

Fregosi, 23, signed recently for $40,000, putting him on a par with Zoilo Versalles, the league's highest salaried shortstop and the league's most valuable player.

Curfew at the Melody Ranch is midnight.

RICK REICHARDT smashed a towering home run to highlight the Angels' initial intra-squad game Saturday. The Salty Parkers, behind the three-hit pitching of Chance, John French and Dick Egan, whipped the Del Rice's, 3-0.

Reichardt, who belted his homer off Jim McGlothlin, shared hitting honors with Paul Schaal, who doubled and singled.

Chance yielded three hits and three walks in three innings while Marcelino Lopez, runnerup to Curt Blefary as Rookie of the Year, yielded two hits and one run in three frames.

"My arm was nice and loose," said Chance. "I am in better physical condition than I have ever been in this early."

Who Needs Pitching? Not Dodgers

VERO BEACH, Fla. — Oh, oh, oh those Dodgers.

Saturday's informal debut of the world champions was up to mid-season expectations: No runs, no hits, no errors.

Howie Reed, Dick Calmus and John Purdin did not allow a hit as the Danny Ozarks and Preston Gomezes played a scoreless, seven-inning intrasquad game.

"Who says we need pitching?" asked general manager Buzzie Bavasi, who refuses to budge in his salary stalemate with Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale.

Reed and Calmus each pitched three hitless innings and Purdin worked the final inning for both sides.

* * * *

THE GOMEZES managed four hits against Claude Osteen, rookie Don Sutton and Purdin. Nate Oliver had two, a single and a bad-hop double.

Sutton, a 20-year-old righthander, drew the most comment.

"I like the way he goes out there and takes command," said manager Walter Alston.

"He knows how to pitch," said pitching coach Lefty Phillips. "He reminds me of a veteran of 27 or 28."

"He looks like Larry Sherry did in 1959," said Bavasi. "He has that attitude of 'gimme the ball and I'll get 'em out.'"

—George Lederer

* * * *

DIS AND DATA—Claude Osteen, probable starter in next Saturday's exhibition opener against the Braves, allowed only a single by Al Ferrara in his three innings . . . Non-roster catcher Barry Evans got the other hit . . . Jim Marshall struck out, walked and filed out, then contributed the outstanding defensive play . . . The Ozarks' first baseman made a diving catch of Erdos' liner and turned it into a game-ending double play . . . Catcher Jeff Torborg left early because of a migraine headache. He was troubled by headaches frequently last season . . . Tommy Davis, testing his right ankle under game conditions for only the second time since he broke it last May 1, walked and filed deep to left in two turns . . . Johnny Podres, Dick Williams, Bill Singer and Phil Regan are scheduled to pitch in another squad game this afternoon.

Leo Coming In Loud, Clear

By JIM ENRIGHT
Special for the I. P-T

How would you like to tune in LEO — Leo Ernest Durocher, new manager of the Cubs?

Here's some of Durocher's verbal gems recorded before, during, and after another of the Cubs' daily drills in Blair Field:

Speaking as he watched big George Altman in the batting cage:

"George is my most pleasing surprise in camp. He's working every minute, and now I'll tell you something else he's doing. He's slashing that ball to right-center just like he used to when he first came up."

About the Cubs' collective enthusiasm in the daily drills, The Brain claimed:

"This is my 41st year in baseball, and during that time I've attended or directed a lot of spring training camps. Never, however, have I ever seen a group work harder and have more fun doing it than this squad. It's beautiful!

"I'm so pleased with the progress we've made that I thanked the fellows for their cooperation during our morning meeting."

Although Randy Hundley is regarded the best bet to win the No. 1 catcher rating, Durocher said:

"With six catchers in camp I'm going to look at all of 'em during the spring games. I'll change catchers every two or three innings just like I plan to shift pitchers."

When West Covington's name was mentioned, the Cubs' No. 1 man with the No. 2 on the back of his uniform, said:

"I've had a couple of talks with Wes. What did I tell him? I told him to retain the same mental attitude he has right now through 162 games this season, and he'll be a valuable addition to this club."

In connection with the Cubs having to play their first 12 NL games against the Giants and Dodgers this season, The Brain observed:

"Why worry about the schedule? You have to play these games sometime, and it doesn't make any difference to me whether we play 'em early or late. Don't forget—we'll start even, and then the rest is up to us."

Just a Guy Named Joe

"I think I know my spot on this team. I'm a swing man. I play when somebody gets hurt or in a slump, and then I play until I play myself out."—Joe Amalfitano of the Chicago Cubs.

It's easy to play major league baseball when you hit .300 and know without looking that your name is scribbled on that lineup card taped to the wall of the dugout.

It's not so easy when you're Joe Amalfitano . . . a swing man, a utility man or whatever you choose to call the little man who's always there but not so anybody would know it.

Joe has spent more time in dugouts than Willie Sutton spent in prison, and has felt approximately the same about it. Where he has callouses, he'll never need sliding pads.

Managers can't remember his name and linotype operators can't make it fit in a box score, but the job does have its compensations. He leads the league in splinters and sees more games free than the commissioner.

And, like he says, he gets to play with the other guys when somebody gets hurt or slumpy or maybe even a little tired in the second game of a doubleheader on a hot day.

OR, IF HE'S LUCKY, he'll be sitting on the bench in the ninth inning of a cold night, frozen to the joints and waiting for the third out so he can go get warm, when the skipper calls his name.

There's Amalfitano, frozen stiff in the dugout, and there's Koufax, out on the mound with a good sweat going, curve ball just an optical illusion and his fast ball coming across about the same time the catcher gives the sign.

"One time I was called upon to pinch hit and the manager called me by the wrong name," Joe recalls wryly. "That's kind of encouraging, y' know.

"He called me Aspromonte and I didn't move. I just sat there. Then he called me again and I didn't move. Finally he came up and said, 'Don't y' wanta hit?' I says, 'Sure, I'll hit.' He says, 'Get a bat.' I says, 'Get a scorecard.

"Aspromonte was there two years ago and we're both Italian, so he must have forgot. It was in the heat of battle, y' know. So after I made out I asked him, 'See if you can put that on Aspromonte's record'."

IT'S AMALFITANO'S lot to have been the 26th out in Koufax' perfect game against the Cubs at Dodger Stadium last season. He didn't even have the distinction of being the 27th.

"If it's a cold night and I see I'm gonna hit I'll try to get my hands warm," Joe says. "But there's other nights when Koufax pitches you hide.

"I knew he had a perfect game going and I knew I was 2-for-2 off him pinch hitting prior to that time. I should have quit. I knew I was fighting the law of averages going up there. And he knew it, too, because he was agitatin' me before the game.

"Well, he was gettin' his curve ball over pretty good so I says, 'He's gonna start me with a curve . . . and that was the biggest mistake I made. By the time the thought registered in my head that it was a fast ball it was in Torborg's glove."

Sparing the details, Joe struck out, although he did feel pretty good about fouling one off.

HE'S HAD MORE glorious times, like in '61 and '62 with the Giants when he took over at second base because somebody else got hurt (naturally) and, batting second, thoroughly enjoyed getting on base with a consistent bat and scoring runs for Willie Mays.

"I've done that," he says wistfully, "but then I come back to spring training and I never have the job. It's somebody else's job.

"I must be looked upon in that respect and I guess I'm not gonna change it. That's one thing about this game. They form opinions of you and they usually stick.

"Don't get me wrong, though. I'm very happy. Leo likes to move people around a lot, and if somebody's not going good he's not going to be in there. Maybe I will."

The fact that Amalfitano is starting his eighth year in the majors without every really having a job to call his own indicates that somebody up there likes him. The Houston Astros liked Joe enough in 1963 to pay $125,000 for him in the draft.

"I'll have to go out and get more life insurance," he said at the time. "I didn't know I was worth that much."

For that matter, Amalfitano says, "I'm like an insurance policy. Some guy gets hurt, I can go in for a week or a month and I'm not going to embarrass anybody. You never know . . . you may get lucky and you may just stay in there the rest of the year."

49er Track Club Speeds to 2-Mile Mark; Gals Excel

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Bob Seagren became the first indoor pole vaulter to go over the 17-foot mark in the final event Saturday night of the 1966 National AAU Indoor Track and Field Championships, going 17-1¼.

The previous indoor record was held by Pennel, a 16-10 vault in a Los Angeles indoor meet earlier this year.

The 49er Track Club from Long Beach sped to a 7.27.4 mark in the men's two-mile, bettering the mark of 7.28.2 by Villanova University in 1965.

Four women's indoor records were broken and six AAU meet records fell before a crowd of 11,673 at Albuquerque's Tingley Coliseum.

The near-capacity crowd watched Tennessee State's Edith McGuire break the indoor record in the 220 at 24.1 seconds and Wyomia Tyus set an indoor mark at 6.5 in the 60-yard dash.

ART WALKER of the Striders bettered his own record in an exhibition triple jump. He hopped, skipped and jumped to 54-0¼. His previous mark was 54-0.

Bruins will still be No. 2 when school lets out.

Sophomore John Link set the pattern for the University Ave. swifties. He figured third but ran first on the opening leg, passing off a yard in front of Jim Cerveny of the San Diego Track Club and three yards up on Les Fendia of UCLA. Times were Link 1:53.0, Cerveny 1:53.1 and Fendia 1:53.2.

Bruce Bess made it as certain as a Russian election with a 1:50.6 second leg to the 1:52.5 by Kurt Klein of UCLA, a full 12-yard advantage, as San Diego fell out of win-place contention.

But did UCLA have a chance, with co-captains Bob Day (1:48.1) and Dennis Breckow (1:48.8) coming to bat?

It didn't.

Day glided through an effortless 1:49.8, but Dave Buck maintained the advantage with 1:49.7. Still, Breckow gave it a game try.

He sliced the deficit in two yards with a 52.8 first lap to the 54.9 of Dennis Carr, and they stayed that way until the last curve, 110 yards from the payoff. Then Carr kicked like a Missouri mule and Breckow kicked as though he had thrown a horseshoe. Final margin was eight yards, times were 1:50.4 for Breckow and 1:51.2 for Carr.

USC's time of 7:24.5 will rank among the year's best when those long lists are computed at football time. UCLA also broke the meet record of 7:26.4 it established in 1965 with a 7:26.0.

Bruin coach Jim Bush was optimistically pessimistic.

"I knew we couldn't run with them at this time. Why, they've got a bunch of kids who can run 1:48 or 1:49 right now. I'm happy we were that close, disappointed we didn't run a little faster. USC really wanted this one. We'll be tough—real tough—a little later.

The 25th Long Beach Relays was one of the best of all—a strong kickoff to the track season.

THE GREAT RACE

Dozens of races were run Saturday at Long Beach Relays, but none delighted crowd more than eyelash victory for Lakewood in high school two-mile relay. Lakewood's Terry Ascherin ran 1:58.4 880 anchor leg to edge Jordan's Jon Jones (1:59.2) by grimmace.

VILLANOVA'S HOLD BROKEN

Terrapins Clinch IC4A Title

NEW YORK (UPI) — Maryland's Atlantic Coast Conference champions clinched their first IC4A indoor track and field championship and three meet records fell Saturday night before a crowd of 9,144 at Madison Square Garden.

Maryland, already the IC4A outdoor title holder, broke Villanova's four-year stranglehold on the indoor crown on the strength of four gold medals picked up by high-jumper Frank Costello, (16-10), long jumper Ed Marks, (24-10¾), shotputter Ernie Hearon (57-7½), and pole-vaulter Tom Gagner (15-4).

But the meet records went to other stars. Dave Hemery, a Boston U. sophomore from England, turned in a 7.1 clocking in a trial heat of the 60-yard hurdles before winning the final in 7.2, Ricardo Urbina of Georgetown ran the 1,000 yards in 2:18.8 and Dave Patrick of Villanova churned the mile in 4:06.7 to upset Notre Dame's Ed Dean.

The victorious Terrapins, compiled a total of 28 points for an 11-point edge over Villanova, in second place at 17. Harvard was third with 14, followed by Georgetown with 13 and Manhattan with 12.

In addition to its four victories, Maryland scored on Jim Lee's third place in the 60-yard dash, third in the hurdles by Bruce Carson and a fourth in the pole vault by Pete Kowzun.

Other individual winners:

Tommy Farrell, St. John's, 600 in 1:11.4; Sam Perry, Fordham, 6.2 for 60-yard dash; Eamon O'Reilly, Georgetown, 8:57.8 two-mile; Manhattan's Bob Mead, 66-5¼ in 35-pound weight.

U.S., POLAND SET BERKELEY MEETING

BERKELEY (UPI) — The U.S. men's and women's track and field teams will meet Poland in a dual meet at the University of California July 16-17, it was announced Saturday.

The meet will take place one week before the U.S.-Russian track meet in Los Angeles.

The event, to be held at Edwards Field on the UC campus, will be conducted under the sponsorship of the San Francisco Examiner. It has been approved by the Amateur Athletic Union and the U.S. State Department.

At Warsaw last year, the U.S. men defeated Poland, 118-93, while the U.S. women's squad edged the Polish female team, 59-57.

San Jose Wins Final Event to Nab Relay Title

STANFORD (UPI) — San Jose State won the final event of the meet—the mile relay — to defeat Stanford and Santa Clara Youth Village in the annual Stanford Track and Field Relays Saturday.

The Spartans scored 101 points to 98 for Stanford and 27 for Santa Clara Youth Village.

100—Hermen (SJ) 9.8; 120 HH—Walsh (S) 14.6; shuille hurdles — Stanford (Means, Wilkins, Miller, Walsh) 57.7; 440 relay—San Jose (Hermen, Twoomey, Banbury, Smith) 41.0; 880 relay — San Jose (Hermen, Johnson, Banbury, Smith) 1:23.3; Mile relay—San Jose (Herman, Shackleford, Noel, Smith) 3:13.4; 2-mile relay—Stanford (Jacobs, Hivanen, O'Brien, Deubner) 7:51.3; distance medley — San Jose (Shackleford, Noel, Neff, Hoffman) 9:54.9.

Long jump — Stanford 67-6½ (Walsh 23-3); javelin—Santa Clara YV 226-7½ (Conley 237-3); high jump—San Jose 19-1½ (Zubrinsky 6-6½); discus—Stanford 188-11 (Sloecker 175-10½); triple jump—San Jose 142-7¾ (Fergus 49-10½); pole vault—San Jose 36-6 (Estelman 15-0).

Spartans Sweep Big 10 Indoor Title

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Michigan State's Gene Washington, Clinton Jones and Bob Steele ran one-two-three in both hurdle events Saturday to amass 24 of a possible 30 points and lead the Spartans to their first Big Ten indoor track championship.

Michigan State, with victors in four of the 14 individual events, totalled 50 points for a convincing decision over Wisconsin with 38 and Iowa with 35.

Michigan was fourth with 34 points, followed by Minnesota with 22, Northwestern with 18, Illinois with 15, Indiana with 11, Ohio State with 7 and Purdue with 1.

The Spartans, who won the outdoor championship last spring, missed the indoor crown by only half a point last year with 45½ to Wisconsin's 46.

Washington, an all-conference end on the Spartan football team, was the meet's individual standout, but he was hard pressed by his football teammate, all-America halfback Jones.

Washington set one of the three conference records to fall with a clocking of 8.3 in the 70 high hurdles, eclipsing a mark set 18 years ago by Lloyd Duff of Ohio State.

Other individual winners:

Cyrel Pinder, Illinois, 6.2 in 60-yard dash; Larry Wieczorek, Iowa, 4:19.7 mile; Wisconsin's Steve Whiddle, 48.3 in 440; Indiana's Randall Wedde, 22.2 in 300; Mike Mondane, Iowa, 1:11.2 in 600 run; Tom Stuart, Minnesota, a 6-6 high jumper; Jim Mercer, Michigan, 1:13.1 in 1,000 run; Michigan's Jack Harvey, 58-3½ shotput; Northwestern's Jim Albrecht, 15-0 pole vault; Ken Lalloda, Wisconsin, 8:49 in 1:52.2; Michigan State's Dick Sharney, record 9:01.4 in two-mile. Wisconsin took the mile relay with 3:17.8.

Fastest Bat in the League

During Leo Durocher's first session with the press when the Chicago Cubs opened spring training here last Monday, he declared, "I'll give you Willie Mays, Hank Aaron and even Mickey Mantle, crippled or not; then name me a better outfielder than Billy Williams."

Leo went on to say he wouldn't trade Williams right now for Mays . . . "and you know how I love Mays."

At 27, Billy's most productive years are still ahead of him and from what he has done so far . . . they should be great ones.

Baseball men for the past three seasons have been predicting that Williams is destined to someday win the National League batting crown.

He's been getting closer each season and last year led the Cubs with a .315 average—4th highest in the league—and 5th best in the majors—hit 34 homers and drove in 108 runs.

Blessed with quick hands and lightning wrists, Billy the Kid is said to swing "the fastest bat in the National League."

And in comparing him to Mays, one top veteran says that the Cub right fielder is a far better looking hitter than the Giant ace. "Mays just overpowers the ball," he says, "but Williams is an artist at the plate."

Dodger vice president Buzzie Bavasi is another Williams fan. "He has one of the most level swings I've ever seen," Buzzie says.

WHAT FIGURES TO BE THE biggest hurdle for the lefthand-swinging Williams to clear on the way to the batting crown?

"Putting together a good start and a good finish," he says. "So far, I've had either one or the other. If I start good, I finish slow. And if I get off to a slow start, I finish strong in the last couple of months."

Williams hit .405 through the first six weeks of the 1962 season—leading even Mays at that stage in a year when everyone figured Willie might be headed for his greatest season.

So, he has shown he can hit at a blistering pace. Now, he must strive to spread it over a longer period.

Like Mays, Williams hits in the No. 3 spot—and prefers it to any other as does Mays. "I've always hit third since I've been in baseball," Billy reveals.

He feels hitting in that spot has helped him considerably because opposing hurlers have to pitch to him more than if he perhaps batted in a lower spot.

"Pitchers can't afford to walk me," he points out, "because Ron (Santo) and Ernie (Banks) bat right behind me and they are always threats to hit a home run. So they take their chances with me and I get a greater opportunity of getting base hits."

ONLY TWO CUBS HAVE WON the National League batting title—Heinie Zimmerman in 1912 and Phil Cavaretta in 1945, the last year the club won a pennant.

Joining such select company as batting king, of course, admittedly would be nice, but Billy is more interested in team victories and the league title than personal achievements.

"I'd gladly settle for .220 if it meant the Cubs would win the pennant," he says, stressing the fact that his main ambition is to play on a championship club.

However, it is agreed by teammates and observers alike that if the Cubs win the pennant in the next few years, they would need at least .320 or more from Williams rather than .220.

On the subject of a quick upsurge by the Cubs in the pennant race this year, Billy is rather cautious, feels it might be asking too much all at once to become a serious contender—"but maybe by next year. . ."

One thing is certain, a healthy new spirit has gripped the club since Durocher took over the past winter. "We feel we have a chance to go someplace now," Billy says.

WILLIAMS IS THE LAST TOP PLAYER to be given the stamp of approval by the late Rogers Hornsby. The immortal "Rajah" was one of the great hitters of all-time—batting over .400 three times and recording the highest average in history, .424 in 1924.

Thus, Hornsby knew a little bit about the art of hitting when he looked at Williams and recommended him for immediate advancement to the Cubs.

The Cubs, wallowing in the second division as they have now for the past 20 years, were hopefully trying to build for the future in 1960 when they sent Hornsby out to look for help.

When he landed in Houston and saw Williams play only one game, he telephoned the Cub front office and suggested that they get Billy to Chicago as fast as possible because there wasn't anybody on the team then that could swing a bat nearly as good. It was silly, he told them, to keep a kid like that in the minors.

BILLY PLAYED 12 GAMES in finishing out the 1960 season with the Cubs; was the league's "Rookie of the Year" in '61 on the strength of a .278 batting average with 25 home runs and 86 RBI's, and in '62 he was named the "Sophomore of the Year" as he boosted his average to .298 . . . being over .300 until the final series of the season.

Williams was only 15 when he made a barnstorming junket with Satchel Paige and Hank Aaron in 1954, and also toured with them again in 1955 before joining the Cub organization in '56 and was assigned to Ponca City.

He never hit under .300 in the minors . . . and now that he has zeroed in on that bracket in the bigtime, it's going to be difficult for rival pitchers from keeping him from becoming the No. 1 hitter in the National League—perhaps all of baseball.

His Aim Not to Flinch in Pinch

By GEORGE LEDERER

MARSHALL

VERO BEACH, Fla. — At an age when a half-dozen ex-Dodgers tossed in the major league towel and fled to Japan, 33-year-old Jim Marshall has a chance to reverse the trend.

Marshall, a veteran of five major league clubs, is here on a trial basis after three seasons with the Nagoya Dragons of the Japanese Central League. His mission is not to flinch in the pinch.

Walter Alston is looking for a lefthanded pinch-hitter and Marshall is the No. 1 candidate for the job that was weakest in the world champions' armor.

Alston looked 62 times for a pinch hit by a lefthander last season and was disappointed 50 times. Wally Moon, who commanded $38,000 for he specialty, batted .200 as the most frequent pinch-hitter and failed in his last 22 times up after June 17.

The team pinch-hitting average was .201 and by lefthanders it was .194.

"It's a tough job, but I've done it for a couple of clubs and I hope to have the chance for this one. Pinch-hitting is a matter of mental conditioning between dugout and plate. The idea is to get a piece of the ball," says Marshall, who will try to give Alston some peace of mind.

Marshall batted .270 as a pinch-hitter for the Pirates in 1962, his last in the majors. The year before he compiled the most points among the Giants under manager Al Dark's plus-minus grading system.

"I didn't have the best average, but we earned points for advancing a runner and were docked for striking out."

Marshall might have been reunited with Dark at Kansas City this season were it not for a chance meeting three weeks ago with Dodger general manager Buzzie Bavasi.

"I saw Al during the winter and he told me to call him before spring training. Only last month I dropped in at Dodger Stadium to see my old friend Danny Goodman (Dodger concessionaire) and it was there that I met Buzzie.

"He asked me what I planned to do and I told him I'd like to stay in baseball, at least a couple more years. He told me to come back at 10 the next morning."

Marshall was prompt for the interview, which was to be brief.

"Buzzie asked only two questions. The first was, 'How are your legs?' I told him I'd missed only nine games the last three years and I'd never been hurt.

"Then he asked, 'Do you strike out much?' I said, 'No, only 39 times my last year in the majors.'

"That was it. He told me if I was willing to take a chance, so was he. I don't have a contract, but Buzzie said not to worry about money if I made the club."

Money, in the neighborhood of $30,000 a year, took Marshall to Japan, but the language barrier brought him back to his adopted home in Belmont Heights.

Because there are no English schools in Nagoya and only a few citizens speak English, Marshall's wife and three children established residence in Tokyo, 280 miles away.

"It can be pretty lonely when you go for three weeks without hearing a word of English.

"After a while I picked up enough Japanese to get by. I knew what they were talking about in the clubhouse meetings, which got to be monotonous.

"They had a meeting every night and talked about the same things: 'Their starting pitcher is so-and-so and he pitches this way.' All they talked about was how we could hit their pitcher. They'd never discuss how we'd pitch to them. Our signs didn't change all season."

* * * *

DIS AND DATA—Marshall hit 99 home runs and averaged .280 in his three seasons with the Dragons . . . "Japanese pitchers are of good Triple-A caliber. Their control is excellent, but they lack the velocity of a Koufax, Gibson, Maloney or Veale." . . . Japan's version of Koufax is a lefthander named Kanada . . . He's won 20 games 14 years in a row and earns $100,000 a year, by far the most in Japan . . . The leading slugger in Japan is a fellow named Oh. . . . He led the league with 50 home runs last season and draws $50,000 . . . Marshall was named most valuable player of the Japanese all-star game in 1964. . . . He averaged between 90 and 95 rbi for the three years.

ANGEL BOSS LOT LIKE 'THE LIP'

Rigney a Durocher Disciple But Manages His Own Way

By ROSS NEWHAN
I, P-T Staff Writer

PALM SPRINGS — As one of 10 Leo Durocher disciples currently managing in the major leagues, Bill Rigney was pictured in a recent issue of a national magazine.

Under the mug, Rigney analyzed this unique evolution by former members of the Lion's Den thusly:

"We figured if he can manage anyone can."

Over breakfast at Gene Autrey's Ocotillo Lodge Saturday, Rigney amended the statement.

"Hell," snapped the Angels' skipper, "Leo was lucky to have fellows like us to manage."

Besides Rigney, "the fellows" include Eddie Stanky (White Sox), Alvin Dark (A's), Charley Dressen (Tigers), Bill Herman (Red Sox), Gil Hodges (Senators), Bobby Bragan (Braves), Herman Franks (Giants), Gene Mauch (Phils) and Wes Westrum (Mets).

It is Rigney, however, who has emerged most like Durocher, combining the fire and verve of dynamic leadership with tactical shrewdness and a flair for the dramatic.

"There is no way I can believe that the game will ever pass Leo by," said Rigney, in the midst of preparing the Angels for the exhibition opener with Durocher's Cubs here March 12-13.

"I sincerely believe that he'll make the Cubs a better team. The players might not even realize it's happening, but he'll do it. And, you can bet that guys who really want to play, the hard-nosed ones, will love him."

* * * *

FROM HIS position as a sometime-starter, mostly-utility infielder, Rigney observed Durocher's methods at the Giants' helm from 1949 through 1953.

As the Giants swept to the world's championship in 1954, Rigney was in Minneapolis guiding the Millers to third place in the American Ass'n. A year later, he was the association's Manager of the Year, and a year after that he was manager of the New York Giants, replacing Leo Durocher.

"I don't feel that I owe Leo anything, but I certainly profited from playing for him," said Rigney.

"He was no doubt the best manager I ever played for and certainly the most colorful. Some things were bound to rub off.

"Many of the things I preach, I heard from Leo for the first time. The importance of an offensive out, different methods to score a man from third, the many ways to avoid a double play.

"At the same time, I knew that I'd have to manage my way, not his. It would have to be the way I felt, I couldn't substitute his feelings. Sure, we're compared because we're both explosive but I'm explosive because it's my nature, not just because Leo was explosive."

* * * *

ONE SEEKS the correlation between Durocher and the arrival of 10 of his former players among the managerial cadre. Rigney calls it "phenomenal" and credits the 1951 "Miracle of Coogan's Bluff," when the Giants ascended from a 13-game August deficit to the pennant, as directly responsible.

That team alone spawned Rigney, Dark, Westrum, Stanky and Franks, plus Larry Jansen, Whitey Lockman and Sal Maglie, who are currently coaching in the majors.

"Maybe it all started during those final weeks in '51," reflected Rigney. "We had a group of guys who loved the game in the same manner Leo did and who understood his intolerance for losing.

"Well, we got the streak going in late August and we'd get together often and talk about what we had to do tomorrow to keep it alive. Mostly it was Stanky, Dark, Maglie, Jansen and myself. Maybe Leo knew about the meetings and maybe he didn't, but he never interferred.

It is ironic that when the Angels and Cubs meet next weekend, William Joseph Rigney will find himself the American League senior manager and Leo Durocher the National League's newest.

Who Needs Pitching? Not Dodgers

VERO BEACH, Fla. — Oh, oh, oh those Dodgers.

Saturday's informal debut of the world champions was up to mid-season expectations: No runs, no hits, no errors.

Howie Reed, Dick Calmus and John Purdin did not allow a hit as the Danny Ozarks and Preston Gomezes played a scoreless, seven-inning intrasquad game.

"Who says we need pitching?" asked general manager Buzzie Bavasi, who refuses to budge in his salary stalemate with Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale.

Reed and Calmus each pitched three hitless innings and Purdin worked the final inning for both sides.

* * * *

THE GOMEZES managed four hits against Claude Osteen, rookie Don Sutton and Purdin. Nate Oliver had two, a single and a bad-hop double.

Sutton, a 20-year-old right-hander, drew the most comment.

"I like the way he goes out there and takes command," said manager Walter Alston.

"He knows how to pitch," said pitching coach Lefty Phillips. "He reminds me of a veteran of 27 or 28."

"He looks like Larry Sherry did in 1959," said Bavasi. "He has that attitude of 'gimme the ball and I'll get 'em out.'"

* * * *

DIS AND DATA—Claude Osteen, probable starter in next Saturday's exhibition opener against the Braves, allowed only a single by Al Ferrara in his three innings . . . Non-roster catcher Barry Erdos had the other hit . . . Jim Marshall struck out, walked and filed out, then contributed the outstanding defensive play . . . The Ozarks' first baseman made a diving catch of Erdos' liner and turned it into a game-ending double play . . . Catcher Jeff Torborg left early because of a migraine headache. He was troubled by headaches frequently last season . . . Tommy Davis, testing his right ankle under game conditions for only the second time since he broke it last May 1, walked and filed deep to left in two turns . . . Johnny Podres, Nick Willhite, Bill Singer and Phil Regan are scheduled to pitch in another squad game this afternoon.

Rig Cracks Down, Fines Star $250

FREGOSI

PALM SPRINGS — Bill Rigney, implementing his get-tough policy, fined shortstop Jim Fregosi Saturday for violation of curfew regulations.

This was the first spring training fine here since 1962 when Dean Chance and Bo Belinsky were each taxed $250 for reporting late for a workout.

Fregosi refused to comment and, while Rigney would not reveal the amount, the I, P-T learned it was in the $250 neighborhood.

"As far as I'm concerned this is a closed matter," said a stern Rigney. "I simply will not tolerate curfew violations this spring. I made that clear the first day."

Fregosi, 23, signed recently for $40,000, putting him on a par with Zoilo Versalles, the league's highest salaried shortstop and the league's most valuable player.

Curfew at the Melody Ranch is midnight.

RICK REICHARDT smashed a towering home run to highlight the Angels' initial intra-squad game Saturday. The Salty Parkers, behind the three-hit pitching of Chance, John French and Dick Egan, whipped the Del Rice's, 3-0.

Reichardt, who belted his homer off Jim McGlothlin, shared hitting honors with Paul Schaal, who doubled and singled.

Chance yielded three hits and three walks in three innings while Marcelino Lopez, runnerup to Curt Blefary as Rookie of the Year, yielded two hits and one run in three frames.

"My arm was nice and loose," said Chance. "I am in better physical condition than I have ever been in this early."

Leo Coming In Loud, Clear

By JIM ENRIGHT
Special for the I, P-T

How would you like to tune in LEO — Leo Ernest Durocher, new manager of the Cubs?

Here's some of Durocher's verbal gems recorded before, during, and after another of the Cubs' daily drills in Blair Field:

Speaking as he watched big George Altman in the batting cage:

"George is my most pleasing surprise in camp. He's working every minute, and now I'll tell you something else he's doing. He's slashing that ball to right-center just like he used to when he first came up."

About the Cubs' collective enthusiasm in the daily drills, The Brain claimed:

"This is my 41st year in baseball, and during that time I've attended or directed a lot of spring training camps. Never, however, have I ever seen a group work harder and have more fun doing it than this squad. It's beautiful!

"I'm so pleased with the progress we've made that I thanked the fellows for their cooperation during our morning meeting."

Although Randy Hundley is regarded the best bet to win the No. 1 catcher rating, Durocher said:

"With six catchers in camp I'm going to look at all of 'em during the spring games. I'll change catchers every two or three innings just like I plan to shift pitchers."

When West Covington's name was mentioned, the Cubs' No. 1 man with the No. 2 on the back of his uniform, said:

"I've had a couple of talks with Wes. What did I tell him? I told him to retain the same mental attitude he has right now through 162 games this season, and he'll be a valuable addition to this club."

In connection with the Cubs having to play their first 12 NL games against the Giants and Dodgers this season, The Brain observed:

"Why worry about the schedule? You have to play these games sometime, and it doesn't make any difference to me whether we play 'em early or late. Don't forget—we'll start even, and then the rest is up to us."

McCormick Claws Out 74, Boosts Masters Lead to 4

By JOHN CASH

Bill McCormick and Terry Hartshorn played the cat and mouse game for 16 holes Saturday at Virginia Country Club before McCormick scrambled to a 74 and a four-stroke lead in the Masters Championship.

Hartshorn, defending champion, carded a 75 for a 226 three-round total, and he has his work cut out for him today when he tries to catch the Skylinks Slammer on Bill's home course. Tee off is 10:30 a.m.

Don Winterhalter of Meadowlark moved ahead of Willard Bryan (El Dorado) in their battle for fourth spot, seven strokes behind third-place held by Ernie Combs of Virginia.

Winterhalter shot a 76 for a 238 total, one shot ahead of Bryan, who had 77. Bruce Stewart of Recreation Park carded a 9 on the 11th hole when he four-putted and had an 8 on the par-3 7th when it took four shots to get out of an ice plant. He limped home with 89 for a 249 aggregate.

McCormick, who says that "I can't seem to get everything going at the same time," played the front nine with a four-leaf clover in his hip pocket.

He missed the fairway with tee shots four times, but managed to one-putt five greens and shot even-par 35. He knocked in a 12-footer for a birdie 3 on the fourth hole and 16-footer for a birdie-4 on the 5th to offset bogeys on the 2nd and 3rd holes.

Meanwhile, Hartshorn was playing the part of a benevolent protector. He three-putted the first three holes and bogeyed the 7th to make the turn in 39 to fall seven shots behind McCormick.

Combs of Virginia, trailing by five shots entering the round, knocked himself out of contention when he hit seven of nine greens but "couldn't putt if my life depended on it," and shot 41 the first nine.

After a bogey-5 on the 11th hole put Hartshorn eight shots in arrears, the 20-year-old Lakewood club champion went birdie-par-par-birdie-par to come to within one shot of McCormick on the round and four strokes for the tourney.

Terry birdied the 12th hole when he hit the best shot of the day. In a trap 50 feet below the pin, Hartshorn lofted the ball to a standstill 6 inches from the cup on the par-5 hole. McCormick bogeyed, and Terry was on the move.

Two more bogeys by McCormick, one when he took four shots from 25 yards off the green (14th hole), made it easier on Hartshorn. The 1965 Golfer of the Year carded pars on the 13th and 14th and rammed in a 12-foot birdie on the 15th.

McCormick saved himself on the 15th when he coolly dropped a six-footer for a par to keep Terry from closing in. And, Hartshorn bogeyed the 17th when his second shot from a difficult lie failed to travel over 50 yards, to give Bill his four-shot bulge.

IT'S A BLAST — ALMOST

Bill McCormick tries to blast out of trap on second hole at Virginia Country Club Saturday in third Round of Masters Championship. He failed on this attempt and carded bogey 5, but shot 74 for 221 total and 4-stroke lead going into final round today at Skylinks.

Wall on Top by 5 Shots

MARACAIBO, Venezuela (UPI) — Defending champion Art Wall Jr. rallied for consecutive birdies on the final two holes to salvage a 74 Saturday and maintain a 5-stroke lead at 207 after three rounds of the Maracaibo Open golf championship.

Wall, a native of Honesdale, Pa., got into trouble with a 4-over-par on the front nine, but the former Masters champion bailed himself out of trouble by dropping two 10-foot birdie putts on the 17th and 18th holes.

Roberto de Vincenzo of Argentina, who shared the opening-round lead with Walls, slumped to a 73 and fell to fifth with 214.

FIERY 49ER

John Treece, second baseman and outfielder, will be in lineup for Long Beach State when 49ers meet USC at Blair Field Monday night. Trojans' only loss to college team was to 49ers.

49ers Squeezed by Chapman, 1-0

Dale Cunningham's suicide squeeze scored John Clifton with one out in the eighth inning as Chapman College nudged Long Beach State, 1-0, Saturday in a non-conference baseball game at Blair Field.

Clifton spaced seven hits as the Panthers boosted their season record to 7-1. The 49ers, now 8-3, stranded eight runners. Losing pitcher Galen Smith gave up six hits and one walk.

Coach Bob Wuesthoff's 49ers return to action Monday night when they engage USC at Blair Field. LBSC dumped the Trojans, 3-1, in their first meeting.

YOSEMITE (AP) — An unusually strong team of Southern California skiers took a commanding lead Saturday in the two-day 10th annual North-South race at Badger Pass.

PLAYER TOPS JACK BY 14

CAPETOWN, South Africa (AP)—Gary Player, the South African who is the United States Open golf champion, defeated Jack Nicklaus of Columbus, Ohio, by six strokes Saturday and won the Challenge of the Champions six-match competitions by 14 strokes.

Player posted a 2-under-par 69 Saturday while Nicklaus had a 75. At stake was a purse of $50,000.

CUB CAPSULES: A total of 29 players were shuttled into the game. Joe Amalfitano walked in the top of the seventh to force in what appeared to be the winning run for the Santos. Was Covington's force out nixed the advantage 3-2, but in the bottom of the seventh Banks' outfit turned two walks, Jimmy Stewart's second hit of the afternoon, a hit batsman and Browne's single into three tallies . . .

With two out in the first, George Altman walked and Banks doubled him home. Kenny Hunt's single to center scored Banks, in the fourth, Williams homered off Ken Church, the first time he's been able to clear the barrier since training started six days ago. The Santos added two more runs before the inning was over to take a 3-2 lead. The battling Banks secured matters in the sixth when Altman doubled to center and Stewart chased him home with a two-base hit to right . . .

The 10 managers . . . who either played for Leo or coached under him and that currently are serving in the majors, are: Gene Mauch (Phillies), Bobby Bragan (Braves), Eddie Stanky (White Sox), Gil Hodges (Senators), Hermman Franks (Giants), Bill Rigney (Angels), Billy Herman (Red Sox), Wes Westrum (Mets), Al Dark (Athletics) and Charlie Dressen (Tigers) . . .

Club vice president John Holland says ticket sales in Chicago are up 125% over last season. Cubs owner P. K. Wrigley will journey to Long Beach to watch the spring games. He's due in town about March 15 . . . Advance ticket sales indicate the two games with the San Francisco Giants on March 21-22 will draw the biggest crowds at Blair. Seating will be increased to better than 6,000 when the bleachers are put up along the foul lines . . . Catcher Chris Krug will show "The Kenny Hubbs Story" to the squad Tuesday evening at the Edgewater Inn. The 52-minute movie deals with the life of the Cubs second baseman who was killed in a plane crash on Feb. 15, 1964. Krug says he will gladly show the film to groups in town. "It's really an inspiration to all kids," said Chris.

'Pag' Headed for Big Year? 2 Latins Sign

Combined from Wire Reports

Two Latin outfielders came to terms, two veteran infielders tried new positions and an ex-Long Beach catcher appears headed for his greatest year—these were the news highlights in baseball spring training camps Saturday.

Rico Carty and Sandy Valdespino were the players ending holdouts, Carty signing with the Atlanta Braves for $17,000 and Valdespino with the Minnesota Twins for about $15,000.

Pete Rose, the All-Star second baseman last season, took a shot at third base for Cincinnati, and Pete Ward, the Chicago White Sox's No. 1 hot corner guardian, tried out at first base in moves to give their clubs more versatility.

Rose yielded to make room for Tommy Helms, who continues to impress Red skipper Don Heffner, and Ward switched to fill the void for the ailing and aging Moose Skowron.

MEANWHILE, Pittsburgh's Jim Pagliaroni, a former Long Beach resident now living in Grass Valley, was put in the cleanup spot in the Pirates' intra-squad game slated for today.

The popular 'Pag', who at 27 appears headed for a big year, also was voted by his teammates as the Pirates' player rep, replacing Bob Friend, who was sold this winter to the New York Yanks.

Phillies—Catcher Bob Uecker split a finger catching a foul tip and will be sidelined a day or two.

Pirates—Outfielder Willie Stargell got permission to send for his German Shepherd dog from Pittsburgh. He said he was lonely.

Giants—Long Beach's Ollie Brown will bat in the No. 3 spot in today's San Francisco intra-squad game.

Cardinals—Mike Shannon, an outfielder, will try out as a catcher, says manager Red Schoendienst.

Twins—Jimmy Hall's second homer in two days was the highlight of Minnesota's second squad game, won by the Billy Martins over the Jim Lemons, 6-2.

Ferrie, Johnson Win Virginia Sweepstakes

FAILED TO SIGN SCORE CARD!

Sanders Disqualified After Assuming Four-Stroke Lead

PENSACOLA, Fla. (UPI) Defending champion Doug Sanders, holding a four-stroke lead at the end of the second round of the Pensacola Open golf tournament, was disqualified Saturday for failing to sign his score card.

The 32-year-old Sanders, seeking a record third championship here, had just finished posting a 14-under-par 130 for the first 36 holes when he was besieged by autograph seekers.

He signed his name at least 20 times but forgot to put it the one place it had to be if he were to remain in the running for the $10,000 first prize that would have made him the leading money-winner on the pro tour this year.

The irate Sanders argued in vain with PGA official Jack Tuthill who refused to change his ruling. Tuthill said that Rule No. 38 of the Association's regulations clearly threw Sanders out of the tournament for his omission.

The rule states that a competitor is responsible for signing his card and returning it to the tournament committee. It says once the card reaches the PGA official scorekeeper, if it has not been signed the penalty is disqualification.

Sanders was in the press room talking about the 67 he shot in Saturday's second round to give him a four-stroke lead over Gay Brewer Jr. of Dallas. An official rushed to the room to inform him of his error but by the time Sanders, who jumped up and dashed out of the room, had reached Tuthill it was ruled he was too late.

"This rule has not been enforced in the past," argued Sanders. "Why enforce it now?"

This is the first time in recent years that a leader in a professional golf tournament has been disqualified for any reason.

Sanders, after losing his argument with Tuthill, stormed from the Pensacola Country Club and drove away.

The disqualification put Brewer, who had a 69 Saturday and a 10-under-par 134, into the lead.

Brewer should have been closer to Sanders than he was but had taken a triple bogey on the 13th hole.

"I'd just as soon not think about that one," the 34-year-old pro from Dallas said when asked about the seven he wound up with on the par-four hole.

Boldnesian Takes Santa Anita Derby

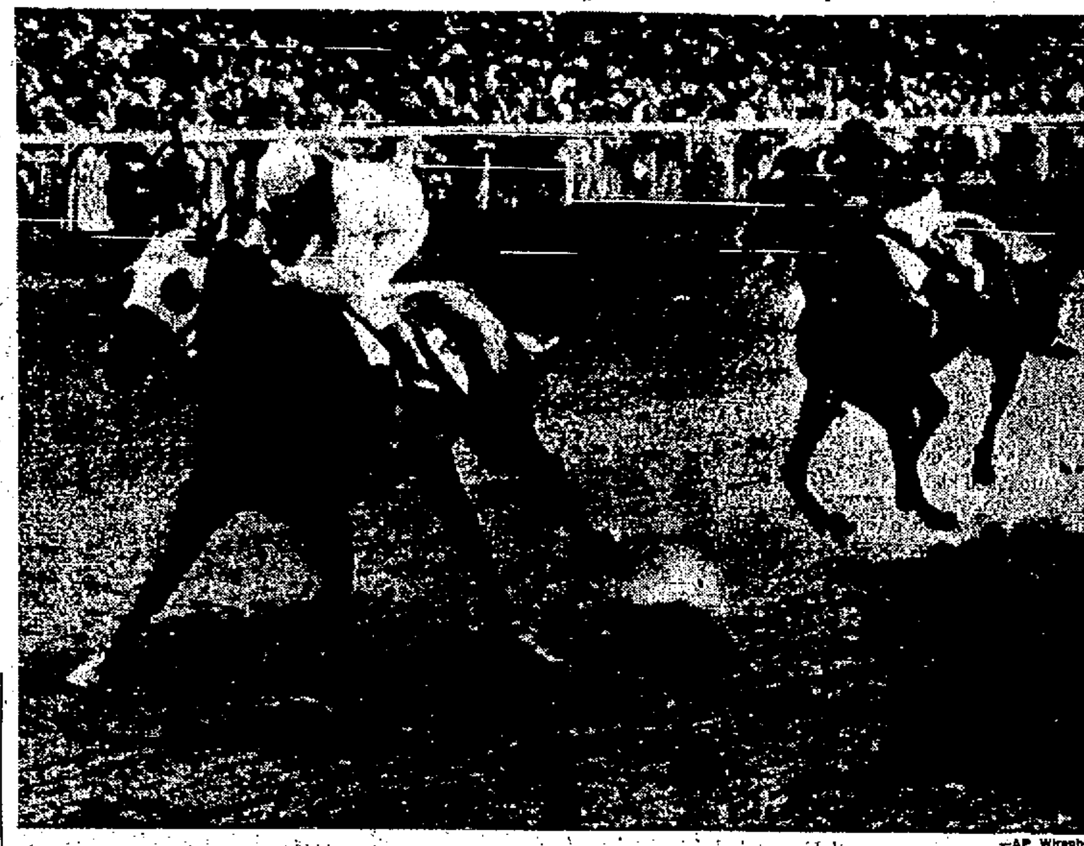
Jacobs' Exhibitionist rushed up in the final strides to challenge and finish a neck behind Shoemaker's horse.

Jockey Jerry Lambert got the longshot, Ri Tux, away from the gate first and the field was tightly bunched as it rounded the clubhouse turn and swung on into the backstretch.

Shoemaker, bidding for his sixth Santa Anita Derby victory, kept close on Ri Tux's pace and went into the lead heading for the far turn.

Then Boldnesian slipped through and opened a lead of 1½ lengths at the head of the stretch. Both Blum and the Shoe went to the whip in the stirring run to the wire.



Saber Mountain appeared to hang just a bit after closing a slight margin in the stretch run. Each colt carried 118 pounds.

Boldnesian returned $5.40, $3.00 and $2.60 across the board; Saber Mountain $2.80 and $2.40 and Exhibitionist, ridden by Braulio Baeza, $2.80.

BOLD BIDDER SOLD TO STUD

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — John R. Gaines said Saturday he has purchased Bold Bidder from Paul Falkenstien of Bakersfield and will immediately retire the thoroughbred to stud. The price was not disclosed.

Bold Bidder won the recent $100,000-added Charles H. Strub Stakes at Santa Anita and established a track record for 1¼ miles.

BLUM PICKS OFF PLUM

Boldnesian, with jockey Walter Blum urging him on, nears the wire two lengths in front of previously unbeaten Saber Mountain in the Santa Anita Derby Saturday. The son of Bold Ruler will have no chance to prove his mettle in the Kentucky Derby, however, since he wasn't nominated for the event by owner William Haggin Perry. —AP Wirephoto

Saari Leads Trojans to Swim Title

USC Star Wins 3rd Event, 38th AAWU Point

University of Southern California coasted to its sixth straight AAWU swimming championship Saturday night led by Olympian Roy Saari.

The Trojans posted 264½ points for the three-day competition with UCLA taking second on 212½ points. Saari scored 38 points in the meet as he captured three events and anchored two relays teams that finished second.

USC next travels to the Air Force Academy where it is due to defend its NCAA championship March 24-26.

Saari won three events in as many days, including a first in the 1,650 freestyle which he finished in 17:27.8. He helped two Trojan relay teams place second.

Summaries:

Final scores: USC 264½; UCLA 212½; Stanford 176½; Oregon 65; Washington 57½; California 40½; Washington State 36½; Oregon State 27.

3 Soccer Games at Vets Today

Continental Soccer Football League action continues today at Veterans Stadium with second-place Montebello facing the Lynwood Falcons in the 2:30 main event.

Orange County against Beverly Hills opens the tripleheader at 10:30 followed by the Hollywood Stars and Long Beach Pirates at 12:30.

In the opener, Orange County is favorite to whip Beverly Hills in a warmup to their March 13 National Open Cup game against Seattle at Veterans Stadium.

* * * *

LONG BEACH looked good in the first half last week against Montebello and led, 2-0, but after Oscar Passalacqua and Lazlo Gal were sent to the showers for rough play in the second half, the Pirates barely held on for a 2-2 tie.

Sorokin Sets Drag Record

BAKERSFIELD — Mike Sorokin of Santa Monica roared to a world record Saturday at the U. S. fuel and gas championships when he guided his Chrysler-powered fuel dragster through the quarter in a record time of 7.34 seconds.

Sorokin had a backup run of 7.41 and hit a top speed of 210.76 mph. The Santa Monica speedster will face the top eliminator of today's meeting which begins at 10 a.m.

A fiery accident almost marred Saturday's racing when Nando Haase's fuel dragster flipped, rolled three times and exploded, but the driver from Upland was pulled from the flaming wreckage and was able to walk away.

East-West Drags Draw Top Crowd

Drag Racing Magazine's East vs. West battle at Lions Drag Strip Saturday night pulled in the largest crowd in the strip's history, 12,500, as the local drivers swamped the Easterns, 8-3.

Top speed of the night went to Gas Ronda in a Mustang and the Sox-Martin team in a Barracuda, each turning 154.37 mph. Dick Landley in a Dodge capture low ET with a 9.62 timing.

RACING ROUNDUP

Just About, Swift Ruler Romp

Compiled from Wire Reports

Just About, a 4-year-old invader from Florida, captured the 39th running of the $77,000 New Orleans Handicap Saturday, setting a track record.

The 18,317 bettors pumped $170,518 on the race, a pool record for a single race at the historic Fair Grounds track.

Just About, a 9-1 shot, returned $21.20, $9.60 and $6.20. R. Thomas returned $5.20 and $3 while Bonetero paid $3.

The 1965 Arkansas Derby winner, Swift Ruler, covered the mile and 70 yards in record-breaking time to win the $10,000 Southland Handicap at Oaklawn Park in Hot Springs, Ark.

The largest crowd of the 1966 Oaklawn season, 17,411, saw the 1965 Kentucky Derby entry move from third at the head of the stretch to score by three-quarters of a length over Bay Phantom.

A solid favorite, Swift Ruler returned $4.20, $3 and $2.60. Bay Phantom, winner of two handicaps here this season, paid $3.20 and $3 and Climax 2nd returned $4.50 to show. Swift Ruler was timed over a fast track in 1:39 2/5, one-fifth of a second better than Eight Again's Oaklawn mark on March 25, 1961.

Wheatley Stable's Bold and Brave easily won the $18,625 Hutcheson Stakes at Gulfstream Park in Miami and earned a possible start in the Florida Derby with stablemates Buckpasser and Stupendous.

* * * *

WIDE TO RIGHT, a useful runner in allowance races last season, continued his successful invasion of stakes events this year when the colt led all the way to win the $28,400 City of Baltimore handicap at Pimlico by 2½ lengths.

With Jockey Chuck Baltazar aboard, Wide To Right was timed in 1:45⅗ over a "good" track and paid $4.20, $2.80 and $2.60 across the board.

Double Warrant, who closed strongly in the stretch to nip Navy Admiral at the wire, returned $8.00 and $5.60.

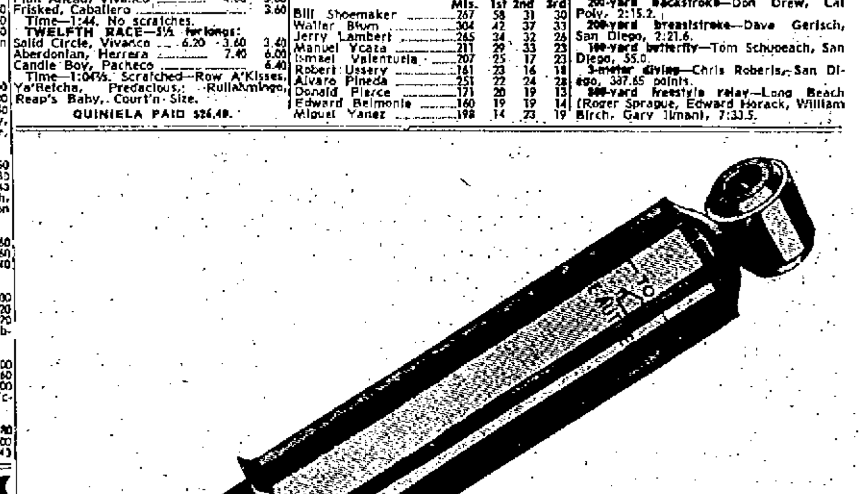
San Diego Aquas Beat 49ers for Conference Title

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Defending champion San Diego State College Saturday won the 1966 California Collegiate Athletic Association swimming title with 182½ points.



San Diego won 10 of 18 events during the three-day meet.

Other teams in order: Long Beach State, 84; San Fernando Valley, 60½; Cal Poly (San Luis Obispo), 59; Fresno State 43; Los Angeles State, 32.

The winning total topped the record of 158 points made by Long Beach State in 1958.

Final day winners:
1,650-yard freestyle—George Tomlinson, San Diego, 18:10.9.
100-yard freestyle—Gary Ilman, Long Beach, 48.9.
200-yard backstroke—Don Drew, Cal Poly, 2:15.2.
200-yard breaststroke—Dave Gerisch, San Diego, 2:21.6.
100-yard butterfly—Tom Schubeach, San Diego, 55.0.
3-meter diving—Chris Roberts, San Diego, 337.65 points.
400-yard freestyle relay—Long Beach (Roger Sprague, Edward Horack, William Birch, Gary Ilman), 7:33.5.

McCormick Claws Out 74, Boosts Masters Lead to 4

By JOHN CASH

Bill McCormick and Terry Hartshorn played the cat and mouse game for 16 holes Saturday at Virginia Country Club before McCormick scrambled to a 74 and a four-stroke lead in the Masters Championship.

Hartshorn, defending champion, carded a 75 for a 226 three-round total, and he has his work cut out for him today when he tries to catch the Skylinks Slammer on Bill's home course. Tee off is 10:30 a.m.

Don Winterhalter of Meadowlark moved ahead of Willard Bryan (El Dorado) in their battle for fourth spot, seven strokes behind third-place held by Ernie Combs of Virginia.

Winterhalter shot a 76 for a 238 total, one shot ahead of Bryan, who had 77. Bruce Stewart of Recreation Park carded a 9 on the 11th hole when he four-putted and had an 8 on the par-3 7th when it took four shots to get out of an ice plant. He limped home with 89 for a 249 aggregate.

McCormick, who says that "I can't seem to get everything going at the same time," played the front nine with a four-leaf clover in his hip pocket.

He missed the fairway with tee shots four times, but managed to one-putt five greens and shot even-par 35. He knocked in a 12-footer for a birdie 3 on the fourth hole and 16-footer for a birdie-4 on the 5th to offset bogeys on the 2nd and 3rd holes.

Meanwhile, Hartshorn was playing the part of a benevolent protector. He three-putted the first three holes and bogeyed the 7th to make the turn in 39 to fall seven shots behind McCormick.

Combs of Virginia, trailing by five shots entering the round, knocked himself out of contention when he hit seven of nine greens but "couldn't putt if my life depended on it," and shot 41 the first nine.

After a bogey-5 on the 11th hole put Hartshorn eight shots in arrears, the 20-year-old Lakewood club champion went birdie-par-par-birdie-par to come to within one shot of McCormick on the round and four strokes for the tourney.

Terry birdied the 12th hole when he hit the best shot of the day. In a trap 50 feet below the pin, Hartshorn lofted the ball to a standstill 6 inches from the cup on the par-5 hole. McCormick bogeyed, and Terry was on the move.

Two more bogeys by McCormick, one when he took four shots from 25 yards off the green (14th hole), made it easier on Hartshorn. The 1965 Golfer of the Year carded pars on the 13th and 14th and rammed in a 12-foot birdie on the 15th.

McCormick saved himself on the 15th when he coolly dropped a six-footer for a par to keep Terry from closing in. And, Hartshorn bogeyed the 17th when his second shot from a difficult lie failed to travel over 50 yards, to give Bill his four-shot bulge.

IT'S A BLAST — ALMOST

Bill McCormick tries to blast out of trap on second hole at Virginia Country Club Saturday in third Round of Masters Championship. He failed on this attempt and carded bogey 5, but shot 74 for 221 total and 4-stroke lead going into final round today at Skylinks.

Wall on Top by 5 Shots

MARACAIBO, Venezuela (UPI) — Defending champion Art Wall Jr. rallied for consecutive birdies on the final two holes to salvage a 74 Saturday and maintain a 5-stroke lead at 207 after three rounds of the Maracaibo Open golf championship.

Wall, a native of Honesdale, Pa., got into trouble with a 4-over-par on the front nine, but the former Masters champion bailed himself out of trouble by dropping two 10-foot birdie putts on the 17th and 18th holes.

Roberto de Vincenzo of Argentina, who shared the opening-round lead with Walls, slumped to a 73 and fell to fifth with 214.

John Treece, second baseman and outfielder, will be in lineup for Long Beach State when 49ers meet USC at Blair Field Monday night. Trojans' only loss to college team was to 49ers.

49ers Squeezed by Chapman, 1-0

Dale Cunningham's suicide squeeze scored John Clifton with one out in the eighth inning as Chapman College nudged Long Beach State, 1-0, Saturday in a non-conference baseball game at Blair Field.

Clifton spaced seven hits as the Panthers boosted their season record to 7-1. The 49ers, now 8-3, stranded eight runners. Losing pitcher Galen Smith gave up six hits and one walk.

Coach Bob Wuesthoff's 49ers return to action Monday night when they engage USC at Blair Field. LBSC dumped the Trojans, 3-1, in their first meeting.

YOSEMITE (UP) — An unusually strong team of Southern California skiers took a commanding lead Saturday in the two-day 10th annual North-South race at Badger Pass.

PLAYER TOPS JACK BY 14

CAPETOWN, South Africa (UP)—Gary Player, the South African who is the United States Open golf champion, defeated Jack Nicklaus of Columbus, Ohio, by six strokes Saturday and won the Challenge of the Champions six-match competitions by 14 strokes.

Player posted a 2-under-par 69 Saturday while Nicklaus had a 75. At stake was a purse of $50,000.

CUB CAPSULE: A total of 29 players were shuffled into the game. Joe Amalfitano walked in the top of the seventh to force in what appeared to be the winning run for the Santos. Was Covington's force out nixed the advantage to 6-5, but in the bottom of the seventh Backs' outfit turned two walks, Jimmy Stewart's second hit of the afternoon, a hit batsman and Browne's single into three tallies . . .

With two out in the first, George Altman walked and Banks doubled him home. Kenny Hunt's single to center scored Banks. In the fourth, Williams homered off Ken Church, the first time he's been able to clear the barrier since training started six days ago. The Santos added two more runs before the inning was over to take a 3-2 lead. The battling Banks squared matters in the sixth when Altman doubled to center and Stewart chased him home with a two-base hit to right . . .

The 10 manager's, who either played for Leo or coached under him and that currently are serving in the majors, are Gene Mauch (Phillies), Bobby Bragan (Braves), Eddie Stanky (White Sox), Gil Hodges (Senators), Herman Franks (Giants), Bill Rigney (Angels), Billy Herman (Red Sox), Wes Westrum (Mets), Al Dark (Athletics) and Charlie Dressen (Tigers).

Club vice president John Holland says ticket sales in Chicago are up 125% over last season. Cubs owner P. K. Wrigley will journey to Long Beach to watch the spring games. He's due in town about March 16 . . . Advance ticket sales indicate the two games with the San Francisco Giants on March 21-22 will draw the largest crowds at Blair. Seating will be increased to better than 9,000 when the bleachers are put up along the foul lines . . . Catcher Chris Krug will show "The Kenny Hubbs Story" to the squad Tuesday evening at the Edgewater Inn. The 52-minute movie deals with the life of the Cubs second baseman who was killed in a plane crash on Feb. 13, 1964. Krug says he will gladly show the film to groups in town. "It's really an inspiration to all kids," said Chris.

'Pag' Headed for Big Year? 2 Latins Sign

Combined from Wire Reports

Two Latin outfielders came to terms, two veteran infielders tried new positions and an ex-Long Beach catcher appears headed for his greatest year—these were the news highlights in baseball spring training camps Saturday.

Rico Carty and Sandy Valdespino were the players ending holdouts, Carty signing with the Atlanta Braves for $17,000 and Valdespino with the Minnesota Twins for about $15,000.

Pete Rose, the All-Star second baseman last season, took a shot at third base for Cincinnati, and Pete Ward, the Chicago White Sox's No. 1 hot corner guardian, tried out at first base in moves to give their clubs more versatility.

Rose yielded to make room for Tommy Helms, who continues to impress Red skipper Don Heffner, and Ward switched to fill the void for the ailing and aging Moose Skowron.

MEANWHILE, Pittsburgh's Jim Pagliaroni, a former Long Beach resident now living in Grass Valley, was put in the cleanup spot in the Pirates' intra-squad game slated for today.

The popular 'Pag', who at 27 appears headed for a big year, also was voted by his teammates as the Pirates' player rep, replacing Bob Friend, who was sold this winter to the New York Yanks.

Phillies—Catcher Bob Uecker split a finger catching a foul tip and will be sidelined a day or two.

Pirates—Outfielder Willie Stargell got permission to send for his German Shepherd dog from Pittsburgh. He said he was lonely.

Giants—Long Beach's Ollie Brown will bat in the No. 3 spot in today's San Francisco intra-squad game.

Cardinals—Mike Shannon, an outfielder, will try out as a catcher, says manager Red Schoendienst.

Twins—Jimmy Hall's second homer in two days was the highlight of Minnesota's second squad game, won by the Billy Martins over the Jim Lemons, 6-2.

Ferrie, Johnson Win Virginia Sweepstakes

Jim Ferrie and Dr. Richard Johnson shot 66s to win Class A low net honors in Virginia Country Club's weekly sweepstakes tournament.

Sanders Disqualified After Assuming Four-Stroke Lead

PENSACOLA, Fla. (UPI) Defending champion Doug Sanders, holding a four-stroke lead at the end of the second round of the Pensacola Open golf tournament, was disqualified Saturday for failing to sign his score card.

The 32-year-old Sanders, seeking a record third championship here, had just finished posting a 14-under-par 130 for the first 36 holes when he was besieged by autograph seekers.

He signed his name at least 20 times but forgot to put it the one place it had to be if he were to remain in the running for the $10,000 first prize that would have made him the leading money-winner on the pro tour this year.

The irate Sanders argued in vain with PGA official Jack Tuthill who refused to change his ruling. Tuthill said that Rule No. 38 of the Association's regulations clearly threw Sanders out of the tournament for his omission.

The rule states that a competitor is responsible for signing his card and returning it to the tournament committee. It says once the card reaches the PGA official scorekeeper, if it has not been signed the penalty is disqualification.

Sanders was in the press room talking about the 67 he shot in Saturday's second round to give him a four-stroke lead over Gay Brewer Jr. of Dallas. An official rushed to the room to inform him of his error but by the time Sanders, who jumped up and dashed out of the room, had reached Tuthill it was ruled he was too late.

"This rule has not been enforced in the past," argued Sanders. "Why enforce it now?"

This is the first time in recent years that a leader in a professional golf tournament has been disqualified for any reason.

Sanders, after losing his argument with Tuthill, stormed from the Pensacola Country Club and drove away.

The disqualification put Brewer, who had a 69 Saturday and a 10-under-par 134, into the lead.

Brewer should have been closer to Sanders than he was but had taken a triple bogey on the 13th hole.

"I'd just as soon not think about that one," the 34-year-old pro from Dallas said when asked about the seven he wound up with on the par-four hole.

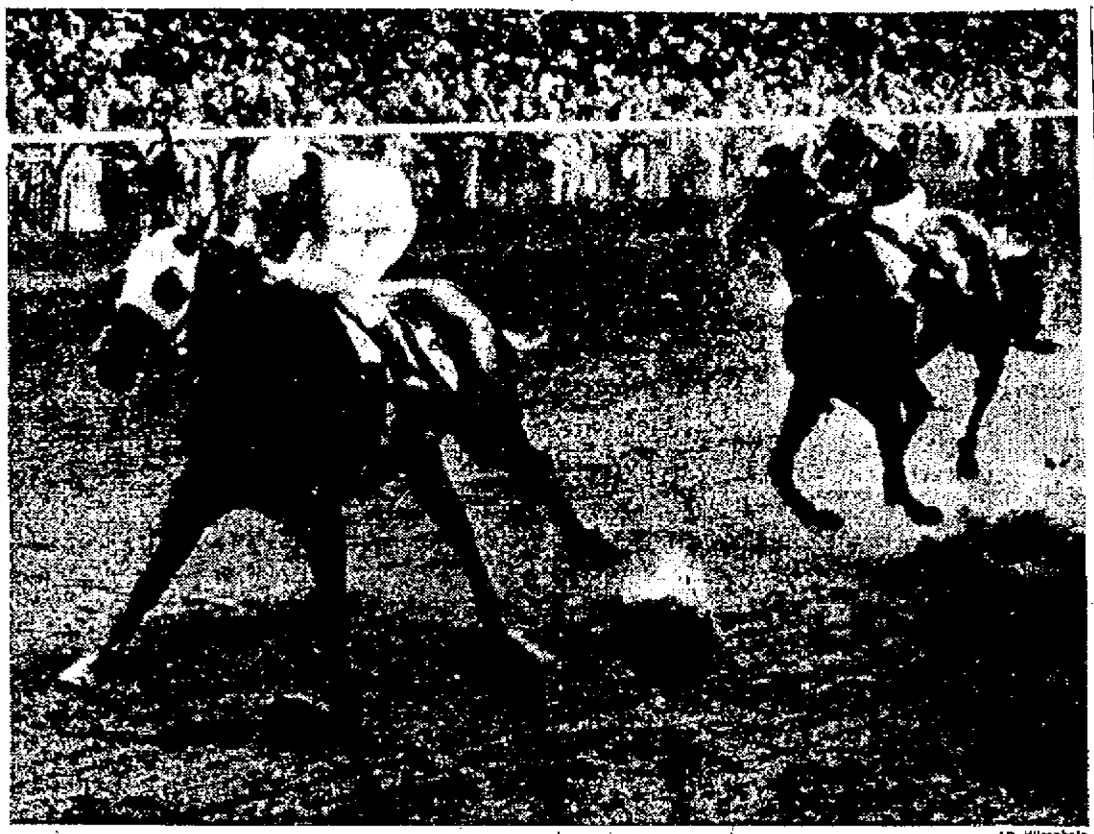
Jacobs' Exhibitionist rushed up in the final strides to challenge and finish a neck behind Shoemaker's horse.



Jockey Jerry Lambert got the longshot, Ri Tux, away from the gate first and the field was tightly bunched as it rounded the clubhouse turn and swung on into the backstretch.

Shoemaker, bidding for his sixth Santa Anita Derby victory, kept close on Ri Tux's pace and went into the lead heading for the far turn.

Then Boldnesian slipped through and opened a lead of 1½ lengths at the head of the stretch. Both Blum and the Shoe went to the whip in the stirring run to the wire.

Saber Mountain appeared to hang just a bit after closing a slight margin in the stretch run. Each colt carried 118 pounds.

Boldnesian returned $5.40, $3.00 and $2.60 across the board; Saber Mountain $2.80 and $2.40 and Exhibitionist, ridden by Braulio Baeza, $2.80.

BLUM PICKS OFF PLUM

Boldnesian, with jockey Walter Blum urging him on, nears the wire two lengths in front of previously unbeaten Saber Mountain in the Santa Anita Derby Saturday. The son of Bold Ruler will have no chance to prove his mettle in the Kentucky Derby, however, since he wasn't nominated for the event by owner William Haggin Perry.

BOLD BIDDER SOLD TO STUD

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — John R. Gaines said Saturday he has purchased Bold Bidder from Paul Falkenstien of Bakersfield and will immediately retire the thoroughbred to stud. The price was not disclosed.

Bold Bidder won the recent $100,000-added Charles H. Strub Stakes at Santa Anita and established a track record for 1¼ miles.

3 Soccer Games at Vets Today

Continental Soccer Football League action continues today at Veterans Stadium with second-place Montebello facing the Lynwood Falcons in the 2:30 main event.

Orange County against Beverly Hills opens the tripleheader at 10:30 followed by the Hollywood Stars and Long Beach Pirates at 12:30.

In the opener, Orange County is favorite to whip Beverly Hills in a warmup to their March 13 National Open Cup game against Seattle at Veterans Stadium.

* * * *

LONG BEACH looked good in the first half last week against Montebello and led, 2-0, but after Oscar Passalacqua and Lazlo Gal were sent to the showers for rough play in the second half, the Pirates barely held on for a 2-2 tie.

Sorokin Sets Drag Record

BAKERSFIELD — Mike Sorokin of Santa Monica roared to a world record Saturday at the U. S. fuel and gas championships when he guided his Chrysler-powered fuel dragster through the quarter in a record time of 7.34 seconds.

Sorokin had a backup run of 7.41 and hit a top speed of 210.76 mph. The Santa Monica speedster will face the top eliminator of today's meeting which begins at 10 a.m.

A fiery accident almost marred Saturday's racing when Nando Haase's fuel dragster flipped, rolled three times and exploded, but the driver from Upland was pulled from the flaming wreckage and was able to walk away.

East-West Drags Draw Top Crowd

Drag Racing Magazine's East vs. West battle at Lions Drag Strip Saturday night pulled in the largest crowd in the strip's history, 12,500, as the local drivers swamped the Easterns, 8-3.

Top speed of the night went to Gas Ronda in a Mustang and the Sox-Martin team in a Barracuda, each turning 154.37 mph. Dick Landley in a Dodge capture low ET with a 9.62 timing.

RACING ROUNDUP

Just About, Swift Ruler Romp

Compiled from Wire Reports

Just About, a 4-year-old invader from Florida, captured the 39th running of the $77,000 New Orleans Handicap Saturday, setting a track record.

The 18,317 bettors pumped $170,518 on the race, a pool record for a single race at the historic Fair Grounds track.

Just About, a 9-1 shot, returned $21.20, $9.60 and $6.20. R. Thomas returned $5.20 and $3 while Bonetero paid $3.

The 1965 Arkansas Derby winner, Swift Ruler, covered the mile and 70 yards in record-breaking time to win the $10,000 Southland Handicap at Oaklawn Park in Hot Springs, Ark.

The largest crowd of the 1966 Oaklawn season, 17,411, saw the 1965 Kentucky Derby entry move from third at the head of the stretch to score by three-quarters of a length over Bay Phantom.

A solid favorite, Swift Ruler returned $4.20, $3 and $2.60. Bay Phantom, winner of two handicaps here this season, paid $3.20 and $3 and Climax 2nd returned $4.50 to show. Swift Ruler was timed over a fast track in 1:39 2/5, one-fifth of a second better than Eight Again's Oaklawn mark on March 25, 1961.

Wheatley Stable's Bold and Brave easily won the $18,625 Hutcheson Stakes at Gulfstream Park in Miami and earned a possible start in the Florida Derby with stablemates Buckpasser and Stupendous.

* * * *

With Jockey Chuck Baltazar aboard, Wide To Right was timed in 1:45⅘ over a "good" track and paid $4.20, $2.60 and $2.60 across the board.

Double Warrant, who closed strongly in the stretch to nip Navy Admiral at the wire, returned $8.00 and $5.60.

Saari Leads Trojans to Swim Title

USC Star Wins 3rd Event, 38th AAWU Point

University of Southern California coasted to its sixth straight AAWU swimming championship Saturday night led by Olympian Roy Saari.

The Trojans posted 264½ points for the three-day competition with UCLA taking second on 212½ points. Saari scored 38 points in the meet as he captured three events and anchored two relays teams that finished second.

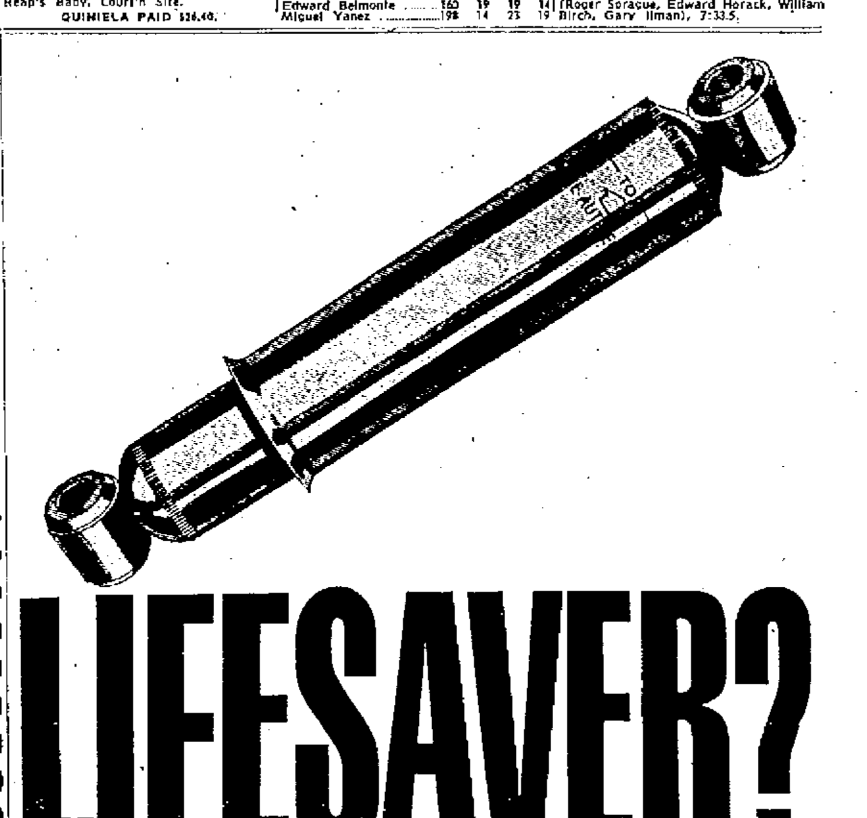
USC next travels to the Air Force Academy where it is due to defend its NCAA championship March 24-26.

Saari won three events in as many days, including a first in the 1,650 freestyle which he finished in 17:27.8. He helped two Trojan relay teams place second.

Summaries:
1650-yard freestyle—Roy Saari, USC, 17:27.8; 100-yard freestyle—Jim Keller, UCLA, 48.6; 200-yard backstroke—Mike Berger, UCLA, 2:01.0; 200-yard breaststroke — Bob Browning, Wash. State, 2:15.3; 100-yard butterfly—John Lambert, USC, :53.9; 3-meter springboard diving—Del Pletcher, Calif., 441.45; 400-yard freestyle relay—USC (Mike Siebert, Buddy Bales, Sandy Gilchrist, Dean Willeford) 7:15.9.
Final scores: USC 264½; UCLA 212½; Stanford 176½; Oregon 65; Washington 57½; California 40½; Washington State 36½; Oregon State 27.

San Diego Aquas Beat 49ers for Conference Title

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Defending champion San Diego State College Saturday won the 1966 California Collegiate Athletic Association swimming title with 182½ points.



San Diego won 10 of 18 events during the three-day meet.

Other teams in order: Long Beach State, 84; San Fernando Valley, 60½; Cal Poly (San Luis Obispo), 59; Fresno State 43; Los Angeles State, 32.

The winning total topped the record of 158 points made by Long Beach State in 1958.

Final day winners:
1,650-yard freestyle—George Tomlinson, San Diego, 18:10.9.
100-yard freestyle—Gary Ilman, Long Beach, 48.9.

Fish Paradise at Los Mochis

Nine persons are back from Los Mochis, Mexico, with some glowing stories of hunting and fishing, and if their experiences don't make you want to travel southward, then you'd better take your blood count and see if you are still with us.

They were Mr. and Mrs. J. E. (Mac) McClintock (the Mac of Pierpoint Landing and TV programs); Mr. and Mrs. Harry Merrick, the photographing team, also of Long Beach; Mr. and Mrs. Pang Wheaton, Long Beach; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jackline, formerly of Long Beach but now of Santa Fe, N.M., and Jed Welsh, Long Beach tackle manufacturer.

McClintock and Merrick were making two movies for future TV presentation, with Jed Welsh as the star of the outdoor series. The others were along to fish and have fun. The Jacklines, vacationing at Yucatan, flew northward to join the crowd, and they were house guests of the McClintocks here last week. Jackline and his wife lived in Long Beach for 20 years, then moved to New Mexico four years ago.

While here, Jackline was a partner in Pacific Air Industries. He now operates a restaurant-night club in Santa Fe and is building a lodge in the mountains above that city.

The men in the party found excellent hunting for doves and ducks before embarking upon fishing expeditions. Mac said that doves, both mourning and white-wings, were there by the thousands. In fact, a Mexican guide, when asked "how many?" said "millions."

THERE WERE LITERALLY HUNDREDS of possible shots all the time, Mac reported. "It was just unbelievable," he said. Duck shooting was a bit more difficult. Hunters were taken to brushy shooting grounds, where they crawled through the weeds and heavier cover, while the guides flushed birds on the water. The birds, in turn, flew over the area, affording plenty of good shooting.

A Mexican hunting license is necessary to bring birds back to the United States.

They fished in Topolabampo Bay, Aztec name for watering place of the lions (sea lions, that is), and caught large yellowtail, sierra, grouper, and bonito of tremendous size. Mac said that the bonito there appeared to be a cross between bluefin tuna and skipjack.

While in Los Mochis, their host was Senor Roberto Balderama, owner of the Santa Anita Hotel. They found the accommodations to be excellent, the food of good quality, plenty of pure water and fruits and vegetables.

Mac, Merrick, Welsh and this writer expect to go there in April for a possible world-record snook in El Fuerte River. I didn't say that I would catch it, but one can always hope.

Los Mochis is reached via Tijuana and Baja Airlines, which flies Lockheed Lodestars in three hours to the landing strip. Wide World Travel, Los Angeles, is handling package trips of three days, or longer. One also can drive to Los Mochis, via Mazatlan.

GRUNION TIME IS HERE again, with the first run starting Tuesday night at 10:30 o'clock. Other runs this week will be at 11 p.m. Wednesday, 11:40 p.m. Thursday and 12:30 a.m. Saturday.

For the benefit of those strangers or tourists in our midst, grunion are tiny silver-colored fish that leave the surf at certain times to spawn in the sand. The male fish follow the females and fertilize the eggs.

Veterans at the business of hunting grunion will tell you that it's almost like a snipe hunt. The fish are "supposed" to hit the beaches at certain times, but the grains of the little silversides don't work at all times to the benefit of mankind.

It takes patience, fortitude, a willingness to get wet and a lot of luck to be on the right beach at the right time. Our nights presently are not the best of the year from the standpoint of warm weather, so it is advisable to dress in clothes suitable for the occasion, not sheer bathing suits.

Grunion hunters 16 years of age and over need a sportfishing license, and they must hands only for catching he fish. No nets, no deep holes in the beach and no sacks! There is no limit but grunioneers are asked to take only those fish that they can use. Scaled, cleaned and fried to a golden brown, the fish are delightfully different in taste.

There are two four-day runs this month. The next occurs March 24 through 27. The season is closed in April and May. June 3 is the next start.

TWO LONG BEACH CONTRACTORS, brothers Einar E. and Bernhard Fekjar, certainly can add a bit to last Friday's column about the dangers of wind and waves on the Salton Sea. They were caught in a storm that almost swamped their 16-foot boat.

They went fishing on Friday, Feb. 25, got out in the middle of the sea and lost their way due to high winds which created a dusty condition everywhere. They were in the southern end of the sea and finally got into a brushy section.

Darkness came and they saw lights far away. Bernhard, who lives at 4235 Keever Ave., Long Beach, and who is a professional skier accustomed to cold weather, went over the side of the boat and, half-frozen from spray, attempted to make his way through the brush.

Later, he returned to the grounded boat and Einar, who resides at 5940 Gundry Ave., and they tried to push their boat through the brush to shore. They spent the entire night attempting to save their boat. The 35-horsepower motor was of no use because of the shallow water.

The lights which they saw were at Benson's Landing. They salvaged their boat when daylight came and got it back to the original starting point.

Einar says that the night was one of the worst they ever spent and that all boaters and fishermen should be extremely careful in the sea.

(Editor's Note: Donnell Culpepper will be on special assignment this week. His next column will appear next Sunday.)

Union Man Heads Ballplayers

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Major league baseball players ended a 2½-year search for an executive director of their association Saturday with the selection of Marvin J. Miller of Pittsburgh, a 48-year-old labor union leader, for a two-year term at $50,000 a year.

Final approval of Miller, assistant to the president of the United Steelworkers of America, will be subject to a vote of the players.

But Bob Allison of the Minnesota Twins, speaking for the 20 players who met for 4½ hours, expressed confidence that Miller would receive approval.

The players also will vote on a permanent office which the representatives recommended be located in New York.

Miller, who has accepted the position pending the outcome of the players' vote, will take over the job originally offered Judge Robert Cannon of Milwaukee, the unpaid counsel of the Major League Baseball Players Association.

Cannon, recently appointed to a new six-year term on the Federal Court of Appeals, turned down the baseball position because he didn't want to move his family to New York.

Although the executive director will represent the players in any labor disputes with club management, he insisted that the fact that Miller has a labor union background had no bearing on his selection.

"His selection was made from a group screened by a special committee," said Allison. He declined to name any of the others who were considered.

Baseball commissioner William D. Eckert, who along with baseball's executive committee gave approval to the players' plan Friday, sat in on the meeting. But he took no part in the discussions. Lee MacPhail, administrators in Eckert's office, also was an observer.

"This is strictly a players' project," Allison said. "The money to pay for the director's office will come from the All-Star game."

The veteran Minnesota outfielder pointed out that the players receive 95% of the All-Star receipts and that 35% of that amount will go to pay for the new office.

Bob Friend, now with the New York Yankees and one of the pioneers of the players association along with Robin Roberts of Houston and Harvey Keunn of the Chicago Cubs, said Miller will be responsible for all dealings involving pensions and insurance.

Only the Dodgers were not represented at the meeting.

U.S. HOCKEY TEAM ROUTED BY RUSSIANS

LJUBLJANA, Yugoslavia (UPI) — Defending titlist Russia, shooting and scoring virtually at will, blitzed the United States, 11-0, Saturday night and moved into a tie for first place in the world hockey championships.

Burly defenseman Aleksander Ragulin and right-wing Vladimir Vikulov scored two goals each to lead the Russian rout of the outclassed Americans, who had only one genuine scoring opportunity in the game.

Russia's victory deadlocked the defenders with Canada and Czechoslovakia for the lead after two games each. Canada, which crushed the U.S., 7-2, in an opening-round clash Thursday, battered Poland, 6-0, Saturday while Czechoslovakia drubbed Finland, 8-1.

East Germany scored a spectacular 4-1 upset victory over Sweden in the other group A game.

The Russians scored two goals in the first period, six in the second and three in the third against two American goalies.

SCUBA Course at YMCA

A SCUBA diving course for persons 15 and older will be conducted at the Downtown Long Beach YMCA starting Monday, 7-10 p.m.

Classes will be held on nine successive Mondays. Fee for the 32-hour course is $20, and gradutes will receive national and Los Angeles County certification.

Instructor is Nick Icorn, a National YMCA and L.A. County underwater instructor.

SCUBA is the abbreviation for self-contained underwater breathing apparatus.

Ivies Stand United, Vote for Boycott

PRINCETON, N.J. (UPI)— The battle between the Ivy League and the National Collegiate Athletic Association broke wide open Saturday when the league voted to boycott all NCAA-sponsored events.

Princeton University president Robert F. Goheen, speaking for the league, said the boycott was called because Yale University and the University of Pennsylvania were barred from NCAA participation.

"The eight members of the Ivy League group have determined that they must all accept ineligibility," Goheen said.

The NCAA declared the two Ivy colleges ineligible Friday after the schools refused to comply with the association's 1.6 academic standard.

* * * *

PENNSYLVANIA, as the league champion, was scheduled to participate in the NCAA basketball tournament next week until it was ruled ineligible.

The NCAA rule requires athletes of all member institutions to maintain at least a 1.6 average out of a possible 4.0.

Goheen, chairman of the Ivy League policy committee, said the league was against treating athletes differently from other students. He also said the league was opposed to barring students from athletic participation just for low grades.

Goheen noted the 1.6 rule would work hardest against colleges with high admissions requirements such as the Ivy League schools.

Super Modifieds Go at Riverside

Super modified roadsters, the fastest short track race cars in the world, will compete for the first time on Riverside International Raceway's half-mile oval today.

Ontario's Bucky Stoner, California Auto Racing champion in 1965, and San Diego's Dick Fries, titlist from San Diego Racing Assn., and '63-'64 CAR champ George Durade of Eagle Rock will head a 50-car field.

Davis Cup Stars Win at La Jolla

LA JOLLA (AP) — Three members of the U.S. Davis Cup team advanced Saturday to the semi-finals of the 77th annual Pacific Coast men's sectional tennis doubles, being played at the La Jolla Beach and Tennis Club.

RALSTON

Dennis Ralston of Bakersfield and Charles Pasarell of UCLA defeated Bill Bond of La Jolla and Tomas Koch of Brazil, 8-6, 6-3 and 6-2 in three of five sets.

Arthur Ashe and Ian Crookenden of UCLA beat Joaquin Loyo-Mayo and Stan Smith of USC, 6-3, 6-3, 3-6 and 8-6.

Ralston, Pasarell and Ashe are on the Davis team.

Dakotans Earn Curling Title; Norwalk Falls

HIBBING, Minn. (AP)—North Dakota won the 1966 United States Men's Curling Association championship Saturday, defeating Minnesota, 5-3, in final round competition.

California's Granite Curling Club of Norwalk, tied with North Dakota going into final play, lost to Michigan, 7-5.

Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan wound up tied for third with 8-3 records. North Dakota finished 10-1 and California 9-2.

Other final standings included Washington 7-4, Illinois 5-6, New Jersey and New York 3-8, Massachusetts 2-9, and Alaska 1-11.

The Fargo, N.D., team of Dr. Joe Zbacnik, Bruce Roberts, Mile O'Leary and Gerald Totant will compete for the world's curling championship at Vancouver, B.C., later this month.

Singapore Golf Tied

SINGAPORE (UPI) — Japan's Hideyo Sugimoto, playing steady and cautious golf, moved into a tie with faltering Ben Arda of the Philippines Saturday for the third-round lead of the $13,333 Singapore Open golf championship.

INDOOR RODEO

Queen Hopefuls Vie on Horses

The heir apparent to the queen of the Pacific Indoor Rodeo will be judged on horsemanship Monday afternoon at 4:30 at Spiller's Lakewood Stable in Lakewood, according to director Lex Connelly.

All interested girls are invited to enter the competition.

Last year's queen, Darlene Ermis, gained regional attention when it was revealed she had trained an entire year for the opportunity to become the rodeo queen. She later went on to earn the title of Miss California in the Miss World contest.

This year's Pacific Indoor Rodeo will be held March 25-27 in the Long Beach Arena.

* * * *

AS MUCH as the action-packed contests, the showmanship and pacing of the PIR have made the Long Beach event an annual success.

This year a troupe of trick riders trained by the acknowledged master of this daring form of acrobatics, Dick Griffith, will appear. The inter-service match will pit sailors of the U.S. Fleet against the U.S. Marine Corps rodeo team from Camp Pendleton, with the sailors looking for their first win.

Cowboys will again hold a wild cow milking contest, and if this doesn't get enough laughs there will be two rodeo clowns, Frank Curry of New York City and Denny Allen, neither of whom have ever been seen in California.

Laker King to Speak to Poly Athletes

Jim King of the Lakers will speak at a meeting of the Poly High Letterman's Council Wednesday morning, March 16, in the school cafeteria.

King, a Long Beach resident, is one of the more popular NBA players and recently won an award for his hustle. He is a third-year pro from Tulsa averaging 7.6 points per game.

Volleyball Returns to L.B.

Top-flight volleyball returns to Long Beach Saturday when the Downtown YMCA hosts a day-long "AA" invitational tournament.

The Long Beach "Y" is reviving its volleyball program after a lapse of several years and will field a team composed of Glen Stone, Dave Hendrickson, Don Carbonara, Dave Liles, Ray Wenger, Randy Sandefur, Ron Kirkwood, Wendy Skelton and Captain Chuck Lass.

The L. B. "AA" team plans to compete in the nationals at Grand Rapids, Mich., May 11-14.

The only year Long Beach ever won the nationals was 1950 when a six-man squad swept the title in stunning fashion.

International Expansion for Baseball?

Japan, Canada Boosted for Major Franchises

NEW YORK (AP) — With further expansion expectable, baseball is cautiously eyeing foreign fields.

Canada is preferred, and Japan and Mexico draw minority support.

However, an Associated Press survey showed that most owners feel there are American cities that must be satisfied before major league franchises are awarded abroad.

Only the Cleveland Indians and Chicago Cubs dissented on the subject of Canada, with the other 18 teams anywhere from cordial to enthusiastic on the subject.

Japan as a possible site for a major league franchise drew qualified support from the New York Mets, Los Angeles Dodgers, California Angels, Chicago White Sox, Atlanta Braves, Philadelphia Phillies and Kansas City Athletics.

The same clubs looked with favor on Mexico.

If any franchise is given to Japan the feeling is that there should be two major league teams in the Asian nation to simplify transportation problems.

* * * *

A STRONG voice in favor of sending baseball abroad has been raised by the new commissioner, William D. Eckert.

"I can vizualize within the foreseeable future", Eckert said, "the spread of major league baseball on an international scale to include Japan, Canada and several Latin American countries."

E. J. (Buzzie) Bavasi, executive vice president and general manager of the Dodgers — "I'd favor a Japanese franchise if it was feasible. I can see expansion into Canada, provided they have domed stadiums because of the weather. I don't know enough about the economics in Mexico. I know there is enough fan interest but it would depend on the local government finances."

Robert O. Reynolds, president of the California Angels — "Assuming expansion and its problems are restyled in this country, I would favor expansion of baseball internationally. In so doing, I would think it would be in order to consider one or more franchises in Japan and Mexico and Canada or wherever there is an established interest in baseball and sufficient interest and fan support to underwrite the cost, including transportation."

Lakewood in Slo-Pitch Association

By CHUCK MEDICK

Lakewood has been awarded a franchise in the Western Slo-pitch Softball Assn.

The team will be known as the Lakewood Lancers and will be managed by Bob Jones. Tryouts will be held Tuesday and Thursday evening at Mayfair Park at 7 p.m.

The team will use Mayfair Park as a home base, playing on alternate Friday evenings throughout the summer. The league schedule begins April 22.

The league is considered one of the nations best in the rapidly expanding sport. National tournaments are held every year, this year, in Chicago in early September.

The Long Beach Navy will also have a team in the league as well as the defending champion Torrance Tapa Keggers, the Santa Ana Bombers, Santa Ana Rebels, Gardena Royals, and a yet unnamed team from El Segundo.

The league winner will qualify for the slo-pitch regional championships tentatively set for Mayfair Park in late August.

Tag Bout Slated

Alberto Torres will team with Jack Lanza against the badman duo of El Mongol and Nikita Mulkovich Tuesday night in the Municipal Auditorium main event.

THE BLOND BOMBER

Bobby Hull, the Chicago Black Hawks' 50-goal left winger, drives for another one. Hull tied own National Hockey League record last week.

SUPEREST OF SUPER-STARS

Bobby's a Hull-uva Hockey Player

CHICAGO (UPI) — A lot of teams may resent their "super-stars," but the Chicago Black Hawks have only the best to say about Bobby Hull.

When he got his 50th goal Wednesday, the first player to grab him and hoist him in air in congratulation and celebration was Stan Mikita, the other "super-star" with whom Hull is rumored to carry on a constant fued."

Hull and Mikita constantly must deny this "fued" report. Actually, they're close friends and off-the-ice buddies, and have been since their days playing together in junior A at St. Catherines, Ont.

Hull's attitude, of course, helps these relations. He passes off almost as much as he shoots, and when he got the 50th goal his first comment was that "Stan and Kenny (Wharram) made it for me."

Hull has been fair to everybody in his bid for 50 goals. He scored 8 against Montreal, 9 against Detroit, 10 against Toronto, 11 against Boston and 12 against New York.

Terry Sawchuck of Toronto and Roger Crozier of Detroit gave up 7 goals each, Ed Giacomin of New York and Lorne Wrosley of Montreal 6 each, and Ed Johnston of Boston 5.

The hardest hit rivals were Gerry Cheevers of Boston and Cesare Maniago of New York, each touched for four goals in one game.

As Hull goes, so go the Black Hawks. He has scored in 31 Hawk games and Chicago has won 22 of these, lost 6 and tied 3.

Hull's scoring chase brought out the best defensive characteristics of some NHL players. Montreal assigned Claude Provost to shadow Hull, Boston picked Ed Westfall, and New York chose Bob Nevin. They didn't shut him off completely but they did their job.

"It's not hockey, I guess," Hull said, "but they sure make it a lot harder."

Westfall was the standout. Unless the Bruins were so far behind they had to play fast and loose, he covered Hull like skin. In one game Hull got only three shots, and Westfall never looked at the puck.

"If he looked sometime," Hull said, "maybe I could get it."

In the six seasons since, Hull has averaged 40 goals per year. He tied the record of 50 goals in a season in 1961-62 and has never had fewer than 31 goals in a season after those first two years.

His blistering wrist shot takes off at what seems a mere flick. His overpowering slap shot has been clocked at more than 100 mph.

His coach, Billy Reay, calls him "the greatest hockey player I've ever seen.

"In my time, I played against Maurice Richard and Gordie Howe, and I say Hull is better than either of them. He can skate faster and better than either one and he shoots harder."

Hull's chief adversaries, the NHL's goaltenders, view him as something of a superman.

Toronto's Johnny Bower marvels at his quickness. "The puck comes at you with such terrific speed, it's all over in a split second.

DONNELL CULPEPPER

Fish Paradise at Los Mochis

Nine persons are back from Los Mochis, Mexico, with some glowing stories of hunting and fishing, and if their experiences don't make you want to travel southward, then you'd better take your blood count and see if you are still with us.

They were Mr. and Mrs. J. E. (Mac) McClintock (the Mac of Pierpoint Landing and TV programs); Mr. and Mrs. Harry Merrick, the photographing team, also of Long Beach; Mr. and Mrs. Pang Wheaton, Long Beach; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jackline, formerly of Long Beach but now of Santa Fe, N.M., and Jed Welsh, Long Beach tackle manufacturer.

McClintock and Merrick were making two movies for future TV presentation, with Jed Welsh as the star of the outdoor series. The others were along to fish and have fun. The Jacklines, vacationing at Yucatan, flew northward to join the crowd, and they were house guests of the McClintocks here last week. Jackline and his wife lived in Long Beach for 20 years, then moved to New Mexico four years ago.

While here, Jackline was a partner in Pacific Air Industries. He now operates a restaurant-night club in Santa Fe and is building a lodge in the mountains above that city.

The men in the party found excellent hunting for doves and ducks before embarking upon fishing expeditions. Mac said that doves, both mourning and white-wings, were there by the thousands. In fact, a Mexican guide, when asked "how many?" said "millions."

THERE WERE LITERALLY HUNDREDS of possible shots all the time, Mac reported. "It was just unbelievable," he said. Duck shooting was a bit more difficult. Hunters were taken to brushy shooting grounds, where they crawled through the weeds and heavier cover, while the guides flushed birds on the water. The birds, in turn, flew over the area, affording plenty of good shooting.

A Mexican hunting license is necessary to bring birds back to the United States.

They fished in Topolabampo Bay, Aztec name for watering place of the lions (sea lions, that is), and caught large yellowtail, sierra, grouper, and bonito of tremendous size. Mac said that the bonito there appeared to be a cross between bluefin tuna and skipjack.

While in Los Mochis, their host was Senor Roberto Balderama, owner of the Santa Anita Hotel. They found the accommodations to be excellent, the food of good quality, plenty of pure water and fruits and vegetables.

Mac, Merrick, Welsh and this writer expect to go there in April for a possible world-record snook in El Fuerte River. I didn't say that I would catch it, but one can always hope.

Los Mochis is reached via Tijuana and Baja Airlines, which flies Lockheed Lodestars in three hours to the landing strip. Wide World Travel, Los Angeles, is handling package trips of three days, or longer. One also can drive to Los Mochis, via Mazatlan.

GRUNION TIME IS HERE again, with the first run starting Tuesday night at 10:30 o'clock. Other runs this week will be at 11 p.m. Wednesday, 11:40 p.m. Thursday and 12:30 a.m. Saturday.

For the benefit of those strangers or tourists in our midst, grunion are tiny silver-colored fish that leave the surf at certain times to spawn in the sand. The male fish follow the females and fertilize the eggs.

Veterans at the business of hunting grunion will tell you that it's almost like a snipe hunt. The fish are "supposed" to hit the beaches at certain times, but the grains of the little silversides don't work at all times to the benefit of mankind.

It takes patience, fortitude, a willingness to get wet and a lot of luck to be on the right beach at the right time. Our nights presently are not the best of the year from the standpoint of warm weather, so it is advisable to dress in clothes suitable for the occasion, not sheer bathing suits.

Grunion hunters 16 years of age and over need a sportfishing license, and they must hands only for catching he fish. No nets, no deep holes in the beach and no sacks! There is no limit but grunioneers are asked to take only those fish that they can use. Scaled, cleaned and fried to a golden brown, the fish are delightfully different in taste.

There are two four-day runs this month. The next occurs March 24 through 27. The season is closed in April and May. June 3 is the next start.

TWO LONG BEACH CONTRACTORS, brothers Einar E. and Bernhard Fekjar, certainly can add a bit to last Friday's column about the dangers of wind and waves on the Salton Sea. They were caught in a storm that almost swamped their 16-foot boat.

They went fishing on Friday, Feb. 25, got out in the middle of the sea and lost their way due to high winds which created a dusty condition everywhere. They were in the southern end of the sea and finally got into a brushy section.

Darkness came and they saw lights far away. Bernhard, who lives at 4235 Keever Ave., Long Beach, and who is a professional skier accustomed to cold weather, went over the side of the boat and, half-frozen from spray, attempted to make his way through the brush.

Later, he returned to the grounded boat and Einar, who resides at 5940 Gundry Ave., and they tried to push their boat through the brush to shore. They spent the entire night attempting to save their boat. The 35-horsepower motor was of no use because of the shallow water.

The lights which they saw were at Benson's Landing. They salvaged their boat when daylight came and got it back to the original starting point.

Einar says that the night was one of the worst they ever spent and that all boaters and fishermen should be extremely careful in the sea.

(Editor's Note: Donnell Culpepper will be on special assignment this week. His next column will appear next Sunday.)

Union Man Heads Ballplayers

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Major league baseball players ended a 2½-year search for an executive director of their association Saturday with the selection of Marvin J. Miller of Pittsburgh, a 48-year-old labor union leader, for a two-year term at $50,000 a year.

Final approval of Miller, assistant to the president of the United Steelworkers of America, will be subject to a vote of the players.

But Bob Allison of the Minnesota Twins, speaking for the 20 players who met for 4½ hours, expressed confidence that Miller would receive approval.

The players also will vote on a permanent office which the representatives recommended be located in New York.

Miller, who has accepted the position pending the outcome of the players' vote, will take over the job originally offered Judge Robert Cannon of Milwaukee, the unpaid counsel of the Major League Baseball Players Association.

Cannon, recently appointed to a new six-year term on the Federal Court of Appeals, turned down the baseball position because he didn't want to move his family to New York.

Although the executive director will represent the players in any labor disputes with club management, he insisted that the fact that Miller has a labor union background had no bearing on his selection.

"His selection was made from a group screened by a special committee," said Allison. He declined to name any of the others who were considered.

Baseball commissioner William D. Eckert, who along with baseball's executive committee gave approval to the players' plan Friday, sat in on the meeting. But he took no part in the discussions. Lee MacPhail, administrators in Eckert's office, also was an observer.

"This is strictly a players' project," Allison said. "The money to pay for the director's office will come from the All-Star game."

The veteran Minnesota outfielder pointed out that the players receive 95% of the All-Star receipts and that 35% of that amount will go to pay for the new office.

Bob Friend, now with the New York Yankees and one of the pioneers of the players association along with Robin Roberts of Houston and Harvey Keunn of the Chicago Cubs, said Miller will be responsible for all dealings involving pensions and insurance.

Only the Dodgers were not represented at the meeting.

U.S. HOCKEY TEAM ROUTED BY RUSSIANS

LJUBIJANA, Yugoslavia (UPI) — Defending titlist Russia, shooting and scoring virtually at will, blitzed the United States, 11-0, Saturday night and moved into a tie for first place in the world hockey championships.

Burly defenseman Aleksander Ragulin and right-wing Vladimir Vikulov scored two goals each to lead the Russian rout of the outclassed Americans, who had only one genuine scoring opportunity in the game.

Russia's victory deadlocked the defenders with Canada and Czechoslovakia for the lead after two games each. Canada, which crushed the U.S., 7-2, in an opening-round clash Thursday, battered Poland, 6-0, Saturday while Czechoslovakia drubbed Finland, 8-1.

East Germany scored a spectacular 4-1 upset victory over Sweden in the other group A game.

The Russians scored two goals in the first period, six in the second and three in the third against two American goalies.

SCUBA Course at YMCA

A SCUBA diving course for persons 15 and older will be conducted at the Downtown Long Beach YMCA starting Monday, 7-10 p.m.

Classes will be held on nine successive Mondays. Fee for the 32-hour course is $20, and gradutes will receive national and Los Angeles County certification.

Instructor is Nick Icorn, a National YMCA and L.A. County underwater instructor.

SCUBA is the abbreviation for self-contained underwater breathing apparatus.

Ivies Stand United, Vote for Boycott

PRINCETON, N.J. (UPI)—The battle between the Ivy League and the National Collegiate Athletic Association broke wide open Saturday when the league voted to boycott all NCAA-sponsored events.

Princeton University president Robert F. Goheen, speaking for the league, said the boycott was called because Yale University and the University of Pennsylvania were barred from NCAA participation.

"The eight members of the Ivy League group have determined that they must all accept ineligibility," Goheen said.

The NCAA declared the two Ivy colleges ineligible Friday after the schools refused to comply with the association's 1.6 academic standard.

* * * *

PENNSYLVANIA, as the league champion, was scheduled to participate in the NCAA basketball tournament next week until it was ruled ineligible.

The NCAA rule requires athletes of all member institutions to maintain at least a 1.6 average out of a possible 4.0.

Goheen, chairman of the Ivy League policy committee, said the league was against treating athletes differently from other students. He also said the league was opposed to barring students from athletic participation just for low grades.

Goheen noted the 1.6 rule would work hardest against colleges with high admissions requirements such as the Ivy League schools.

Davis Cup Stars Win at La Jolla

LA JOLLA (AP) — Three members of the U.S. Davis Cup team advanced Saturday to the semi-finals of the 77th annual Pacific Coast men's sectional tennis doubles, being played at the La Jolla Beach and Tennis Club.

RALSTON

Dennis Ralston of Bakersfield and Charles Pasarell of UCLA defeated Bill Bond of La Jolla and Tomas Koch of Brazil, 8-6, 6-3 and 6-2 in three of five sets.

Arthur Ashe and Ian Crookenden of UCLA beat Joaquin Loyo-Mayo and Stan Smith of USC, 6-3, 6-3, 3-6 and 8-6.

Ralston, Pasarell and Ashe are on the Davis team.

Dakotans Earn Curling Title; Norwalk Falls

HIBBING, Minn. (AP)—North Dakota won the 1966 United States Men's Curling Association championship Saturday, defeating Minnesota, 5-3, in final round competition.

California's Granite Curling Club of Norwalk, tied with North Dakota going into final play, lost to Michigan, 7-5.

Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan wound up tied for third with 8-3 records. North Dakota finished 10-1 and California 9-2.

Other final standings included Washington 7-4, Illinois 5-6, New Jersey and New York 3-8, Massachusetts 2-9, and Alaska 1-11.

The Fargo, N.D., team of Dr. Joe Zbacnik, Bruce Roberts, Mile O'Leary and Gerald Totant will compete for the world's curling championship at Vancouver, B.C., later this month.

Singapore Golf Tied

SINGAPORE (UPI) — Japan's Hideyo Sugimoto, playing steady and cautious golf, moved into a tie with faltering Ben Arda of the Philippines Saturday for the third-round lead of the $13,333 Singapore Open golf championship.

INDOOR RODEO

Queen Hopefuls Vie on Horses

The heir apparent to the queen of the Pacific Indoor Rodeo will be judged on horsemanship Monday afternoon at 4:30 at Spiller's Lakewood Stable in Lakewood, according to director Lex Connelly.

All interested girls are invited to enter the competition.

Last year's queen, Darlene Ermis, gained regional attention when it was revealed she had trained an entire year for the opportunity to become the rodeo queen. She later went on to earn the title of Miss California in the Miss World contest.

This year's Pacific Indoor Rodeo will be held March 25-27 in the Long Beach Arena.

* * * *

AS MUCH as the action-packed contests, the showmanship and pacing of the PIR have made the Long Beach event an annual success.

This year a troupe of trick riders trained by the acknowledged master of this daring form of acrobatics, Dick Griffith, will appear. The inter-service match will pit sailors of the U.S. Fleet against the U.S. Marine Corps rodeo team from Camp Pendleton, with the sailors looking for their first win.

Cowboys will again hold a wild cow milking contest, and if this doesn't get enough laughs there will be two rodeo clowns, Frank Curry of New York City and Denny Allen, neither of whom have ever been seen in California.

Laker King to Speak to Poly Athletes

Jim King of the Lakers will speak at a meeting of the Poly High Letterman's Council Wednesday morning, March 16, in the school cafeteria.

King, a Long Beach resident, is one of the more popular NBA players and recently won an award for his hustle. He is a third-year pro from Tulsa averaging 7.6 points per game.

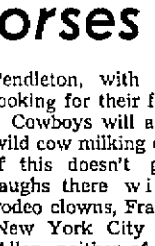
Super Modifieds Go at Riverside

Super modified roadsters, the fastest short track race cars in the world, will compete for the first time on Riverside International Raceway's half-mile oval today.

Ontario's Bucky Stoner, California Auto Racing champion in 1965, and San Diego's Dick Fries, titlist from San Diego Racing Assn., and '63-'64 CAR champ George Durade of Eagle Rock will head a 50-car field.

Volleyball Returns to L.B.

Top - flight volleyball returns to Long Beach Saturday when the Downtown YMCA hosts a day-long "AA" invitational tournament.



The Long Beach "Y" is reviving its volleyball program after a lapse of several years and will field a team composed of Glen Stone, Dave Hendrickson, Don Carbonara, Dave Liles, Ray Wenger, Randy Sandefur, Ron Kirkwood, Wendy Skelton and Captain Chuck Lass.

The L. B. "AA" team plans to compete in the nationals at Grand Rapids, Mich., May 11-14.

The only year Long Beach ever won the nationals was 1950 when a six-man squad swept the title in stunning fashion.

International Expansion for Baseball?

Japan, Canada Boosted for Major Franchises

NEW YORK (AP) — With further expansion expectable, baseball is cautiously eyeing foreign fields.

Canada is preferred, and Japan and Mexico draw minority support.

However, an Associated Press survey showed that most owners feel there are American cities that must be satisfied before major league franchises are awarded abroad.

Only the Cleveland Indians and Chicago Cubs dissented on the subject of Canada, with the other 18 teams anywhere from cordial to enthusiastic on the subject.

Japan as a possible site for a major league franchise drew qualified support from the New York Mets, Los Angeles Dodgers, California Angels, Chicago White Sox, Atlanta Braves, Philadelphia Phillies and Kansas City Athletics.

The same clubs looked with favor on Mexico.

If any franchise is given to Japan the feeling is that there should be two major league teams in the Asian nation to simplify transportation problems.

* * * *

A STRONG voice in favor of sending baseball abroad has been raised by the new commissioner, William D. Eckert.

"I can vizualize within the foreseeable future" Eckert said, "the spread of major league baseball on an international scale to include Japan, Canada, and several Latin American countries."

F. J. (Buzzie) Bavasi, executive vice president and general manager of the Dodgers — "I'd favor a Japanese franchise if it was feasible. I can see expansion into Canada, provided they have domed stadiums because of the weather. I don't know enough about the economics in Mexico. I know there is enough fan interest but it would depend on the local government finances."

Robert O. Reynolds, president of the California Angels — "Assuming expansion and its problems are restyled in this country, I would favor expansion of baseball internationally. In so doing, I would think it would be in order to consider one or more franchises in Japan and Mexico and Canada or wherever there is an established interest in baseball and sufficient interest and fan support to underwrite the cost, including transportation."

Lakewood in Slo-Pitch Association

By CHUCK MEDICK

Lakewood has been awarded a franchise in the Western Slo-pitch Softball Assn.

The team will be known as the Lakewood Lancers and will be managed by Bob Jones. Tryouts will be held Tuesday and Thursday evening at Mayfair Park at 7 p.m.

The team will use Mayfair Park as a home base, playing on alternate Friday evenings throughout the summer. The league schedule begins April 22.

The league is considered one of the nations best in the rapidly expanding sport. National tournaments are held every year, this year, in Chicago in early September.

The Long Beach Navy will also have a team in the league as well as the defending champion Torrance Tapa Keggers, the Santa Ana Bombers, Santa Ana Rebels, Gardena Royals, and a yet unnamed team from El Segundo.

The league winner will qualify for the slo-pitch regional championships tentatively set for Mayfair Park in late August.

Tag Bout Slated

Alberto Torres will team with Jack Lanza against the badman duo of El Mongol and Nikita Mulkovich Tuesday night in the Municipal Auditorium main event.

THE BLOND BOMBER

Bobby Hull, the Chicago Black Hawks' 50-goal left winger, drives for another one. Hull tied own National Hockey League record last week.

SUPEREST OF SUPER-STARS

Bobby's a Hull-uva Hockey Player

CHICAGO (UPI) — A lot of teams may resent their "super-stars," but the Chicago Black Hawks have only the best to say about Bobby Hull.

When he got his 50th goal Wednesday, the first player to grab him and hoist him in air in congratulation and celebration was Stan Mikita, the other "super-star" with whom Hull is rumored to carry on a constant fued."

Hull and Mikita constantly must deny this "fued" report. Actually, they're close friends and off-the-ice buddies, and have been since their days playing together in junior A at St. Catherines, Ont.

Hull's attitude, of course, helps these relations. He passes off almost as much as he shoots, and when he got the 50th goal his first comment was that "Stan and Kenny (Wharram) made it for me."

Hull has been fair to everybody in his bid for 50 goals. He scored 8 against Montreal, 9 against Detroit, 10 against Toronto, 11 against Boston and 12 against New York.

Terry Sawchuck of Toronto and Roger Crozier of Detroit gave up 7 goals each, Ed Giacomin of New York and Lorne Wrosley of Montreal 6 each, and Ed Johnston of Boston 5.

The hardest hit rivals were Gerry Cheevers of Boston and Cesare Maniago of New York, each touched for four goals in one game.

As Hull goes, so go the Black Hawks. He has scored in 31 Hawk games and Chicago has won 22 of these, lost 6 and tied 3.

Hull's scoring chase brought out the best defensive characteristics of some NHL players. Montreal assigned Claude Provost to shadow Hull, Boston picked Ed Westfall, and New York chose Bob Nevin. They didn't shut him off completely but they did their job.

"It's not hockey, I guess," Hull said, "but they sure make it a lot harder."

Westfall was the standout. Unless the Bruins were so far behind they had to play fast and loose, he covered Hull like skin. In one game Hull got only three shots, and Westfall never looked at the puck.

"If he looked sometime," Hull said, "maybe I could get it."

In the six seasons since, Hull has averaged 40 goals per year. He tied the record of 50 goals in a season in 1961-62 and has never had fewer than 31 goals in a season after those first two years.

His blistering wrist shot takes off at what seems a mere flick. His overpowering slap shot has been clocked at more than 100 mph.

His coach, Billy Reay, calls him "the greatest hockey player I've ever seen.

"In my time, I played against Maurice Richard and Gordie Howe, and I say Hull is better than either of them. He can skate faster and better than either one and he shoots harder."

Hull's chief adversaries, the NHL's goaltenders, view him as something of a superman.

Toronto's Johnny Bower marvels at his quickness. "The puck comes at you with such terrific speed, it's all over in a split second.

fire hose:

Quiet Compton Street Is Scene of Major Production for Industry

By ROBERT BECKMAN
Southland Progress Editor

Two hundred years ago, a Dutchman in Amsterdam watched sympathetically as fellow villagers gasped for breath after carrying hundreds of buckets of water to squelch a fire.

The Dutchman went to work and produced a crude leather hose to carry water from its source to the blaze.

The hose leaked—a little at first and more after being dragged over rough cobblestones a few times—and there were other drawbacks.

In 1857, another imaginative man whose name is lost to history, thought of wrapping the crude hose with duck cloth to deter the leaking and scuffing.

* * * *

AS THE YEARS went by, other minor improvements —and the growing use of rubber—produced a rubber-lined linen hose, the standard until polyester fiber was developed along with dacron.

At the National Fire Hose Corporation, 516 Oaks St., Compton, a half-million feet of modern fire hose is produced monthly. And at National's original plant in Gardena, another 250,000 feet is manufactured during the same 30-day period.

Ray Pepp, president, is proud of the production record, of his 82 employes and the fact "ours is the largest loom room in the West."

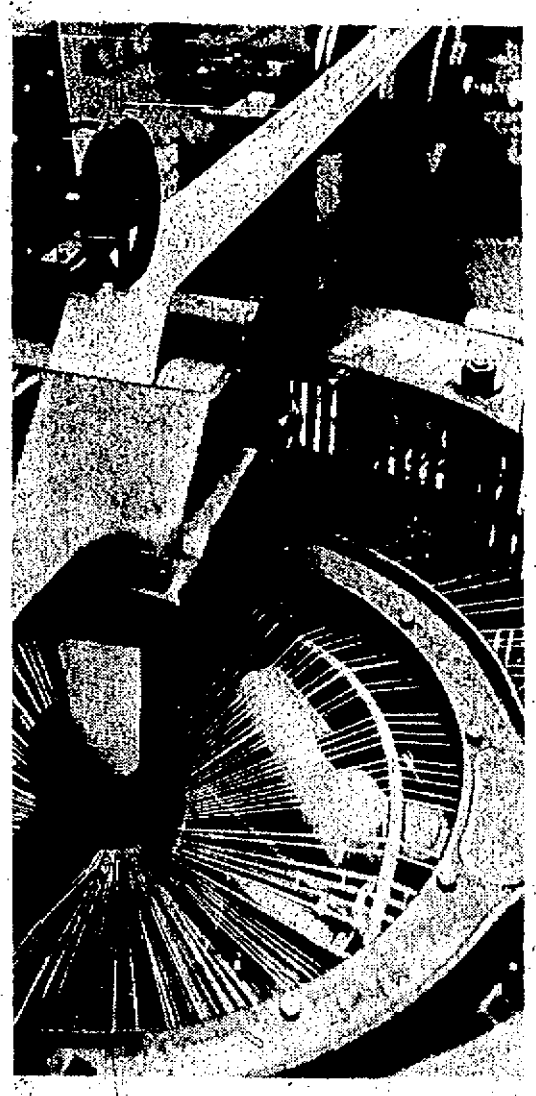
* * * *

THE GARDENA PLANT went into operation 19 years ago, soon is to be assimilated into the Compton complex, now five years old.

Plant Manager Joseph Aubuchon—young, likeable and on a first-name basis with all the employes (40% are women)—gazes over a huge warehouse section and muses:

"Our hose goes to all segments of industry, to small villages and immense cities, and to many foreign countries. Latest foreign order came from a huge American industry in Africa."

Aubuchon uses such terms as "single jacket," "double jacket loose edge," "synthetic rubber-covered," "mill hose" and "flex fold" easier than most people talk of the weather.



* * * *

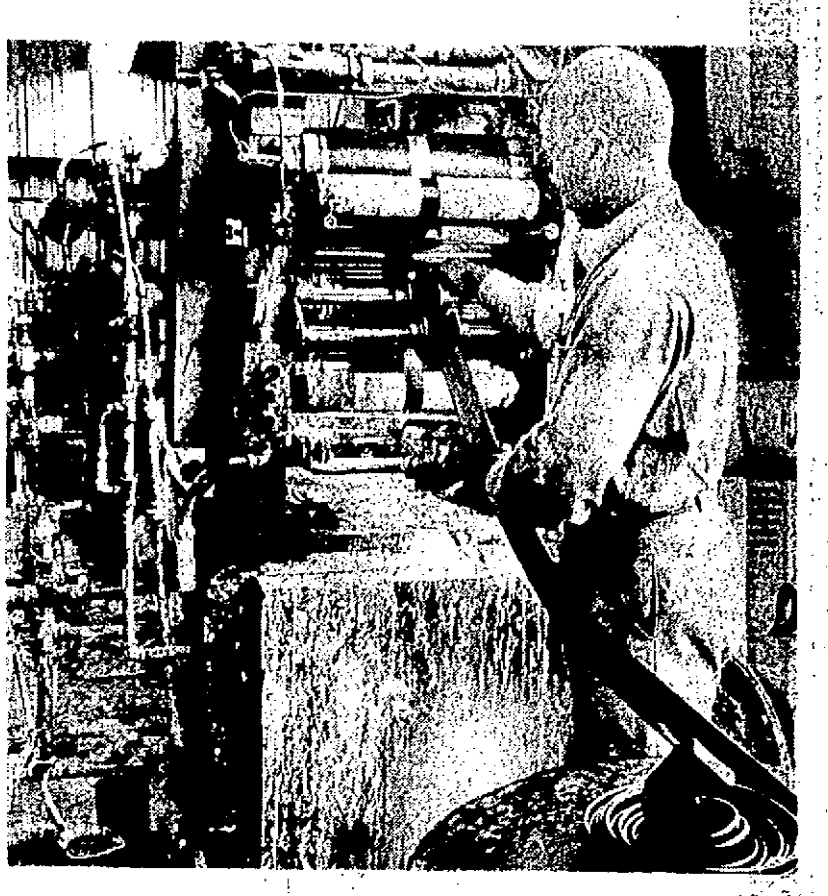
MILL HOSE is a general purpose product for clean-up in factories and light-duty fire protection. Forestry hose, specially constructed, will not rip or tear under rough use while neoprene-covered hose is designed for fire protection use in oil refineries, chemical and acid plants.

Flex fold and super flex fold hoses fit easily in all types of racks and reels and the more polyester used, the more immune to damage from mildew and dry rot.

"I heard a man say: 'A fire hose is a fire hose is a fire hose . . .'" Aubuchon explained, "but if he had only known how many types, how many specifications, how many different raw materials and how many fine workmen are involved in the product he sees lying on the street at the scene of a fire.

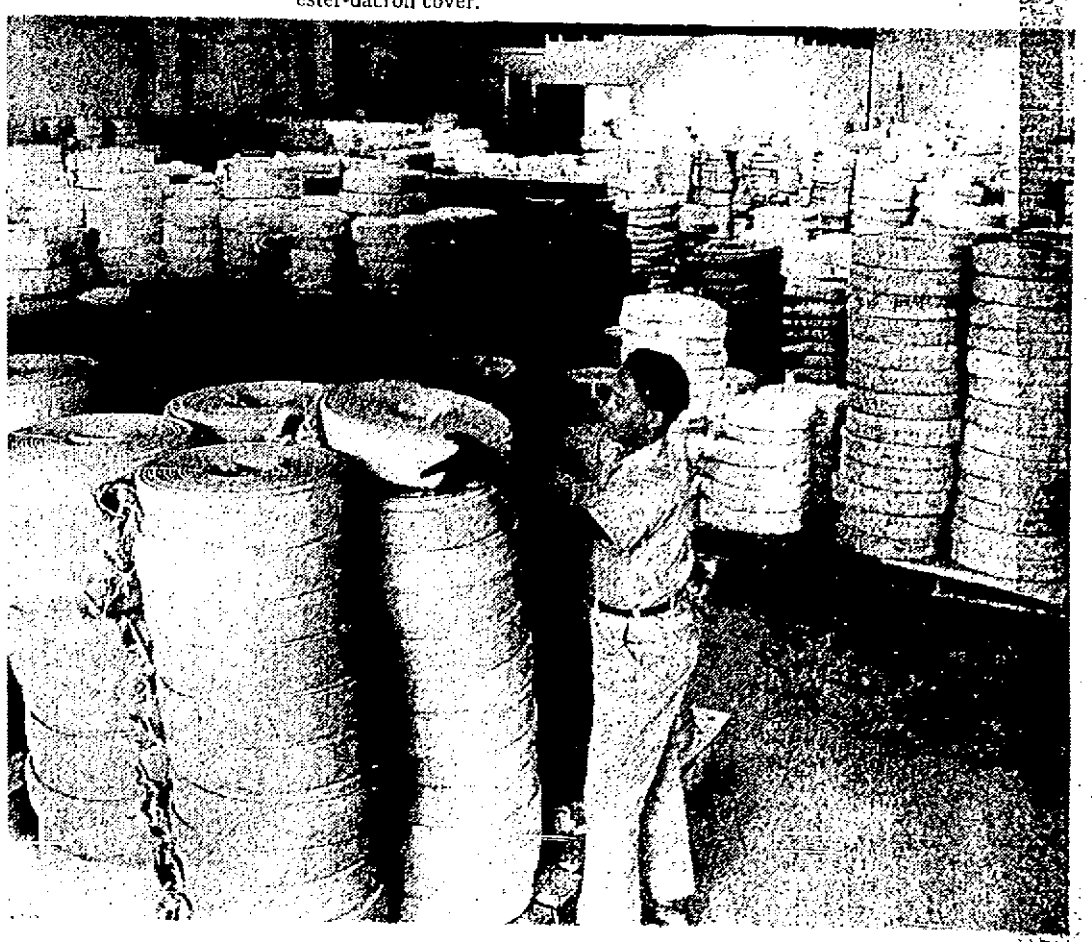
"Then he'd say: 'Now that's real fire hose!'"

STEP NO. 3—Meter shows day's 385th foot of hose covering rising out of purring loom. Thread is fed through multitude of slots from creelers' room below. Superintendent of loom room is Mrs. Olga Dundas, whose ear can detect the slightest change in humming tone associated with her department.



STEP NO. 4—Machine in distance at top of picture sends metal line zooming through cloth cover on formation table. When line's hook appears, workman quickly attaches rubber liner to be pulled back through length of covering. High-pressure lamination follows.

—Staff Photos by TOM SHAW



STEP NO. 2—Largest loom room in the West hums with a pleasant steadiness as 42 machines weave hose covering faster than the eye can follow. Florence Sens checks "hobbin spool."

STEP NO. 5—Richard Young feeds long lengths of semi-synthetic rubber into curing machine that also prepares it for lamination to inside of polyester-dacron cover.

STEP NO. 1—Five creelers, women who keep watch on and replenish depleted spools, are needed in this room below looms. Total of 20,000 spools daily flow upward through floor slots. Lorraine Werner ties in new spool with no slowdown.

STEP NO. 6—Warehouse worker Willard Jayton stacks hose in specification categories, readying the 50 to 150-foot-long sections for shipment to distributors all across United States and in many foreign countries. Latest foreign shipment went to Africa.

Use of Inland Waterways Spurs New Industry

By KEN CHILCOTE
Business Editor

Situated as we are with two of the world's greatest ports, Long Beach and Los Angeles, we know the value of our economy of water transportation facilities. But we may be overlooking the growth and importance of inland waterways.

About 20 cents of every dollar of the gross national product is spent on transportation. This means that transportation costs can be a vital factor in determining an industry's chance for success in any particular area.

For years barge operations on key rivers have been increasing and much greater use of the inland waterways is foreseen in the near future.

Joseph Andreae, manager of Humble Oil and Refining Co.'s marine department, reports that last year the nation's 25,000 miles of inland waterways carried 10% of the freight hauled in the U.S.

* * * *

THESE WATERWAYS provide some 80,000 shipboard jobs compared to the 47,000 on the much more publicized U.S. flag ocean-going fleet of ships," he added.

Newest development will find land-locked Tulsa linked to Mississippi River. The 450-mile waterway will have a tremendous impact on the economy of the seven states along the Arkansas River waterway, says Andreae.

A City of Tulsa-Rogers County Port Authority already has been established to manage the shipments. The project also will provide effective flood control and water conservation in the valley, engineers declare.

* * * *

CONSTRUCTION has started on five model homes in Fairy Valley at Studebaker and South Street, to be used for sales of 400 homes to follow. It is another development by R. A. Watt of Gardena, well known Southland developer. The homes will have from 1700 to 2300 square feet in seven or eight rooms.

* * * *

TO MEET the growing demand for integrated circuits, Raytheon Co. is establishing a new production facility in its Santa Ana plant. Using 20,000 square feet in the Raytheon Computer plant, the integrated circuit facility will be operational by July.

* * * *

LAS VEGAS is letting the world know in a big way how the city is gaining in popularity for conventions. Total conventions last year increased 17% over the previous year with attendance up 64%.

Incidentally, the city also reported gross winnings in gambling casinos was $166 million, up 3.1%.

Economic Activity on Upswing

	1957-59 Average	Year Ago	Month Ago	Week Ago	Latest Week
BUSINESS WEEK Index	100	138.7	150.1	150.2	150.3

The tempo of economic activity is quickening everywhere you look—so much so that new and revised figures have propelled the Index up over the 150 mark, not only for the last two weeks but for a month ago as well.

Just about every one of the dozen Index components is on the upside.

Two heavyweight components, machinery output and transportation equipment, are the star performers. Machinery runs the gamut from computers to machine tools, from dishwashers to toasters; transportation equipment rounds up aircraft and parts, railroad gear, shipbuilding, and missiles—everything for transport save cars and trucks.

THE TWO FIGURES are only available monthly and about four weeks late; statisticians put them on a weekly basis and revise the Index backwards, estimating recent weeks on the basis of the previous month.

For January, machinery stood at 174.0, up no less than 15.5% over January of 1965. And transportation equipment production soared some 26% over last year.

While in January, defense production began to figure a bit more prominently, it would be wrong to ascribe the boom to Vietnam. Rather it's a cross-the-board affair affecting nearly every kind of business in the nation.

Liebenguth Ending 49 Years in Banking Field

C. F. LIEBENGUTH

Ending a 49-year career in banking, Charles F. Liebenguth, vice president and manager of the Bank of America, First and Pine Avenue branch, retired March 1.

Beginning his career as a bank messenger in 1917, Liebenguth joined Bank of America in 1933 at the Los Angeles headquarters. In 1936 he was promoted to assistant cashier in the loan supervision department and three years later was transferred to Long Beach as assistant manager of the First and Pine branch.

In 1953 he moved to the Fourth and Pine Avenue main branch and was made a vice president in 1955. The past eight years he had been manager of the First and Pine branch.

* * * *

A LEADER in community affairs, Liebenguth will continue in these activities. He has been an active member of the Chamber of Commerce, Petroleum Club, Navy League and is a director of the National Foundation for Polio, chairman of the finance division of the Community Chest and is chairman of the Human Relations Committee of the City of Long Beach.

He and his wife reside at 1101 Marcellus St.

39 YEARS

Record Wages Paid Goodwill Employes

A record $1.5 million in wages was earned by handicapped men and women at Goodwill Industries of Southern California during 1965, President George V. Steed has announced.

A total of 1,337 handicapped persons, and a daily average of more than 700, were provided job opportunities, training and evaluation and other rehabilitation services throughout the year, he said.

Re-elected to second three-year terms as directors were Fred A. McMaster of Newport Beach, and Cecil H. Winn of Lawndale. Western Homes Realty.

All board members serve voluntarily without financial compensation.

It also was announced that more than $300,000 has been subscribed toward the master building expansion goal of $2.2 million and the women's auxiliary presented checks for $14,869 for special projects to help the handicapped.

Compton-Lynwood Board Plans Session

Oliver W. Speraw, Realtor and owner of Sparow Realty, Long Beach, will be guest speaker at the sales clinic meeting for members of the Compton-Lynwood Board of Realtors to be held at 8 a.m. Monday at the board annex.

Speraw's topic will be "Data and Statistics Turned Into Sales Power," according to clinic chairman Jean Black.

ELECTED

Leroy H. Showalter, vice president and manager of Security First National Bank's main office, has been elected to Long Beach Community Hospital's board of trustees, according to Walter C. Groshong, board president.

Norwalk-La Mirada Realtors Face Quez

The Norwalk-La Mirada Board of Realtors has scheduled a $2 Quiz Program for its members at Tuesday's breakfast meeting at the Masonic Hall, 12345 E. Rosecrans Ave.

Quizzer Jerry Mezerow of West Coast Title Company said all questions to be asked of the Realtors will be taken from the Real Estate Primer.

Receives Contract

CHATSWORTH—Whitaker Corp.'s Technical Products Corp., has received a contract in excess of $290,000 to overhaul and repair Nike-Hercules gyroscopes.

City Beautiful Assn. President Speaks Tuesday

Speaker at Tuesday's breakfast meeting for members of the Garden Grove Board of Realtors will be Mrs. Paul Swenson, president of the Garden Grove Beautification Association.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 a.m. at the Cape Cod House.

Mrs. Swenson, a professional artist whose illustrations have appeared in both history and fiction books, is expected to expound her philosophy that city beautification is everyone's responsibility, according to program chairman Bob Flanagan.

Research Specialists Talk to HBA Members

"The Outlook for Home Building Industry" is the topic to be discussed by three market research specialists at the Home Builders Association meeting Monday at the Rodger Young Auditorium, Los Angeles.

The specialists: Edward T. Leutheuser, of Real Estate Research Corporation; Jack W. Leonard, of Bank of America, and Allan D. Kotin, of Economic Research Associates.

Economic Activity on Upswing

	1957-59 Average	Year Ago	Month Ago	Week Ago	Latest Week
BUSINESS WEEK Index	100	138.7	150.1	150.2	150.3

The tempo of economic activity is quickening everywhere you look—so much so that new and revised figures have propelled the Index up over the 150 mark, not only for the last two weeks but for a month ago as well.

Just about every one of the dozen Index components is on the upside.

Two heavyweight components, machinery output and transportation equipment, are the star performers. Machinery runs the gamut from computers to machine tools, from dishwashers to toasters; transportation equipment rounds up aircraft and parts, railroad gear, shipbuilding, and missiles—everything for transport save cars and trucks.

THE TWO FIGURES are only available monthly and about four weeks late; statisticians put them on a weekly basis and revise the Index backwards, estimating recent weeks on the basis of the previous month.

For January, machinery stood at 174.0, up no less than 15.5% over January of 1965. And transportation equipment production soared some 26% over last year.

While in January, defense production began to figure a bit more prominently, it would be wrong to ascribe the boom to Vietnam. Rather it's a cross-the-board affair affecting nearly every kind of business in the nation.

Liebenguth Ending 49 Years in Banking Field

C. F. LIEBENGUTH

Ending a 49-year career in banking, Charles F. Liebenguth, vice president and manager of the Bank of America, First and Pine Avenue branch, retired March 1.

Beginning his career as a bank messenger in 1917, Liebenguth joined Bank of America in 1933 at the Los Angeles headquarters. In 1936 he was promoted to assistant cashier in the loan supervision department and three years later was transferred to Long Beach as assistant manager of the First and Pine branch.

In 1953 he moved to the Fourth and Pine Avenue main branch and was made a vice president in 1955. The past eight years he had been manager of the First and Pine branch.

A LEADER in community affairs, Liebenguth will continue in these activities. He has been an active member of the Chamber of Commerce, Petroleum Club, Navy League and is a director of the National Foundation for Polio, chairman of the finance division of the Community Chest and is chairman of the Human Relations Committee of the City of Long Beach.

He and his wife reside at 1101 Marcellus St.

39 YEARS

Record Wages Paid Goodwill Employes

A record $1.5 million in wages was earned by handicapped men and women at Goodwill Industries of Southern California during 1965, President George V. Steed has announced.

A total of 1,337 handicapped persons, and a daily average of more than 700, were provided job opportunities, training and evaluation and other rehabilitation services throughout the year, he said.

Re-elected to second three-year terms as directors were Fred A. McMaster of Newport Beach, and Cecil H. Winn of Lawndale. Western Homes Realty.

All board members serve voluntarily without financial compensation.

It also was announced that more than $300,000 has been subscribed toward the master building expansion goal of $2.2 million and the women's auxiliary presented checks for $14,869 for special projects to help the handicapped.

Compton-Lynwood Board Plans Session

Official Speaks in L.B.

F. Baker Wallace, field coordinator for the Property Owners Division, California Real Estate Association, will be guest speaker at Tuesday's breakfast meeting of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors at the Crown Cafeteria.

"The division is a newly formed part of the California Real Estate Association," President Harold K. Steele said.

* * * *

"IT GIVES property owners and those who intend to become property owners a source of information concerning issues, actions and legislation which directly affect them."

The CREA, Steele added, will send to subscribers periodic bulletins.

Wallace will discuss the division's 1966 goals.

U.S. National Bank Names Assignments

Changes in titles and assignments for several Long Beach area employes were announced by E. C. Aldrich, regional vice president of United States National Bank.

James A. Dalton, a branch manager in Orange, joins the staff as assistant manager administration. He resides at 1438 North Harp Court, Tustin.

Edward L. Schmidt of Manhattan Beach was named assistant cashier, central region.

* * * *

DALE ERICKSON, senior clerk in the Los Altos branch was promoted to assistant operations officer there. He resides at 14342 Riveria Drive, Huntington Beach.

Everett E. Huxtable was transferred from the Fullerton office to the Hawthorne office as operations officer. He resides at 537 South Adams St., Fullerton.

Households Booming

Estimates are that 6.6 million new households will be set up within the next decade. The highest rate of growth is expected in northern and central California.

RETIRING

William A. Maine, equipment maintenance foreman for General Telephone Company's Bellflower-Norwalk division, is retiring after 33 years with the utility. Maine, of 14510 Adelpha Drive, La Mirada, formerly served in the Long Beach, Downey and Artesia divisions.

THE STUDENT LOOKS AT INDUSTRY

Big Business Gets Low Marks

(This is the first of a two-part series prepared for Newspaper Entedprise Association by the publisher of the national student magazine, Moderator.)

By SHERMAN B. CHICKERING

"Students Reject Carcers in Industry," the headline read.

In one form or another, this headline has appeared time and again in major news media the past year.

The Wall Street Journal, for example, reported that 44% of Harvard's senior class entered business last year as opposed to 39% in 1960; at Amherst, 48% of the alumni are in business while fewer than 20% of recent graduates have been entering business.

Business Week reported that even business-oriented graduate schools, like the one at Carnegie Tech, send only about 10% of their economics Ph.D's. into business. And Time reported that the brighter students increasingly tend to go into research or teaching rather than business.

* * * *

IN A RECENT Moderator magazine poll of college students, nearly half of the respondents agree with one newspaper's analysis that "students tend to look upon the business world as a high-pressure, conformist place where superficial values prevail."

The aspect of business most often scored by the respondents is its reputation for enforced conformity. Says a freshman from Washington State: "I'd rather earn less and be responsible to myself. I don't want someone to pass judgment on my wife or decide where my son should be sent to prep school."

A University of Rhode Island student who has worked for two giant corporations concurs. "One of the only values present in the company was the desire to present the 'proper image,'" he said.

* * * *

THEN THERE'S the question of money. No student wants to do without money, but few will admit to preferring it over other objectives. The general feeling is that success is equated with how much a businessman can earn.

"We don't need 57 suits, a sports car, or a fancy title," says one student. "It's all superficial, and students are beginning to realize it." This complaint spills over into a complaint that businesses seek only profits and not the good of the whole.

A history major says, "When the other half of the world, as well as our own 35 million poor, present themselves as a challenge not to be avoided—the business world looks the other way. Businesses are uninspiring by their commitment not to be involved in the making of history in a violent transitional period."

The other side of conformity is lack of opportunity for creativity. A Pacific Lutheran University junior complains that industries "leave little time for intellectual stimulation or original thought."

"The problem is not just lack of time," laments another student. "The problem is the degree to which non-creative thinking is rewarded. The business world is more comformist than the academic because its concept of reality often rewards banality."

* * * *

COMPETITION IS ANOTHER plaster saint. A Yale student states that a gold-plated office is no reward if a gold-plated ulcer is a prerequisite. This doesn't necessarily mean that students want things easy.

Other students criticize the practice of career and decision-making security. One Harvard sophomore says, "I want to enter a profession in which I'll get the chance to try. What's the use of entering a profession like business in which the answers are all mapped out."

A Stanford student sums up the general critique with an explanation for his own career choice: "A sensitive person cannot join a system which benefits only himself, especially when ample opportunities are open to him to advance himself and help others by choosing a career in government or the social sciences. Why choose a world where profit is the prime, overriding and dictating motive?"

Coast Association Urges Approval of Land Swap

The Orange County Coast Association last week sent letters to its members urging them to write to the State Lands Commission voicing support of the proposed swap of land between the county and the Irvine Company.

The land involved is Upper Newport Bay area, now owned by Irvine, and a potential marina area south of that, now owned by the county.

* * * *

THE COUNTY wants the Upper Bay area to develop for parks. The Irvine Company would use the other area for marina development.

The Orange Coast Association believes it would cost the public $27 million to condemn the wanted land, only $3½ million under the proposed exchange.

New Information Center Opens April 1 in Anaheim

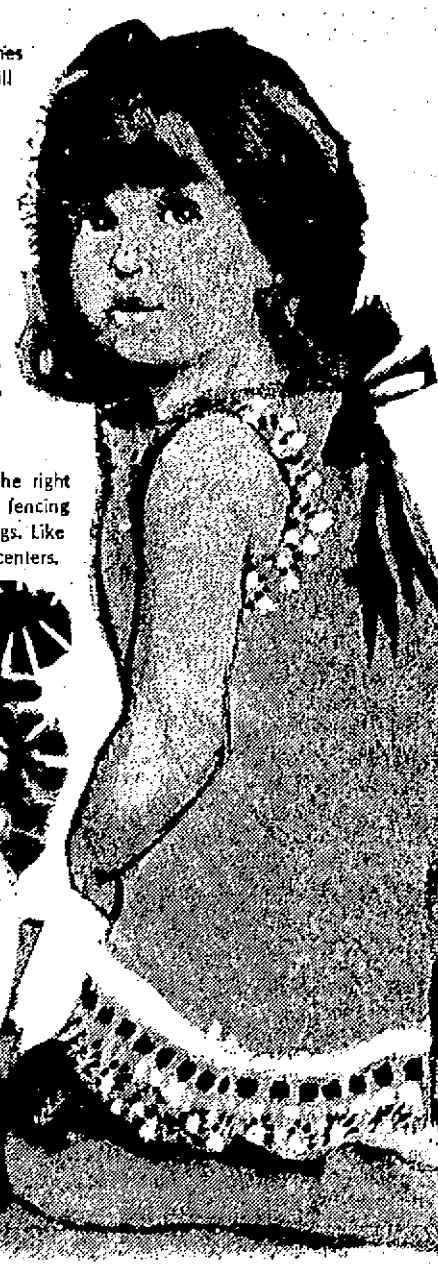
A building information center, where moment-by-moment refinements of new techniques, materials and products should be instantly available, long has been talked by architects and builders.

Such a facility, to be called the Building Information Center, will open its doors at 10822 Magnolia Ave., Anaheim, on April 1.

Managing Director John R. O'Dea said:

* * * *

"WE ARE establishing a central clearing house and nerve center for the industry. It will contain complete information on all products, materials and services applicable to the industry."



This information, he added, will be available at no charge to qualified professionals upon request.

The Building Information Center will derive revenue for its operation from manufacturers and material suppliers whose products are displayed at the Anaheim location, O'Dea said.

EZRA WOLFE . . . Lifted to Waiting Chair Unaided

IN LONG BEACH

Paraplegic Invents Mobile Chair Lift

By DON KIRKLAND

Necessity, mother of almost all invention, gave birth to a chrome-plated, battery-operated mobile chair lift that's just the thing every household doesn't need.

Unless, of course, the household is that of a paraplegic. In that case, Ezra Wolfe's invention is most welcome.

Wolfe, crippled from a broken back he received in an auto crash in 1948, found the task of getting into and out of sitting positions "a real problem."

From his Long Beach home at 583 Walnut Ave., Wolfe began the painstaking job of developing a device that would solve his biggest headache.

* * * *

"I NEVER WAS much of an inventor," relates Wolfe, "but you learn how to improvise when you suddenly can't use your limbs."

When he got the first Wolfe Lift put together three years ago, he installed it in his car and found he could get into the front seat in a fraction of the time it had taken before — and with little effort.

Immediately, Wolfe contacted Philip L. Petersen, also a paraplegic, who helped Wolfe place the device with a manufacturing firm.

Without specially-designed attachments, which are optional at extra cost, the lift runs $334.

Tire Price Hike Due

NEW YORK—U.S. Rubber Tire Co. is notifying its tire dealers and other customers that an increase in tire prices will be necessary in the near future.

Harold N. Barrett, divisional president, said the increase is indicated as a result of a study of cost factors.

"Tire prices have been depressed for some time," he said. "On top of cost increases of recent years, we now have the wage and employe benefit increases of last summer, plus other rising costs, which have been in excess of what it is possible to recover by increased productivity."

Earnings at Rexall Reach Record Peak

LOS ANGELES—Reporting record earnings of $24 million for the year, Rexall Drug and Chemical Co. president, Justin Dart, attributed the 34% increase to the diversification program.

Newer activities in petrochemicals, plastic processing, direct selling and ethical drugs now account for over 80% of the earnings. Rexall now operates 85 plants in 14 countries.

Newest move in the diversification was the announcement that a merger is planned between Thatcher Glass and Rexall. Thatcher supplies glass containers to the food, soft drink, brewing liquor and wine industries and reported net earnings of $6,593,000 in 1965.

William H. McKee Appointed Director

William H. McKee, executive vice president and managing officer of Fisherman and Merchants Savings and Loan Association, 29229 South Western Ave., San Pedro, has been appointed to the board as a director.

With the elevation of McKee, Cecil Toftness, president, announced the promotions of Catherine Davis and Shirley Guisa to assistant vice president positions.

TITLE TRANSFERRED

Robert S. Lumsden (left), 32, former senior supervisor at Western Union's main Los Angeles office, has been named manager of the Long Beach Western Union office, succeeding R. R. Ferlan (right), retiring after 46 years service, 19 in Long Beach.

IN ORANGE COUNTY

Forms Company to Aid Lending Firms

F. Roy Greenleaf Jr. of Orange County has developed a revolutionary service plan for primary lenders.

This new professional-counsellor concept offers the small or large lender a staff of experts devoted to the study of loan feasibility, analysis of borrowers, and services in connection with construction loans.

The new company, called Roy Greenleaf Jr. and Associates, Inc., is located at 1319 N. Bristol St., Santa Ana.

While president of Costa Mesa Savings and Loan Association, Greenleaf found that a medium-sized lending institution could not possibly have the depth of facts needed for astute loaning and did not physically have the staff to follow up on construction loans, provide inspections and check expenditures.

* * * *

FOLLOWING reorganization of Costa Mesa Savings by Capital Alliance Corp., Greenleaf found the time to develop his latest idea —to offer "loan and construction services in depth."

F. ROY GREENLEAF SR.

The new company is employed on the same basis as a firm of attorneys. But, whereas attorneys are retained to advise points of law, Greenleaf's company is retained to advise fine points of money lending and property development.

"Our service is an area most primary leaders would develop if they were able to find the specialized personnel," Greenleaf explained.

EZRA WOLFE . . . Lifted to Waiting Chair Unaided

IN LONG BEACH

Paraplegic Invents Mobile Chair Lift

By DON KIRKLAND

Necessity, mother of almost all invention, gave birth to a chrome-plated, battery-operated mobile chair lift that's just the thing every household doesn't need.

Unless, of course, the household is that of a paraplegic. In that case, Ezra Wolfe's invention is most welcome.

Wolfe, crippled from a broken back he received in an auto crash in 1948, found the task of getting into and out of sitting positions "a real problem."

From his Long Beach home at 583 Walnut Ave., Wolfe began the painstaking job of developing a device that would solve his biggest headache.

* * * *

"I NEVER WAS much of an inventor," relates Wolfe, "but you learn how to improvise when you suddenly can't use your limbs."

When he got the first Wolfe Lift put together three years ago, he installed it in his car and found he could get into the front seat in a fraction of the time it had taken before — and with little effort.

Immediately, Wolfe contacted Philip L. Petersen, also a paraplegic, who helped Wolfe place the device with a manufacturing firm.

Without specially-designed attachments, which are optional at extra cost, the lift runs $334.

Tire Price Hike Due

NEW YORK—U.S. Rubber Tire Co. is notifying its tire dealers and other customers that an increase in tire prices will be necessary in the near future.

Harold N. Barrett, divisional president, said the increase is indicated as a result of a study of cost factors.

"Tire prices have been depressed for some time," he said. "On top of cost increases of recent years, we now have the wage and employe benefit increases of last summer, plus other rising costs, which have been in excess of what it is possible to recover by increased productivity."

Earnings at Rexall Reach Record Peak

LOS ANGELES—Reporting record earnings of $24 million for the year, Rexall Drug and Chemical Co. president, Justin Dart, attributed the 34% increase to the diversification program.

Newer activities in petrochemicals, plastic processing, direct selling and ethical drugs now account for over 80% of the earnings. Rexall now operates 85 plants in 14 countries.

Newest move in the diversification was the announcement that a merger is planned between Thatcher Glass and Rexall. Thatcher supplies glass containers to the food, soft drink, brewing liquor and wine industries and reported net earnings of $6,593,000 in 1965.

William H. McKee Appointed Director

William H. McKee, executive vice president and managing officer of Fisherman and Merchants Savings and Loan Association, 29229 South Western Ave., San Pedro, has been appointed to the board as a director.

With the elevation of McKee, Cecil Toftness, president, announced the promotions of Catherine Davis and Shirley Guisa to assistant vice president positions.

TITLE TRANSFERRED

Robert S. Lumsden (left), 32, former senior supervisor at Western Union's main Los Angeles office, has been named manager of the Long Beach Western Union office, succeeding R. R. Ferlan (right), retiring after 46 years service, 19 in Long Beach.

IN ORANGE COUNTY

Forms Company to Aid Lending Firms

F. Roy Greenleaf Jr. of Orange County has developed a revolutionary service plan for primary lenders.

This new professional-counsellor concept offers the small or large lender a staff of experts devoted to the study of loan feasibility, analysis of borrowers, and services in connection with construction loans.

The new company, called Roy Greenleaf Jr. and Associates, Inc., is located at 1319 N. Bristol St., Santa Ana.

While president of Costa Mesa Savings and Loan Association, Greenleaf found that a medium-sized lending institution could not possibly have the depth of facts needed for astute loaning and did not physically have the staff to follow up on construction loans, provide inspections and check expenditures.

* * * *

FOLLOWING reorganization of Costa Mesa Savings by Capital Alliance Corp., Greenleaf found the time to develop his latest idea —to offer "loan and construction services in depth."

F. ROY GREENLEAF SR.

The new company is employed on the same basis as a firm of attorneys. But, whereas attorneys are retained to advise points of law, Greenleaf's company is retained to advise fine points of money lending and property development.

"Our service is an area most primary leaders would develop if they were able to find the specialized personnel," Greenleaf explained.

Long Beach Film to Premier This Week

By JACK O. BALDWIN

"Port of Long Beach—America's Most Modern Port"—the new 28-minute full-color sound movie produced by the Harbor Department, will have its world premier Wednesday before members of the Vernon Rotary Club.

It is the second such film extolling the growth and facilities available at the local harbor. The first movie, produced in 1961, traveled several times around the globe for foreign presentations.

Frank H. Black, director of public information for the Harbor department, can arrange for club, school or business group showings.

STEPS TO STOCK PROFITS

Broker Fee Includes Uncounted Services

(This is the ninth in a series of 10 articles by an expert writer for Moody's Investors Service and distributed by NEA Special Services.)

By ROLAND GOODMAN

It is impractical to buy and sell stocks without a broker (or a banker who works through one). You select your broker as you would a doctor, lawyer or banker — preferably by the recommendation of a friend or business associate who has had satisfactory dealings with him. Or your bank can make suggestions.

Choose someone who belongs to a stock exchange or the National Association of Securities Dealers, which keep close watch on their members' financial integrity.

* * * *

FOR YOU, the broker's prime function is to execute buy and sell orders. The commissions on these will probably be his only income from you, as there is rarely any charge for providing information and elementary advice, keeping custody of your securities and other small services.

You will have to give the broker good references, too, since most buy and sell orders are handled by phone, with settlement later. If you want to buy stocks on margin—that is, putting up less cash than the full price, within limits set by the Federal Reserve Board —the broker will lend you the difference, charging you interest.

Your actual contact with the broker will be through a registered representative, or customer's man, who will guide you through any technicalities.

* * * *

COMMISSIONS on both purchases and sales are based on the money involved:

Less than $100, by agreement between customer and broker.

$100 to $399.99, 2 per cent plus $3 ($6 minimum).

$400 to $2,399.99, 1 per cent plus $7.

$2,400 to $4,999.99, 0.5 per cent plus $19.

$5.00 and over, 0.1 per cent plus $39.

There are also fees for odd lots of fewer than 100 shares, and some states have transfer taxes. The broker must send you prompt statements on all transactions. It is important for you to keep these records of your security dealings.

Waters Back With Hughes

NEWPORT BEACH—Warren P. Waters has been appointed to the new position of manager of Hughes Aircraft Co.'s solid state research center.

Waters returns to Hughes after four years at Texas Instruments, Inc., where he was manager of the semiconductor research and development laboratory's advanced device development branch. Before joining TI in 1962, he was head of the advanced development department of Hughes semiconductor division here.

WARREN P. WATERS

Mrs. Emogene Harding (pictured here), sales manager for Influential Homes Executive Series, reports over a million dollars in sales in the three weeks the Orange homes have been open. The one and two-story homes are priced from $28,900.

Influential Homes Continue Fast Pace

Over $1 million in sales has been reported at Influential Homes, Executive Series, a subdivision of 288 homes in the City of Orange, being built by Butler-Harbour Construction Co. This rapid sales pace has been on the increase since the project's opening three weeks ago.

Located at Dowling Street south of the Riverside Freeway, the completely walled community offers a choice of one and two-story homes with three, four and five bedrooms. Prices range from $28,900 to $34,200 and underground utilities and refrigerated air conditioning are included in the price. Butler-Harbour has built homes valuing more than $15,000,000 in the City of Orange in the past five years in addition to the Executive Series sub-division, which will represent another $10,000,000 of residential growth in this area.

* * * *

ONE OF THE major factors in Butler-Harbour's success is attributed to the advantages offered by the location of its homes. According to the City of Orange Chamber of Commerce, all industry in the county is within 20 minutes of the developments, and the freeway systems put residents within 40 minutes of the Los Angeles Civic Center, 20 of the beaches, and one hour of the mountain resorts.

Many new features are offered in the Executive Series, including rear garages with private alley access, automatic clock and coffee timer, built-in electric toaster, and built-in bath scales.

Walker and Lee are sales agents for the new Influential Homes, Executive Series in Orange.

Epley to Speak to Bellflower Realtors

Malcolm Epley, columnist for the Independent, Press-Telegram, is guest speaker at Thursday's 7:30 a.m. breakfast meeting of the Bellflower District Board of Realtors at the Cerritos College Student Center, according to Esta Rodgers, chairman.

Two S&S Units Selling

Pre-sale of El Dorado Park Estates homes in Long Beach and College Park homes in Seal Beach are attributed to excellent selection of plans and location, according to David Knutson, sales and marketing manager of Shappell Land Co., sales agents for S & S Construction Co.'s residential communities.

El Dorado Estates, selling for $33,600 to $46,500, has two new models now selling homes from plans. Four model homes are offered for sale. The one and two-story homes are next to Long Beach's El Dorado Park and near golf courses, marinas, churches of all denominations, schools, entertainment and shopping facilities.

Visitors are invited to drive east on Spring Street from Long Beach to 7896 Cramer St., between Studebaker Road and Los Alamitos Boulevard to see the model homes.

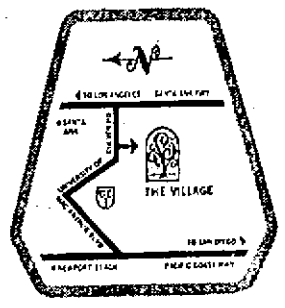
COLLEGE PARK HOMES in Seal Beach are selling in the just released second unit of 104 homes, though the first unit has not begun construction. Buyers are selecting the homes of their choice from the new, just furnished models, and placing them on the lots they choose.

College Park homes sell under the new VA law, allowing ex-servicemen who have been discharged since Jan. 31, 1955, to purchase homes with no down payment.



College Park models may be visited by driving on Valley View turnoff from the San Diego Freeway and north to the entrance and signs.

GRAND OPENING

THE VILLAGE... a vast new community set amidst the rolling hills of the historic Irvine Ranch. Culturally oriented, THE VILLAGE adjoins a great new institution of learning... The University of California, Irvine. THE VILLAGE contains a totally new and different concept in dwelling environment as it is known today. Extensive private parks will wind throughout the entire project. These lush areas are to contain large numbers of trees, large lawn areas, hedges and flower gardens. The effect will be a park-like setting adjacent to your home, that spells peace and contentment for you and your family. Occasional plots of ground, normally used for building homes, have been set aside for children's spacious playgrounds; others have been reserved for adult relaxation. Lavish recreation facilities have been designated throughout the park areas; you'll see large swimming pools, tennis courts, and volleyball courts within three separate and distinct areas of THE VILLAGE. This is your opportunity to live in a cultural environment... a community contained within the Master Plan of the Irvine Ranch and The University of California, Irvine. The magnificent homes at THE VILLAGE are one and two stories, up to four bedrooms and two and one-half baths. These homes have the most modern built-in kitchen conveniences, two fireplaces, secluded patios, stunning view balconies, and every conceivable luxury appointment.

AMPLE ROOM TO PLAY . . . In Fountain Valley Westmont Home

A limited number of homes in the popular Westmont Bonus Room Festival unit are now available for immediate occupancy, according to Developers George M. Holstein and Sons.

The new Festival Series in Fountain Valley was opened four weeks ago and features the "over-the-garage" Bonus Room with every plan along with front landscaping, sprinklers, block wall, built-ins and spacious family rooms and kitchens.

A limited number plans and elevations are just being completed for quick occupancy with a reservation list also being made for move-in time for late spring, Sales Manager Ray Haffdahl explained.

WESTMONT prices start at $25,500 and are available under FHA, Veteran, Conventional or new cold War Veteran terms.

Both three and four-bedroom plans are included in the group for quick occupancy. The plans include the "Bonus Room" that has been popular for playroom, rumpus area, den or extra bedrooms.

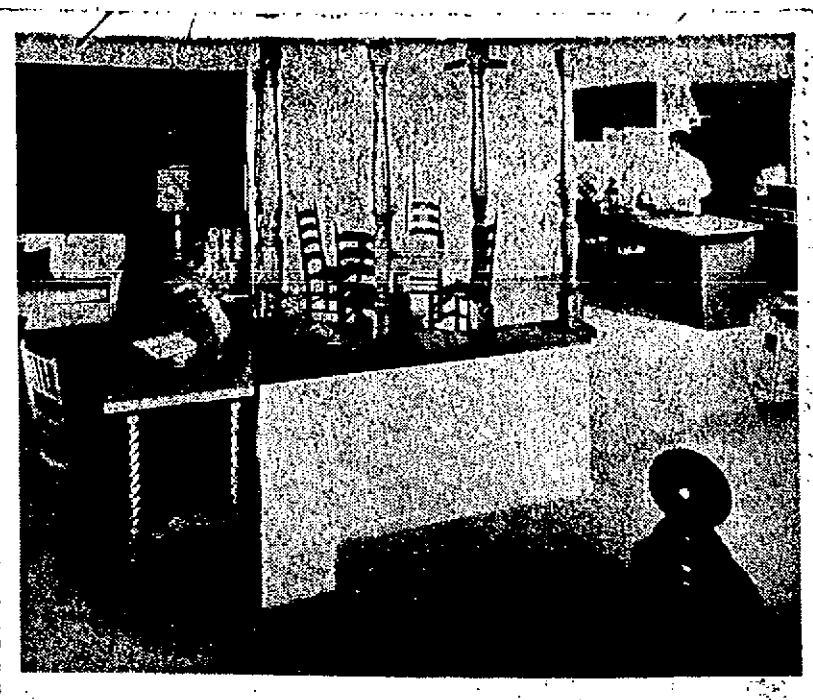
To visit Westmont, take the Santa Ana or San Diego freeway to the Hwy. 39 turnoff and follow Hwy. 39 South to Warner then go East on Warner one mile to the tree lined Westmont entry.

La Palma New Unit Now Open

Bob Morrison, sales manager, reported that the new unit is now open at the Landmark Homes La Palma homesite. He added that new home designs were being offered and that public enthusiasm has already been favorable.

According to Morrison, one of the features really appreciated at the East Lakewood homesite is the spacious three-car garages.

Located at the intersection of Moody Street and La Palma Avenue, this newest Landmark Homes community will eventually comprise some 360 homes. In the first unit, there are 144 homes. Morrison adds that features will include underground utilities, carpeting, concrete drives, fencing, landscaping, sprinklers, optional air conditioning, walk-in closets and the usual long list of Landmark Homes exclusives.



★ ★ ★ ★

A GENERAL plan for developing La Palma as the community of the "Ideal American City" has been approved by city councilmen. The development of residential, commercial and industrial land is expected by 1975. The master plan calls for 490 acres of low-density apartments.

Prices at the homesite begin at $28,500 with 5% down plan offered. All terms are flexible.

Waters Back With Hughes

NEWPORT BEACH—Warren P. Waters has been appointed to the new position of manager of Hughes Aircraft Co.'s solid state research center.

Waters returns to Hughes after four years at Texas Instruments, Inc., where he was manager of the semiconductor research and development laboratory's advanced device development branch. Before joining TI in 1962, he was head of the advanced development department of Hughes semiconductor division here.

WARREN P. WATERS

Mrs. Emogene Harding (pictured here), sales manager for Influential Homes Executive Series, reports over a million dollars in sales in the three weeks the Orange homes have been open. The one and two-story homes are priced from $28,900.

Influential Homes Continue Fast Pace

Over $1 million in sales has been reported at Influential Homes, Executive Series, a subdivision of 288 homes in the City of Orange, being built by Butler-Harbour Construction Co. This rapid sales pace has been on the increase since the project's opening three weeks ago.

Located at Dowling Street south of the Riverside Freeway, the completely walled community offers a choice of one and two-story homes with three, four and five bedrooms. Prices range from $28,900 to $34,200 and underground utilities and refrigerated air conditioning are included in the price. Butler-Harbour has built homes valuing more than $15,000,000 in the City of Orange in the past five years in addition to the Executive Series sub-division, which will represent another $10,000,000 of residential growth in this area.

* * * *

ONE OF THE major factors in Butler-Harbour's success is attributed to the advantages offered by the location of its homes. According to the City of Orange Chamber of Commerce, all industry in the county is within 20 minutes of the developments, and the freeway systems put residents within 40 minutes of the Los Angeles Civic Center, 20 of the beaches, and one hour of the mountain resorts.

Many new features are offered in the Executive Series, including rear garages with private alley access, automatic clock and coffee timer, built-in electric toaster, and built-in bath scales.

Walker and Lee are sales agents for the new Influential Homes, Executive Series in Orange.

Epley to Speak to Bellflower Realtors

Malcolm Epley, columnist for the Independent, Press-Telegram, is guest speaker at Thursday's 7:30 a.m. breakfast meeting of the Bellflower District Board of Realtors at the Cerritos College Student Center, according to Esta Rodgers, chairman.

Two S&S Units Selling

Pre-sale of El Dorado Park Estates homes in Long Beach and College Park homes in Seal Beach are attributed to excellent selection of plans and location, according to David Knutson, sales and marketing manager of Shappell Land Co., sales agents for S & S Construction Co.'s residential communities.

El Dorado Estates, selling for $33,600 to $46,500, has two new models now selling homes from plans. Four model homes are offered for sale. The one and two-story homes are next to Long Beach's El Dorado Park and near golf courses, marinas, churches of all denominations, schools, entertainment and shopping facilities.

Visitors are invited to drive east on Spring Street from Long Beach to 7896 Cramer St., between Studebaker Road and Los Alamitos Boulevard to see the model homes.

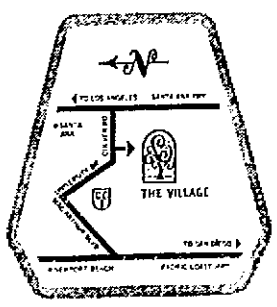
COLLEGE PARK HOMES in Seal Beach are selling in the just released second unit of 104 homes, though the first unit has not begun construction. Buyers are selecting the homes of their choice from the new, just furnished models, and placing them on the lots they choose.

College Park homes sell under the new VA law, allowing ex-servicemen who have been discharged since Jan. 31, 1955, to purchase homes with no down payment.



College Park models may be visited by driving on Valley View turnoff from the San Diego Freeway and north to the entrance and signs.

GRAND OPENING

THE VILLAGE... a vast new community set amidst the rolling hills of the historic Irvine Ranch. Culturally oriented, THE VILLAGE adjoins a great new institution of learning... The University of California, Irvine. THE VILLAGE contains a totally new and different concept in dwelling environment as it is known today. Extensive private parks will wind throughout the entire project. These lush areas are to contain large numbers of trees, large lawn areas, hedges and flower gardens. The effect will be a park-like setting adjacent to your home, that spells peace and contentment for you and your family. Occasional plots of ground, normally used for building homes, have been set aside for children's spacious playgrounds; others have been reserved for adult relaxation. Lavish recreation facilities have been designated throughout the park areas; you'll see large swimming pools, tennis courts, and volleyball courts within three separate and distinct areas of THE VILLAGE. This is your opportunity to live in a cultural environment... a community contained within the Master Plan of the Irvine Ranch and The University of California, Irvine. The magnificent homes at THE VILLAGE are one and two stories, up to four bedrooms and two and one-half baths. These homes have the most modern built-in kitchen conveniences, two fireplaces, secluded patios, stunning view balconies, and every conceivable luxury appointment.

Anaheim Landmark Homes Are Spacious

Bob Morrison, sales manager for Landmark Homes in Anaheim, reports continued interest and activity at the close-in Anaheim homesite. The grand opening of these spacious homes is continuing and homeseekers are invited to visit the model area on Ball Road for a choice selection of homes and homesites.

Features include custom carpeting, landscaping, fencing, sprinklers, massive fireplaces, walk-in closets and separate laundry rooms with outside access. The homes offer 2070 to 2175 square feet of living area.

• • • •

THE FOUR-BEDROOM, two-bath homes are located at Berkley Street and Ball Road. There are only 20 homes to be built. According to sales aides, the two-story homes are spacious and family planned for maximum comfort and convenience.

Prices begin at $29,875 and financing is said to be excellent and flexible. The homesite may be visited from Long Beach and vicinity by driving east on Ball Road, across Valley View Street to Berkley Street.

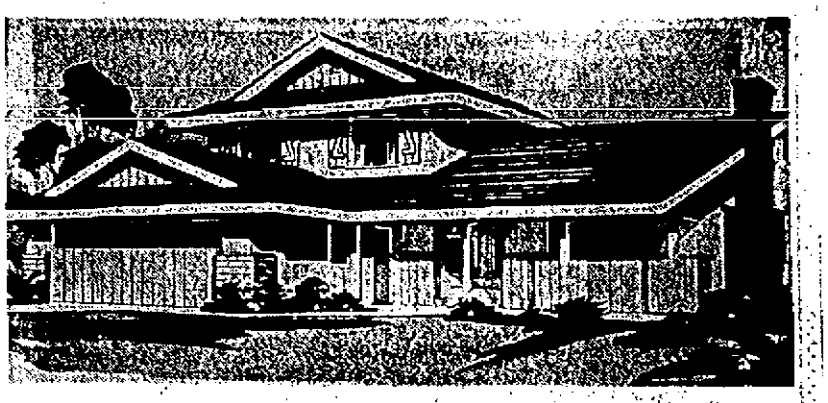
Recreation for Everyone Is Offered in Fernhill

Adjacent to the 18-hole Meadowlark Golf Course in Huntington Beach, Fernhill offers unlimited recreational pleasure, states Vivian Lance, sales agent. The privately owned, public course adjoining Fernhill, offers a challenge even to the most dedicated golfer, according to Lance, who added that duffers and beginners will also find the course a delight.

Recreational pleasures at Fernhill are not confined to golf. Tennis, shuffleboard and swimming provide Fernhill residents a well-rounded leisure time calendar.

The accent on leisure activities is the result of "maintenance free exteriors," emphasized Lance. All exterior maintenance, including Fernhill's extensive recreational facilities, is professionally handled for residents.

• • • •



COMMONLY owned facilities at Fernhill which are enjoyed by all residents, include a large, heated swimming pool, three putting greens, tennis, shuffleboard and badminton courts.

One of the major attractions is the spaciousness of Fernhill homes. Large living room, ample kitchen space and big bedrooms have frequently astonished visitors accustomed to "ordinary" planned development homes. The two and three-bedroom homes offer from 1400 to 1600 square feet of living area. All plans have two baths.

Prices start at $22,400 with 5% down and 30 year loans at 6% financing.

Take the San Diego Freeway to Bolsa Chica Road, and drive south on Bolsa Chica to Warner, then left on Warner to Fernhill.

Lower Level Rumpus Room

AN ORANGEWOOD HOME . . . Designed for Large Family

Homes in Orangewood are planned to incorporate a place for family recreation in a design that is functional for efficient enjoyable family living as well, according to Don Wilson, president of Don Wilson Builders.

Says Wilson: "Today's younger families want a room in the home where the whole family can sprawl out and relax. That's why we've featured the lower level rumpus-game room at Orangewood, where there's a place separate from the living room for billiards, games, parties — or a family evening of television."

Many young families looking for their first home are impressed with the quality features offered. Priced from $24,950, the homes all feature quality wall-to-wall carpeting.

Orangewood models are now open daily, with one and two-story tri-level homes featuring up to five bedrooms, and priced from $24,950, with $995 down. Orangewood may be reached by driving on the San Diego or Garden Grove freeways to Knott Avenue, then north.

DOROTHY EVERETT

Selected as Ad Manager at Walker's

Joe Shuff, general manager of Walker's Department Store, announced appointment of Dorothy Everett as advertising manager.

Joining Walker's in 1958 as art director, Miss Everett previously held a similar position with the G. C. Murphy Co., an eastern variety store chain. She graduated from Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh, earning a scholarship at O'Hara School in Goose Rocks Beach, Me. Coming to California she did further graduate work at Claremont College.

In addition to several one-person shows for Associated Artists of Pittsburgh and Pomona Valley Art Association, and a series of industrial paintings for the permanent collection of Pennsylvania State College, Miss Everett has taught at the secondary level in the California public school system.

Award winning builders

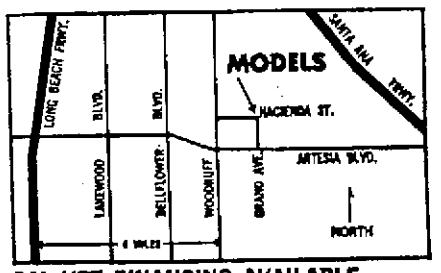
The Vice President of the Bellflower National Bank, Jacob Van der Molen, bought a home at Ray Watt's BELLFLOWER EASTRIDGE

"I've been a banker nearly all my life," says Jacob Van der Molen, one of Bellflower's leading citizens. As real estate lending officer of Bellflower's own bank, Mr. Van der Molen knows a home value when he sees one. "Bellflower Eastridge meets the standards I look for in a home."

Location: "Bellflower Eastridge is convenient to all our city's schools, churches and shopping centers, yet you live in a setting of privacy and seclusion.

Value: "Square foot for square foot, Bellflower Eastridge gives you a lot of home for your money. Bellflower Eastridge is an exceptionally fine home value."

Investment: "As a resident of Bellflower since 1947 I know the history of land appreciation here. Bellflower Eastridge is a wise investment for tomorrow."



That's the opinion of an expert. Why not apply your own principal to Bellflower Eastridge. It's like money in the bank.

Closing Out Townhouses

LUXURY FOR $495 DOWN . . . Rossmoor Townhouse

Close-out sale continues today at the successful community of Rossmoor Townhouses, it was announced by Jaymarc Co., developers. The luxury $4 million project is adjacent to the Rossmoor Shopping and Business Center on Los Alamitos Boulevard and within easy access to freeways leading to all Southern California.

Pete Blair, sales manager for the development, said response to the low down payment of only $495 has been overwhelming. "Many of our new residents were short of cash because of delay in disposing of their old properties. This is one of the reasons this new low down is available, though for a limited time," Blair commented.

PRICED AT $22,950 and $23,950, Rossmoor Townhouse residents receive the utmost in available features. Fun facilities provide four pools, putting greens, shuffleboard courts, barbecue pits and a modern, private clubhouse. Luxury conveniences in each home include GE Medallion kitchens.

Rossmoor Townhouses may be reached via the San Diego Freeway or Seventh Street to the Los Alamitos-Bay Boulevards exit, then right (north) two blocks on Los Alamitos Boulevard.

Homes for Any Size Family

SANDHURST MODEL . . . Offered in Bellflower Unit

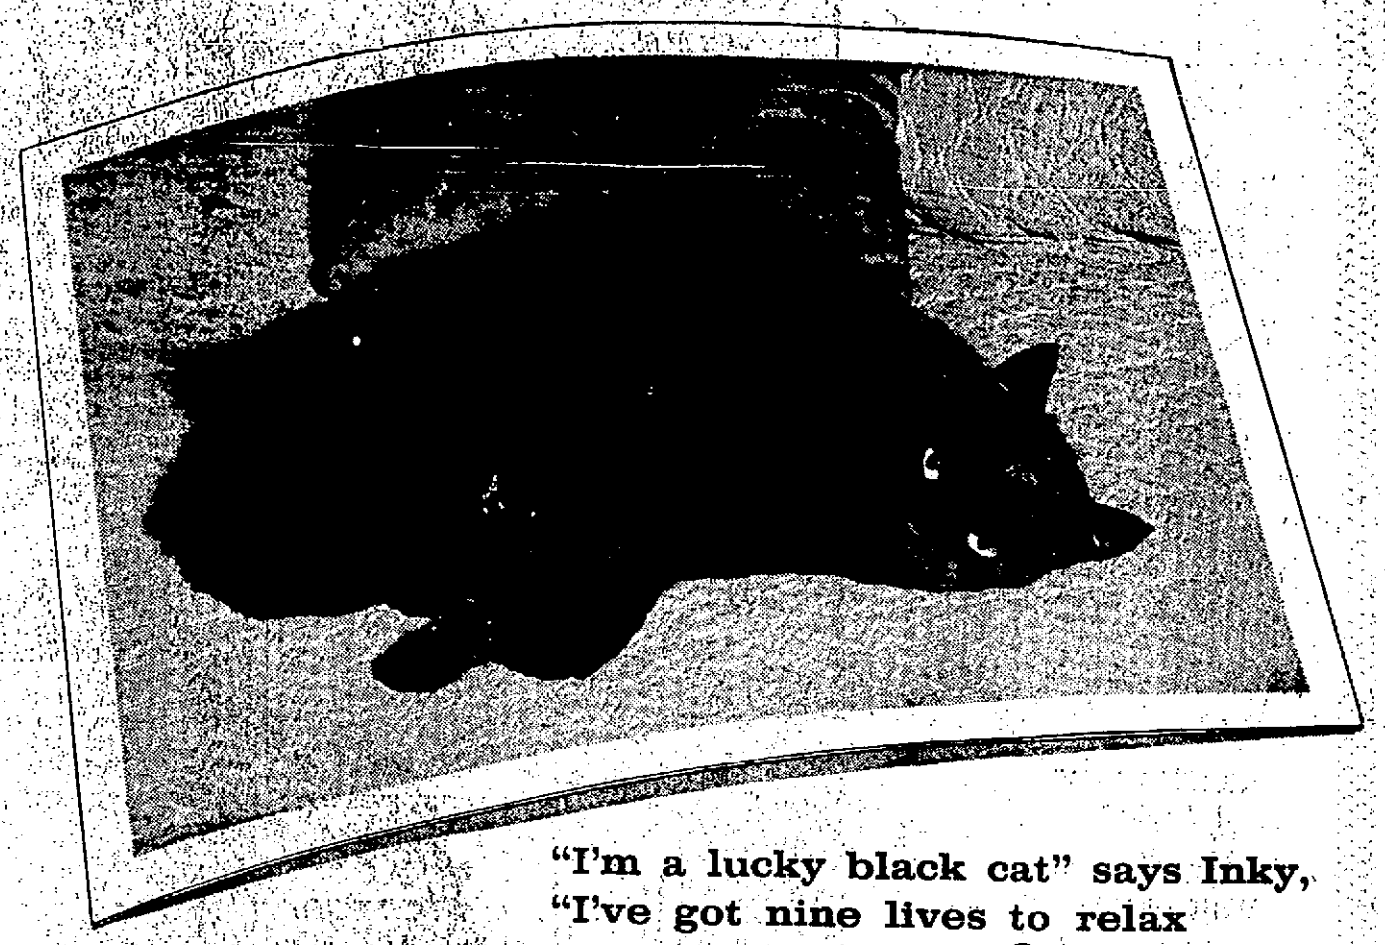
"The larger family—or the one that's still growing—find the Sandhurst model home at Master Builder Ray Watt's Bellflower Eastridge just right for its expanding needs," states the sales director, John Joyce.

This award-winning tri-level plan is also ideal for the family who enjoys having guests. Its spacious plan, incorporates five bedrooms, three baths and a very large rumpus room (with wet bar).

For the larger family, tri-level planning is exceptionally convenient. Three separate living zones—sleeping, formal entertaining and dining, informal and entertaining areas, create a spacious atmosphere, yet insure the privacy of every family member.

* * * *

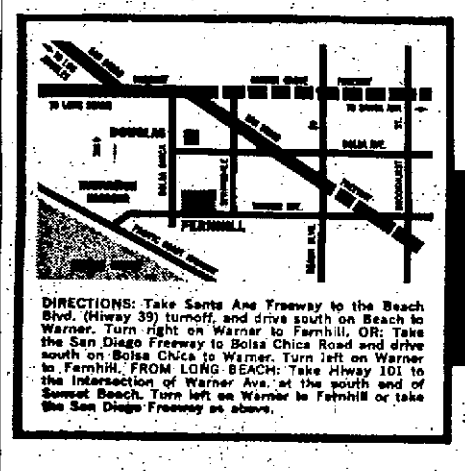
SMALLER families looking for the finest in elegant housing find Bellflower Eastridge is ideal for them, too. For them, the development offers the Cambridge, a three bedroom, three bath home.



"No matter what the size of your family," Joyce states, "you'll find the finest in tri-level living at Bellflower Eastridge. There are less than 20 homes to be sold."

Prices start at $34,000. Furnished models are located at Hacienda Avenue and Grand Avenue, two blocks north and east of the main intersection of Woodruff and Artesia.

Women's Council to See Latest Styles



The Women's Council, Bellflower District Board of Realtors, will stage their annual Spring Style Show Wednesday noon at the board auditorium, 10140 E. Alondra Blvd., Bellflower.

Mary Morey's Fashion Shoppe, Paramount, will present latest styles, program chairman Vesta Anderson said.

"I'm a lucky black cat" says Inky, "I've got nine lives to relax and enjoy living at Fernhill"

Folks at Fernhill in Huntington Beach don't work much more than Inky, either. No mowing, trimming, painting or "backyard slavery." They just do the things they enjoy. At Fernhill all exterior maintenance, including your heated swimming pool, putting greens, shuffleboard, badminton and tennis courts is professionally done for you.* You're free to relax in the recreational wonder world of the Orange Coast. Golf at adjoining Meadowlark Country Club, fishing, surfing, swimming, sailing and riding are all minutes-handy. Best of all, Fernhill offers this rich way of life at realistic prices.

Anaheim Landmark Homes Are Spacious

Bob Morrison, sales manager for Landmark Homes in Anaheim, reports continued interest and activity at the close-in Anaheim homesite. The grand opening of these spacious homes is continuing and homeseekers are invited to visit the model area on Ball Road for a choice selection of homes and homesites.

Features include custom carpeting, landscaping, fencing, sprinklers, massive fireplaces, walk-in closets and separate laundry rooms with outside access. The homes offer 2070 to 2175 square feet of living area.

• • • •

THE FOUR-BEDROOM, two-bath homes are located at Berkley Street and Ball Road. There are only 20 homes to be built. According to sales aides, the two-story homes are spacious and family planned for maximum comfort and convenience.

Prices begin at $29,875 and financing is said to be excellent and flexible. The homesite may be visited from Long Beach and vicinity by driving east on Ball Road, across Valley View Street to Berkley Street.

Recreation for Everyone Is Offered in Fernhill

Adjacent to the 18-hole Meadowlark Golf Course in Huntington Beach, Fernhill offers unlimited recreational pleasure, states Vivian Lance, sales agent. The privately owned, public course adjoining Fernhill, offers a challenge even to the most dedicated golfer, according to Lance, who added that duffers and beginners will also find the course a delight.

Recreational pleasures at Fernhill are not confined to golf. Tennis, shuffleboard and swimming provide Fernhill residents a well-rounded leisure time calendar.

The accent on leisure activities is the result of "maintenance free exteriors," emphasized Lance. All exterior maintenance, including Fernhill's extensive recreational facilities, is professionally handled for residents.

• • • •

COMMONLY owned facilities at Fernhill which are enjoyed by all residents, include a large, heated swimming pool, three putting greens, tennis, shuffleboard and badminton courts.

One of the major attractions is the spaciousness of Fernhill homes. Large living room, ample kitchen space and big bedrooms have frequently astonished visitors accustomed to "ordinary" planned development homes. The two and three-bedroom homes offer from 1400 to 1600 square feet of living area. All plans have two baths.

Prices start at $22,400 with 5% down and 30 year loans at 6% financing.

Take the San Diego Freeway to Bolsa Chica Road, and drive south on Bolsa Chica to Warner, then left on Warner to Fernhill.

Lower Level Rumpus Room

AN ORANGEWOOD HOME . . . Designed for Large Family

Homes in Orangewood are planned to incorporate a place for family recreation in a design that is functional for efficient enjoyable family living as well, according to Don Wilson, president of Don Wilson Builders.

Says Wilson: "Today's younger families want a room in the home where the whole family can sprawl out and relax. That's why we've featured the lower level rumpus-game room at Orangewood, where there's a place separate from the living room for billiards, games, parties — or a family evening of television."

Many young families looking for their first home are impressed with the quality features offered. Priced from $24,950, the homes all feature quality wall-to-wall carpeting.

Orangewood models are now open daily, with one and two-story tri-level homes featuring up to five bedrooms, and priced from $24,950, with $995 down. Orangewood may be reached by driving on the San Diego or Garden Grove freeways to Knott Avenue, then north.

DOROTHY EVERETT

Selected as Ad Manager at Walker's

Joe Shuff, general manager of Walker's Department Store, announced appointment of Dorothy Everett as advertising manager.

Joining Walker's in 1958 as art director, Miss Everett previously held a similar position with the G. C. Murphy Co., an eastern variety store chain. She graduated from Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh, earning a scholarship at O'Hara School in Goose Rocks Beach, Me. Coming to California she did further graduate work at Claremont College.

In addition to several one-person shows for Associated Artists of Pittsburgh and Pomona Valley Art Association, and a series of industrial paintings for the permanent collection of Pennsylvania State College, Miss Everett has taught at the secondary level in the California public school system.

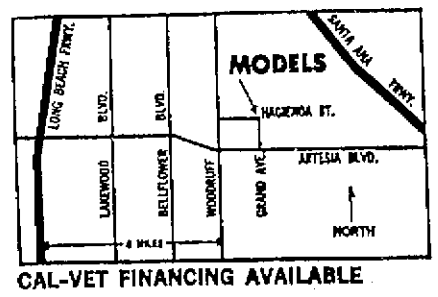
The Vice President of the Bellflower National Bank, Jacob Van der Molen, bought a home at Ray Watt's BELLFLOWER EASTRIDGE

"I've been a banker nearly all my life," says Jacob Van der Molen, one of Bellflower's leading citizens. As real estate lending officer of Bellflower's own bank, Mr. Van der Molen knows a home value when he sees one. "Bellflower Eastridge meets the standards I look for in a home."

Location: "Bellflower Eastridge is convenient to all our city's schools, churches and shopping centers, yet you live in a setting of privacy and seclusion.

Value: "Square foot for square foot, Bellflower Eastridge gives you a lot of home for your money. Bellflower Eastridge is an exceptionally fine home value."

Investment: "As a resident of Bellflower since 1947 I know the history of land appreciation here. Bellflower Eastridge is a wise investment for tomorrow."



That's the opinion of an expert. Why not apply your own principal to Bellflower Eastridge. It's like money in the bank.

Closing Out Townhouses

LUXURY FOR $495 DOWN . . . Rossmoor Townhouse

Close-out sale continues today at the successful community of Rossmoor Townhouses, it was announced by Jaymarc Co., developers. The luxury $4 million project is adjacent to the Rossmoor Shopping and Business Center on Los Alamitos Boulevard and within easy access to freeways leading to all Southern California.

Pete Blair, sales manager for the development, said response to the low down payment of only $495 has been overwhelming. "Many of our new residents were short of cash because of delay in disposing of their old properties. This is one of the reasons this new low down is available, though for a limited time," Blair commented.

PRICED AT $22,950 and $23,950, Rossmoor Townhouse residents receive the utmost in available features. Fun facilities provide four pools, putting greens, shuffleboard courts, barbecue pits and a modern, private clubhouse. Luxury conveniences in each home include GE Medallion kitchens.

Rossmoor Townhouses may be reached via the San Diego Freeway or Seventh Street to the Los Alamitos-Bay Boulevards exit, then right (north) two blocks on Los Alamitos Boulevard.

Homes for Any Size Family

SANDHURST MODEL . . . Offered in Bellflower Unit

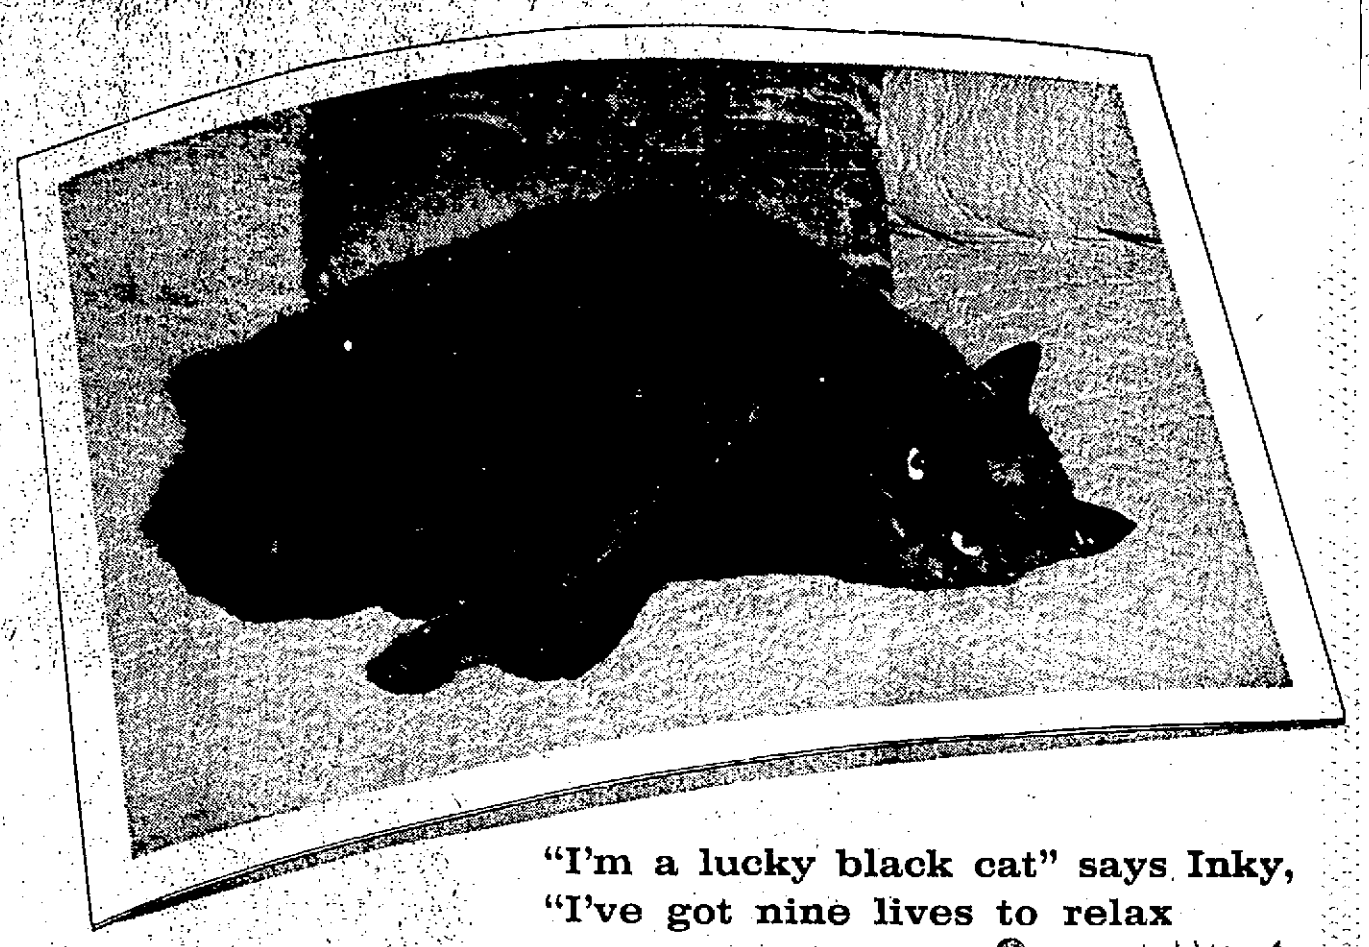
"The larger family—or the one that's still growing—find the Sandhurst model home at Master Builder Ray Watt's Bellflower Eastridge just right for its expanding needs," states the sales director, John Joyce.

This award-winning tri-level plan is also ideal for the family who enjoys having guests. Its spacious plan, incorporates five bedrooms, three baths and a very large rumpus room (with wet bar).

For the larger family, tri-level planning is exceptionally convenient. Three separate living zones—sleeping, formal entertaining and dining, informal and entertaining areas, create a spacious atmosphere, yet insure the privacy of every family member.

★ ★ ★ ★

SMALLER families looking for the finest in elegant housing find Bellflower Eastridge is ideal for them, too. For them, the development offers the Cambridge, a three bedroom, three bath home.



"No matter what the size of your family," Joyce states, "you'll find the finest in tri-level living at Bellflower Eastridge. There are less than 20 homes to be sold."

Prices start at $34,000. Furnished models are located at Hacienda Avenue and Grand Avenue, two blocks north and east of the main intersection of Woodruff and Artesia.

MORE DOUGH FOR FEMALE BREADWINNERS?

Sex still factor at pay window

By WILLIAM J. EATON
By United Press International

WASHINGTON—A leading spokesman for American working women believes they have made unprecedented gains in recent years. But she also asserts there still are too many major problems hampering the female breadwinner.

That is the view of Mary Dublin Keyserling, $23,700-a-year director of the Labor Department's Women's Bureau.

Two new laws and President Johnson's example in naming women to high-level government posts have changed the employment climate, she said.

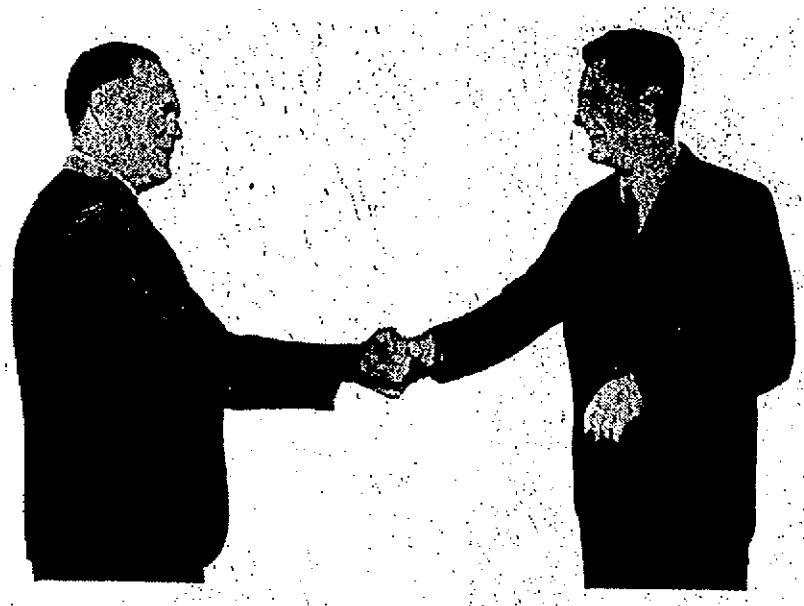
Yet she ticked off these statistics to show that sex is still a factor in the paycheck:

—Of 27 million working women — one out of every three American workers — the typical female earned only 59 cents for every $1 for the typical man in the labor force. The wage gap has been widening since World War II.

—About one-third of the women who held full-time, year-around jobs in 1964 earned less that. $3,000. This compares with 11% of employed men below the poverty-line. But 11 times as many men earned $10,000 or more a year.

—More than 5 million working women are self-supporting—widowed, separated or divorced—and 6 million are single. Of the 14.5 million married women who work, about half have husbands who earned less than $5,000 a year.

"BARRIERS to women's employment opportunities are of serious moment and they remain high," Mrs. Keyserling said. She added that limited chances for training and the absence of child care facilities are factors in addition to employers' adverse attitudes.



"Remaining inequities with respect to access to jobs, to rates of pay and to opportunities for training and advancement are not only unjust, they are not good business," she declared. "This is bad for women and their families and it's bad for the economy."

Mrs. Keyserling believes the equal pay act of 1963 and the civil rights act of 1964 represent the most far-reaching steps ever taken to eliminate the barriers.

Mrs. Keyserling said there has been widespread compliance by employers with the law's demands and rulings that have resulted in pay boosts for many of the 8.5 million women affected.

Sporty sportsmen also sashay socially

FOR THE hunters of wild game, fowl and fish it was another bumper year, if the feast produced from the yield of one tight-knit group of fellow sportsmen is any indication. Annually the men of this group host a lavish hunters' dinner for their wives.

Planning the latest were Milt and Betty Cantor in cahoots with Ev Boyette, manager of Long Beach Yacht Club, where dinner was given. Ed, the hunter, is also a gourmet and here are some of the viands he arranged to have served from the bounty donated by fellow huntsmen. The main course included venison steaks and venison roast, duck, dove, pheasant and chukar (all served with special sauces). Also southern style turnip greens and turnips cooked together, black-eyed peas plus elegantly seasoned wild rice.

During the cocktail hour there were trays of icy oysters on the half shell, plump chilled shrimp, caviar, cornish game hen wings in hot wine sauce, chilled, baked trout—other finger food "au grandiose."

Among heros of the night was Chuck Dickie, there with wife, Virginia. Chuck was a major contributor of the venison served, and no wonder. Last fall when gang hunted in Caribou Basin of Idaho (near Jackson Hole), Chuck bagged one of the biggest deers the guide had ever seen taken. It weighed 262 pounds field dressed. Milt announced that, if registered with Field and Stream, it could have broken last year's 242-pound record. Dickie failed to register it, however.

Others at dinner were John and Naomi Hanbery, Paul and Lorraine Deats, Jerry and Jo Rhyne, Dr. Lowell and "Rickie" Bowton, Jim and Maxine McElfish, Harry and Joyce Christensen, Tom and April Griffin, John and Darlene Coultrup and Dorothy Boyette.

TRADING his seaside home for the open sea, the snowside or a sunny golf course is just a matter of weekends for Del Smith, 64-62nd Place. In order, Del went skiing at Aspen, Colo., for two weeks in company with Oscar Contratto Jr.

He returned in time to shift from ski legs to sea legs and crew for Hugh Lamson Tantara on L-40 sail boat for Los Angeles Yacht Club's around Catalina race.

First in the Whitney series, they took fourth in Class C in competition with 25 boats. Not bad.

This weekend he's down in San Clemente to play a golf tourney with co-workers at Douglas Aircraft. Next weekend? Well, something must be doing in the desert—and it WOULD be a change of pace.

WORK, but not quite as usual, has been going on for Gladys Christensen the past seven weeks. She's continuing at her florist trade, while flat on her back in bed!

She must stay in traction most of the time due to aggravation of an old back injury brought on by a fall. To add insult to injury, if you'll pardon the expression, the fall occurred while she was in the hospital with a case of pneumonia!

FLORIST GLADYS CHRISTENSEN
. . . literally has been taking her work to bed with her!

One day recently she did bouquets for two brides and ten bridesmaids—all from the top of her "work-table" bedspread. To date she has done the flowers for seven weddings a la boudoir.

"That's nothing," quips indefatigable although inbedable Gladys, "when I first injured my back three years ago, I was president of Zonta Club and not only conducted frequent board meetings, but full-scale membership meetings from my bed, Roberts' Rules of Orders or no."

WITHIN THE first half hour after they walked into their home following three luxuriously relaxing weeks in Hawaii, Bob and Hope Cunningham's phone rang four times. That was enough to make them wish they were right back where they'd been. A fifth ring—they'd probably have gone!

Bob and Hope took grandson, Brad, 13, over for first week of their holiday so he could ride the big waves at the famed surfing beachs of of Oahu. In Honolulu they stayed at the Colony Surf. They put Brad on the plane for home, then went on to Maui, where they stayed at the Colony Club at Kaana Pali, (near Lahaina) for a week, then traveled on to Hawaii to stay at Kona Plantation for balance of their stay.

Their suntans prove one thing—the sun is shining brighter, hotter in Hawaii than here.

FEELING like they had a double Mardi Gras celebration are most recent returnees from New Orleans Jonah and Helen Jones and Walter and Lucille Lintz, who flew to "NO" for Mardi Gras with Jim and Ann Woods.

The Joneses and Lintzes stayed at Royal Orleans in the French Quarter while the Woods stayed at Montedeleon, also in French Quarter. Balconies from their second-floor suites offered the best spot in town to view parades, hi-jinks. On Feb. 24 Helen and Jonah flew to Dallas, Texas, to be royally entertained by Harold Byrd (Adm. Byrd's cousin, no less) in his gorgeous home. Walter and Lucille flew to Austin, Texas, for additional galety before enplaning home first of week.

TRAVEL IS like peanuts for Dorothy Dalton. Once she gets her bags packed, she can't wait to take them far enough. Currently she's feasting again, satisfying travel pangs on a four-and-a-half-month journey around the world.

She'll visit 23 countries in all. Free as a breeze, she's traveling all alone. She left Tuesday for Honolulu, where she'll board the President Cleveland for Yokohama and her first tour of Japan. After that, she'll fly from country to country. This is her fourth trip abroad but her first to the Far East. Also new will be a visit to Russia, where she'll spend 16 days.

Only one of her treks was a total mess. That was in 1959 when, on the second day at sea out of New York, she was thrown from an improvised seat in the ship's theater. A number of people piled on top of her in the melee, resulting in a broken hip and wrist for Dorothy. After nine days in sick bay and five weeks in a hospital in Naples, Italy, she was flown back here to complete mending.

AFTER 15 years of marriage, all of them as apartment dwellers, Jim and Bev Henderson have taken the homeowners' leap. They moved into their new place at 220 College Park Drive in the College Park development in Seal Beach and are in the throes of getting settled.

WILD WAVES S. . .

Sporty sportsmen also sashay socially

FOR THE hunters of wild game, fowl and fish it was another bumper year, if the feast produced from the yield of one tight-knit group of fellow sportsmen is any indication. Annually the men of this group host a lavish hunters' dinner for their wives.

Planning the latest were Milt and Betty Cantor in cahoots with Ev Boyette, manager of Long Beach Yacht Club, where dinner was given. Ed, the hunter, is also a gourmet and here are some of the viands he arranged to have served from the bounty donated by fellow huntsmen. The main course included venison steaks and venison roast, duck, dove, pheasant and chukar (all served with special sauces). Also southern style turnip greens and turnips cooked together, black-eyed peas plus elegantly seasoned wild rice.

During the cocktail hour there were trays of icy oysters on the half shell, plump chilled shrimp, caviar, cornish game hen wings in hot wine sauce, chilled, baked trout—other finger food "au grandiose."

Among heros of the night was Chuck Dickie, there with wife, Virginia. Chuck was a major contributor of the venison served, and no wonder. Last fall when gang hunted in Caribou Basin of Idaho (near Jackson Hole), Chuck bagged one of the biggest deers the guide had ever seen taken. It weighed 262 pounds field dressed. Milt announced that, if registered with Field and Stream, it could have broken last year's 242-pound record. Dickie failed to register it, however.

Others at dinner were John and Naomi Hanbery, Paul and Lorraine Deats, Jerry and Jo Rhyne, Dr. Lowell and "Rickie" Bowton, Jim and Maxine McElfish, Harry and Joyce Christensen, Tom and April Griffin, John and Darlene Coultrup and Dorothy Boyette.

TRADING his seaside home for the open sea, the snowside or a sunny golf course is just a matter of weekends for Del Smith, 64-62nd Place. In order, Del went skiing at Aspen, Colo., for two weeks in company with Oscar Contratto Jr.

He returned in time to shift from ski legs to sea legs and crew for Hugh Lamson Tantara on L-40 sail boat for Los Angeles Yacht Club's around Catalina race.

First in the Whitney series, they took fourth in Class C in competition with 25 boats. Not bad.

This weekend he's down in San Clemente to play a golf tourney with co-workers at Douglas Aircraft. Next weekend? Well, something must be doing in the desert—and it WOULD be a change of pace.

WORK, but not quite as usual, has been going on for Gladys Christensen the past seven weeks. She's continuing at her florist trade, while flat on her back in bed!

She must stay in traction most of the time due to aggravation of an old back injury brought on by a fall. To add insult to injury, if you'll pardon the expression, the fall occurred while she was in the hospital with a case of pneumonia!

FLORIST GLADYS CHRISTENSEN
. . . literally has been taking her work to bed with her!

One day recently she did bouquets for two brides and ten bridesmaids—all from the top of her "worktable" bedspread. To date she has done the flowers for seven weddings a la boudoir.

"That's nothing," quips indefatigable although inbedable Gladys, "when I first injured my back three years ago, I was president of Zonta Club and not only conducted frequent board meetings, but full-scale membership meetings from my bed, Roberts' Rules of Orders or no."

WITHIN THE first half hour after they walked into their home following three luxuriously relaxing weeks in Hawaii, Bob and Hope Cunningham's phone rang four times. That was enough to make them wish they were right back where they'd been. A fifth ring—they'd probably have gone!

Bob and Hope took grandson, Brad, 13, over for first week of their holiday so he could ride the big waves at the famed surfing beachs of of Oahu. In Honolulu they stayed at the Colony Surf. They put Brad on the plane for home, then went on to Maui, where they stayed at the Colony Club at Kaana Pali, (near Lahaina) for a week, then traveled on to Hawaii to stay at Kona Plantation for balance of their stay.

Their suntans prove one thing—the sun is shining brighter, hotter in Hawaii than here.

FEELING like they had a double Mardi Gras celebration are most recent returnees from New Orleans Jonah and Helen Jones and Walter and Lucille Lintz, who flew to "NO" for Mardi Gras with Jim and Ann Woods.

The Joneses and Lintzes stayed at Royal Orleans in the French Quarter while the Woods stayed at Montedeleon, also in French Quarter. Balconies from their second-floor suites offered the best spot in town to view parades, hi-jinks. On Feb. 24 Helen and Jonah flew to Dallas, Texas, to be royally entertained by Harold Byrd (Adm. Byrd's cousin, no less) in his gorgeous home. Walter and Lucille flew to Austin, Texas, for additional gaiety before enplaning home first of week.

TRAVEL IS like peanuts for Dorothy Dalton. Once she gets her bags packed, she can't wait to take them far enough. Currently she's feasting again, satisfying travel pangs on a four-and-a-half-month journey around the world.

She'll visit 23 countries in all. Free as a breeze, she's traveling all alone. She left Tuesday for Honolulu, where she'll board the President Cleveland for Yokohama and her first tour of Japan. After that, she'll fly from country to country. This is her fourth trip abroad but her first to the Far East. Also new will be a visit to Russia, where she'll spend 16 days.

Only one of her treks was a total mess. That was is 1959 when, on the second day at sea out of New York, she was thrown from an improvised seat in the ship's theater. A number of people piled on top of her in the melee, resulting in a broken hip and wrist for Dorothy. After nine days in sick bay and five weeks in a hospital in Naples, Italy, she was flown back here to complete mending.

For Junior League Provisionals . . .

Little word 'new' has lot of meaning

The word "new" is, without doubt, the most meaningful one in the vocabulary of 17 smart young women of our Long Beach area. First of all, the 17 are new provisional members of the Junior League of Long Beach.

They were introduced to active and sustaining members at a delightful tea this week in the Los Cerritos home of Mrs. John Lungren. The event, traditionally hosted by the league's sustainers, marks the beginning of a busy year for provisionals, introduces them to new acquaintances who will become fast friends.

MOST satisfying of all, league membership exposes them to facets of community service that will result in a new way of life.

Now launched on a 12-month provisional training course are Miss Lesley Lee Pearsall, Mmes. Richard L. Bell, Joseph P. Critchfield, Michael Driscoll, Sheldon A. Gebb, Robert Hallinan, Marlene Lauer Hotelling and William B. Labold.

Other new members welcomed were Mmes. Keith Lopp, Philip M. Madden, Thomas Medanich, Paul Merrill Jr., John F. Mitchell, Robert Mouw, Thomas A. Ramsey, Edward Twining and John Wavell.

JOINING Mrs. Lungren in greeting guests were Mrs. Lynn Evans, president of league's sustaining members; Mrs. Jay Moorhead, league president; Mrs. Robert Ivey, president-elect; and Mrs. James Hoagland.

Sustaining members who arranged the affair included Mmes. Arthur H. Buell, Preston W. Johnson, Bert Paul Jr., Philip Powers and William Stanton.

Assisting as hostesses were Mmes. Kimball Brown, Walter Greenwood, Ruth Craig Rawn, Mulford Smith and Jack Wooding.

MAJOR features of the provisionals training course will be taking the Community Understanding Tours sponsored by Community Volunteer Office; comprehensive study of history and the structure of Association of Junior Leagues of America and the local organization; education as to responsibilities of the volunteer's role in the community.

Story teller to entertain at libraries

Mrs. Victoria S. Johnson, expert story teller, will empty a bulging "Bag-o-Tales" for children Monday at 10 a.m. and at 11 a.m. at Bret Harte Branch Library, 1595 W. Willow St. and again at Los Altos Library, 5614 Britton Drive at 4 p.m.

She has an impressive list of titles and honors but the only one that counts with the children is, "The Book Witch." This is because of the exciting use of a mysterious bag into which she dips as she tells stories. From the bag she scoops out props that have to do with the stories that delight youngsters.

PARENTS CHALLENGE REPORT

Teen telephone calls upheld

By PAT McDONNELL
I, P-T Staff Writer

Now they're advocating that parents limit the use of the family phone so teen-agers can use it at will.

At least that's the advice of child psychologist Eda Le Shan.

According to psychologist Le Shan, the phone can serve as a bridge across an abyss of fear and unreadiness and that, through its use, young people prepare themselves for adult relationships.

When Carl Gibboney of Lakewood was asked about becoming more tolerant of lengthy teen-age phone conversations, he said:

"If that psychologist wants to pay the bill for an extra phone at our house, I'll be happy to go along with her idea."

Mrs. Gibboney, who has her share of P-TA activities as the mother of Danny, 15, Nancy, 14, and Kevin, 18, was more favorable to the proposal.

"It seems a good idea to me" she said. "The only time I get a rest from the phone is when the youngsters are using it. If they had unlimited use of it, perhaps I could enjoy an evening of uninterrupted TV."

Commented George Stanley, Lakewood, the father of two teenagers:

"I'd like to know if that psychologist is married and has any kids of her own."

ANOTHER observation of the child authority is that parents ask friends and relatives to call in the morning or early afternoon in order to facilitate the teenagers' "disembodied communication."

Upon mention of this suggestion, Mrs. William H. McCormack of Palos Verdes Peninsula replied:

"Absolutely ridiculous! I'm not ready to turn my world over to the teenagers yet."

Teen-age roll call at the McCormack home is answered by Irene, 17, Dianne, 15, Kevin, 14, and Darren, 13, and perhaps makes Mrs. McCormack's vociferous answer more understandable.

"Their day is coming and when they're adults, teenagers can use the phone to their hearts' content," she said. "In the meantime, I'll continue to limit the time they spend on the phone."

Commented Mrs. John Barry, Long Beach:

"The idea is fine—IF a family happens to have a private line, but when two or three other parties are waiting their turn, I think learning to be considerate of others is the most important lesson for teenagers.

"Actually, 10 or 15 minutes seems long enough for any phone call. But when our teenagers, John, 18, Jimmy, 14, and Carl, 13, get home from school, they insist it's a life or death matter that they use the phone.

"The crisis is always over the same thing. Their girlfriends have given strict orders to be called at a specific time. Why, if they didn't call, the girls might be too furious to even to speak to them on the phone."

WHEN ASKED her opinion of the psychologist's theory, Mrs. Dean Taylor of Long Beach said:

"Did you say that psychologist's report was in a magazine? I don't want my teen-age daughters to read it or they'll have more ammunition for their battle to gain full control of the family phone."

Stated Mrs. Vane Woolery of Palos Verdes Peninsula, "I definitely do not go along with the idea. To be truthful, my three teenagers are boys and we've had very little trouble over the phone. But, we have an 8-year-old daughter and when she's bitten by the telephonitis bug, I'm sure my views will be the same."

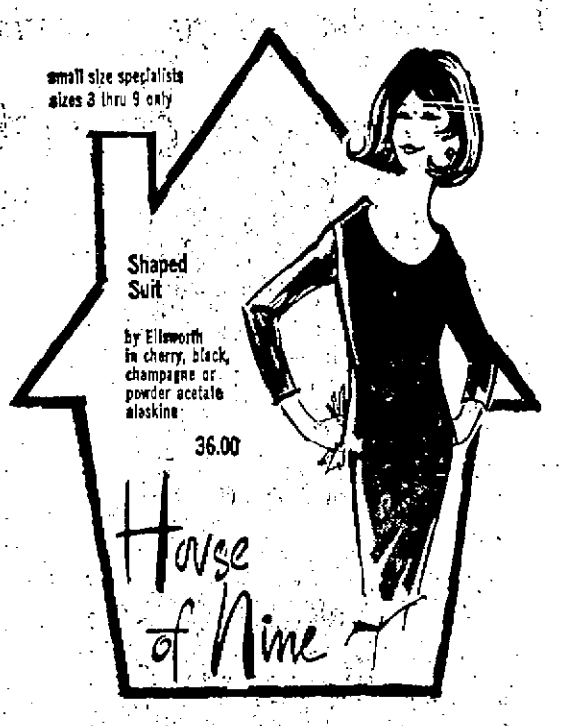
"Why, I never heard of such a silly thing," said Mrs. Frank King, Long Beach.

"Teenagers should learn to discipline themselves. Granted, my 17-year-old, Kathleen, does seem to solve many of her uncertainties through phone conversations with her friends, but I still don't think teenagers should be given a free reign with the phone—even if they have their own private ones."

Mrs. O. M. Flogerzi, Lakewood, was the only parent to make an affirmative reply.

"I'd rather make my calls in the morning," she said. "I've also faced the fact of life that wherever a teenager dwells, it's impossible to get a call through during after-school hours."

"When I was young, it seemed there was a drugstore, baseball lot or someplace we congregated to talk. Now, teenagers are so rushed and pushed into so many activities, the phone is the quickest and easiest way to talk to each other."



MRS. OTIS ONICK of Wilmington has imposed a strict 30-minutes-on, 30-minutes-off-the-phone schedule for her three teenagers.

"The half-hour limit was started when I was out one evening and my car broke down," Mrs. Onick said. "I tried for two and a half hours to get a call through because my 18-year-old was talking on the phone to his girlfriend.

"If they want to use the phone longer than the half-hour period, they always can put up with the inconvenience of a booth and use a pay phone."

What was the reaction of teenagers to the psychologists' report?

A unanimous: "Yeahhhhhhhh, I'll go along with that."

PARENTS CHALLENGE REPORT

Teen telephone calls upheld

By PAT McDONNELL
I, P-T Staff Writer

Now they're advocating that parents limit the use of the family phone so teen-agers can use it at will.

At least that's the advice of child psychologist Eda Le Shan.

According to psychologist Le Shan, the phone can serve as a bridge across an abyss of fear and unreadiness and that, through its use, young people prepare themselves for adult relationships.

When Carl Gibboney of Lakewood was asked about becoming more tolerant of lengthy teen-age phone conversations, he said:

"If that psychologist wants to pay the bill for an extra phone at our house, I'll be happy to go along with her idea."

Mrs. Gibboney, who has her share of P-TA activities as the mother of Danny, 15, Nancy, 14, and Kevin, 18, was more favorable to the proposal.

"It seems a good idea to me" she said. "The only time I get a rest from the phone is when the youngsters are using it. If they had unlimited use of it, perhaps I could enjoy an evening of uninterrupted TV."

Commented George Stanley, Lakewood, the father of two teenagers:

"I'd like to know if that psychologist is married and has any kids of her own."

ANOTHER observation of the child authority is that parents ask friends and relatives to call in the morning or early afternoon in order to facilitate the teenagers' "disembodied communication."

Upon mention of this suggestion, Mrs. William H. McCormack of Palos Verdes Peninsula replied:

"Absolutely ridiculous! I'm not ready to turn my world over to the teenagers yet."

Teen-age roll call at the McCormack home is answered by Irene, 17, Dianne, 15, Kevin, 14, and Darren, 13, and perhaps makes Mrs. McCormack's vociferous answer more understandable.

"Their day is coming and when they're adults, teenagers can use the phone to their hearts' content," she said. "In the meantime, I'll continue to limit the time they spend on the phone."

Commented Mrs. John Barry, Long Beach:

"The idea is fine—IF a family happens to have a private line, but when two or three other parties are waiting their turn, I think learning to be considerate of others is the most important lesson for teenagers.

"Actually, 10 or 15 minutes seems long enough for any phone call. But when our teenagers, John, 18, Jimmy, 14, and Carl, 13, get home from school, they insist it's a life or death matter that they use the phone.

"The crisis is always over the same thing. Their girlfriends have given strict orders to be called at a specific time. Why, if they didn't call, the girls might be too furious to even to speak to them on the phone."

WHEN ASKED her opinion of the psychologist's theory, Mrs. Dean Taylor of Long Beach said:

"Did you say that psychologist's report was in a magazine? I don't want my teen-age daughters to read it or they'll have more ammunition for their battle to gain full control of the family phone."

Stated Mrs. Vane Woolery of Palos Verdes Peninsula, "I definitely do not go along with the idea. To be truthful, my three teenagers are boys and we've had very little trouble over the phone. But, we have an 8-year-old daughter and when she's bitten by the telephonitis bug, I'm sure my views will be the same."

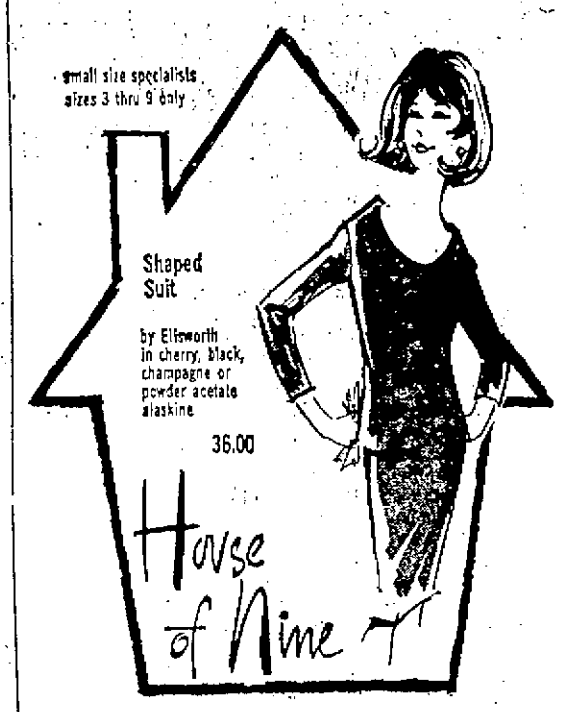
"Why, I never heard of such a silly thing," said Mrs. Frank King, Long Beach.

"Teenagers should learn to discipline themselves. Granted, my 17-year-old, Kathleen, does seem to solve many of her uncertainties through phone conversations with her friends, but I still don't think teenagers should be given a free reign with the phone—even if they have their own private ones."

Mrs. O. M. Flogerzi, Lakewood, was the only parent to make an affirmative reply.

"I'd rather make my calls in the morning," she said. "I've also faced the fact of life that wherever a teenager dwells, it's impossible to get a call through during after-school hours."

"When I was young, it seemed there was a drugstore, baseball lot or someplace we congregated to talk. Now, teenagers are so rushed and pushed into so many activities, the phone is the quickest and easiest way to talk to each other."



MRS. OTIS ONICK of Wilmington has imposed a strict 30-minutes-on, 30-minutes-off-the-phone schedule for her three teenagers.

"The half-hour limit was started when I was out one evening and my car broke down," Mrs. Onick said. "I tried for two and a half hours to get a call through because my 18-year-old was talking on the phone to his girlfriend.

"If they want to use the phone longer than the half-hour period, they always can put up with the inconvenience of a booth and use a pay phone."

What was the reaction of teenagers to the psychologists' report?

A unanimous: "Yeahhhhhhhh, I'll go along with that."

PAT WALKER AT HOME... pictured in Hollywood Hills home with 7-year-old daughter, Bridgett, and infant adopted son, Sean.

'The People at home are the most important possession a woman has' believes. "With today's standard of living, many wives and mothers are forced into careers.

"Often it's better that way. An active woman is happier, healthier, younger, more at peace with herself and certainly, more interesting."

She takes to task the woman who lives a life of doldrums, whose most important event of the day might be that the milk delivery was late.

Familiar with the ups and downs of bathroom scales, she notes that 75% of all overeating is frustration and habit. . . .

Also, that there's more obesity among "just housewives" than any other group. "In fact," she continues, "the percentage is so overwhelming, I couldn't even wager a guess."

Her firm belief: "If a woman would take as much pride in how she looks at home as at a cocktail party, the divorce courts wouldn't be so crowded.

"The people at home are the most important possession a woman has."

ABOUT CAREERS: "It is not necessary for a woman to be hardboiled or for her to compete with men in the business world. She can achieve success on her own merit.

"I wouldn't put my feet in a pair of men's shoes for anything in the world."

Speaking of careers and shoes, she keeps her own feminine high heels clicking faster than a troupe of flamenco dancers.

A normal workday may include 14 hours on the job, 100 to 150 phone calls (maybe 30 of them before leaving home), 100 or more letters to read and answer.

Labeled "The Flying Irishman" by Pan Pacific Airlines, she may, during a month's time, fly to Honolulu a couple of times (she's made 160 trips there the past three years), to Australia twice and make an average 10 trips to San Francisco.

Between flights she burns up the freeways visiting each of her area salons at least three times a week.

PAT WALKER first launched her current business in a small building in downtown Long Beach. Mustering all available cash for a vigorous newspaper advertising campaign, she had the salon operating at full capacity in less than four months.

That same year she acquired a business partner — Harrison W. Hertzberg, Los Angeles attorney whose added attraction was a degree in engineering.

Today the business has grown into a $2½ million operation.

Via telephone, automobile, airplane and ocean liner, Miss Walker now supervises two salons in the Long Beach-Lakewood area, one each in Pasadena, Reseda and San Francisco, two in Hawaii and one in Australia.

Taking more of the weight of the world on her shoulders, Miss Walker envisions future expansions including five more figure perfection palaces in Australia and similar operations in New Zealand, Hong Kong, Tokyo, Mexico City, Washington, D.C., Chicago, possibly New York and, coming soon, a swank salon on Los Angeles' fashionable Wilshire Boulevard.

Most recent success of the Walker-Hertzberg partnership: they're using electronics to help shape up the world.

All salons (including those already in operation) will be equipped with the firm's new all-electronic Figuretron and Fotometric equipment which scientifically reduces and photographically measures the most minute changes in each female's statistics.

THE 5-FOOT-3, 102-pound figure authority doesn't know how many women are walking around with Pat Walker figures . . . but the figure is considerable.

Her patrons have ranged in age from 7 to 94 years.

The greatest individual weight reduction: from 240 to 106 pounds.

The average weight of a patron who walks through her doors ("first visit, of course"): 170 pounds.

Her files bulge with success stories, with accounts of marriages that didn't go on the rocks, afterall . . . of romances and jobs that were saved . . . of stars who made comebacks with new box office figures.

Miss Walker's own figure is her best advertisement.

Though she's mad for quality clothes, alligator shoes and bags, minks and dramatic jewelry, she says the figure is more important to the way clothes look than any other factor.

"Buying clothes to camouflage a bad figure is a waste of time and money. The most expensive costume is overshadowed by a bulgy, bad figure. It's more economical to be thin."

What's the most common figure fault? Hips and thighs.

What are the ideal female statistics? "There are none," says Miss Walker. "It depends on bone structure, height, distribution of weight. A woman can weigh 135 and have a perfect figure; or she may weigh 102 and have a very bad one. I have seen 36-24-36 dimensions that added up to a bad figure.

"Bone structure is the key to overall proportions. Inches are more important than pounds. When there is NO fatty tissue in any given area, then you have a perfect figure—for YOU. And every woman is different.

MORE ABOUT dress: "I firmly disapprove of the girdled look—both from the appearance it creates (men hate it!) and because of the tendency to cause flabbiness. Women should not depend on girdles to hold them in. That's what muscles are supposed to do."

Also, she believes in a limited wardrobe of quality fabrics with classic lines ("afterall, you can't wear more than one outfit at a time") . . . in clothes that show off the figure (probably because she has one to show off) . . . in good posture ("poor posture causes more ills than anything") . . . and in keeping up with what's going on ("even a good figure doesn't compensate for an empty head").

Miss Walker limits her hobbies to her business . . . her home, an old mansion in the Hollywood Hills . . . and her children.

In addition to all her other responsibilities, she's the very devoted mother of a 7-year-old daughter, Bridgett, and an infant adopted son, Sean.

Nursery schools take spotlight this week

It's a wonderful world for children.

All it takes is a little use of their imaginations for Long Beach tots to visit the most glamorous and exciting spots on the globe and never take so much as one step from area playgrounds.

At Wardlow Park, youngsters capture the spirit of safari by climbing aboard an elephant and then sliding down his trunk.

At College Estates Playground, they become heroes of the Old West as they sit and play in an authentic stagecoach.

At El Dorado Park, they become astronauts and space scientists by launching a rocket while adjusting flashing lights and ringing bells on an electrical board.

At Bayshore Park, they can go "nowhere" in a rustic sailboat.

Preschoolers will agree all this supervised play time and classes in crafts, music and games is pretty serious business to prepare for the learning days ahead.

This variety of equipment and fun is offered at parks throughout Long Beach where 16 Parent Participation Nursery Schools meet.

Beginning today, the 16 groups are joining forces with Long Beach child care centers, Long Beach City College Child Development Center and 34 pre-school parent education classes to provide a one-week open house program in observance of Nursery Education Week.

Exhibits will be on display in libraries, programs will be aired on Long Beach radio stations and model classes will be conducted at centers. Launching the observance will be an interview, titled "Insight," today on CBS-TV.

Additional information on open house schedules may be obtained at libraries or from Mrs. Daniel Krehbiel, 3166 Senesac Ave.

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD

Neglected husband sounds off

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

You are always hearing about "mama's boys" — what about "mama's girls"? That's just what my wife is.

She not only neglects me, she neglects our two boys. "Mama" lives across town and calls Susan every time she has a stomach-ache! And Susan goes flying over there to fix her lunch or dinner and watch over her. Many times the boys come home from school to an empty house, finding a note saying, "Supper is in the refrigerator. I'll be home later."

Needless to say, by the time I get home from work (two hours later) the boys (ages 10 and 12) are running the neighborhood — no supervision and a snack for supper.

All this is unnecessary. Susan has an older sister living near her mother who could do all that Susan is doing but Susan is her "baby" and no one else will do. Fact of the matter is no one else WOULD do it. "Mama" never really gave up Susan, didn't want her to get married at all, and Susan says she feels guilty if she doesn't help her mother when she calls.

What am I going to do about her? I've talked to her, her sister has talked to her. Nothing does any good. You can tell wives what to do about their husbands and their mothers. Now tell me what to do about my wife and her mother — if you can! — FED UP

DEAR FED UP:

It seems the best answer would be more distance between Susan and her mother, but that might not help as much as we would hope. Susan just might stay longer each time Mama called.

You could put your foot down and tell her she must stop neglecting her own family — or else. The "or else" could lead to a talk with a family counselor who, I'm sure, could do more to set her straight than either you or I.

If her mother really needs help, couldn't the girls arrange for a part-time maid or nurse for her? These mothers who won't "give up" their daughters can really make things rough and some daughters just do not have the "guts" to make the break.

It's up to you to take drastic steps to convince Susan that her first duty is to her family — her husband and her boys. So, get tough for a change, boy!—M.M.

METHODIST CEREMONY

Marilyn Arey wed to Dennis McQuown

Wedding vows were exchanged by Marilyn Onalee Arey and Dennis Shawn McQuown in a double ring ceremony Friday evening witnessed by 700 guests at Los Altos Methodist Church.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Everett W. Arey, 6480 El Jardin St., and Mr. and Mrs. Noel A. McQuown of Los Angeles.

The bride wore a formal gown of dulatt satin. The empire waistline was accented with a fabric bow forming a base for an elaborate desgn in beads, seed pearls and crystals. Her veil was a Brussels' lace mantilla held by a tiny crown of seed pearls.

Judy McQuown, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor and David Berkus was best man. Completing the wedding party were Donna Brooks, Linda Friebus, Pamela Henson, Joanne Moser and Anne Pickup, bridesmaids; Erika Moser, flower girl; Jerry Breen, Edward Millar, Stephen Salyer, Robert Swenson, David Young, William Schmidt and Kenneth Schmidt, ushers.

A reception at Elks Club honored the newlyweds prior to their departure on a honeymoon trip to Acapulco. They will reside in Torrance on return.

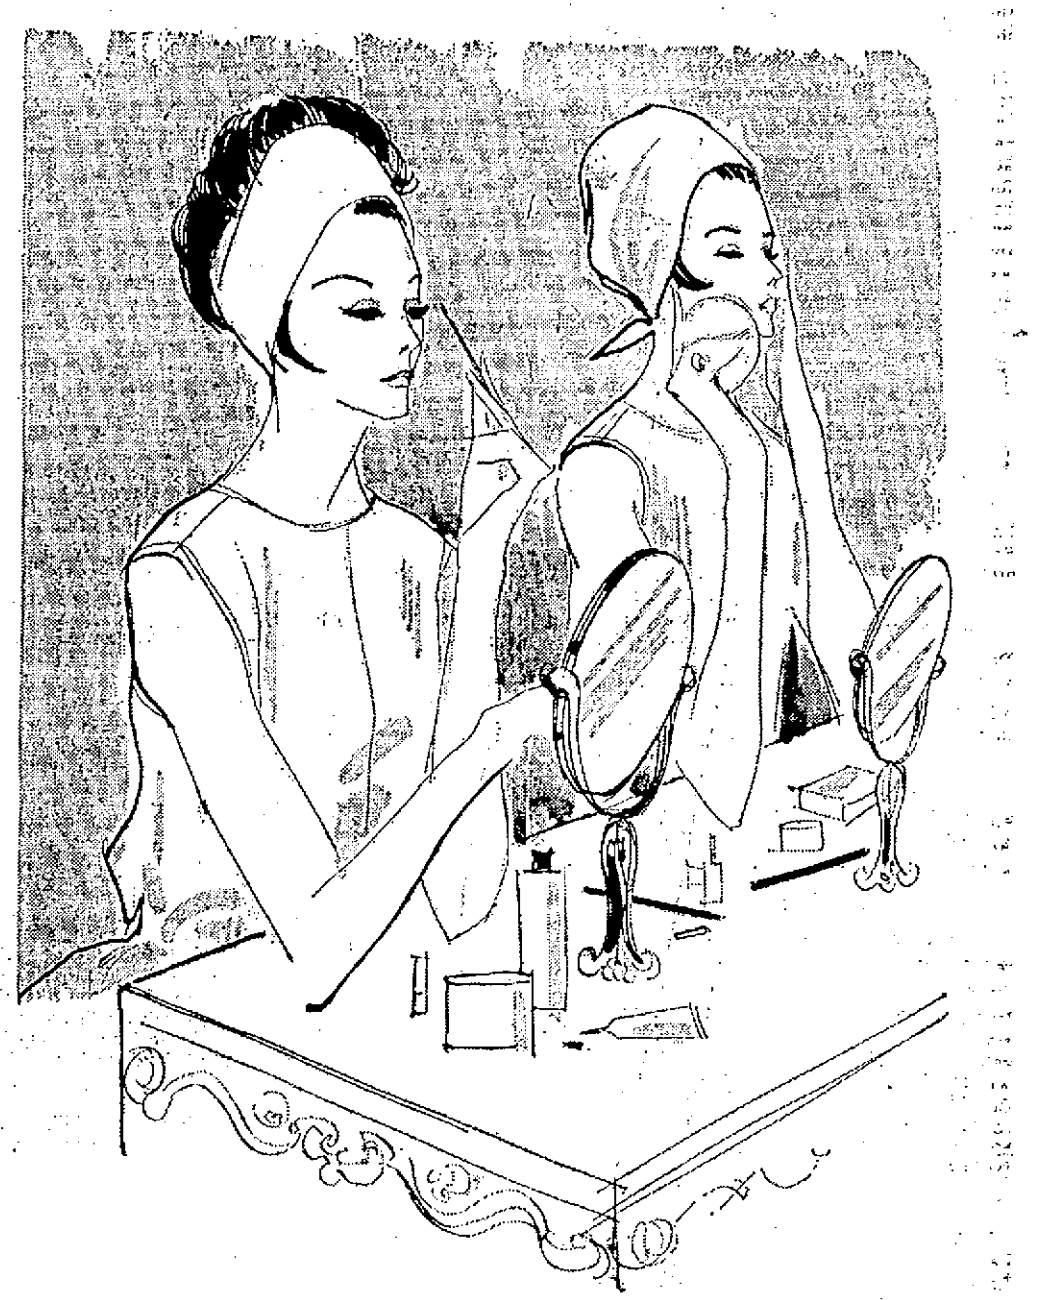
The bridegroom will be graduated in June from UCLA School of Medicine. His bride is a teacher in the Garden Grove Elementary School District.

MRS. DENNIS McQUOWN

Taking a plunge proves fatal to false eyelashes in the swim

Fortunate persons who take winter vacations find a plunge in the hotel swimming pool or the ocean a significant part of their vacation in the sun. If you use mascara, even water-resistant, blot your eyes when emerging from water but don't rub. This helps avoid smears. Don't swim with your false eyelashes on.

Altar Society



St. Bartholomew Altar Society will give a luncheon and card party Tuesday at 11:30 a.m. in the parish hall, 5100 Broadway.

OES bazaar

Next Saturday from 5 p.m. to 7:30 at Monte Vista Temple, 1120 E. Market St., All States Chapter 502, Order of Eastern Star, will have its annual carnival and bazaar. There will be booths featuring handmade articles, candies, cookies and a "Trash and Treasure" corner. Fun booths for the children will also be in operation. ABOUT CAREERS: "It is not necessary for a woman to be hardboiled or for her to compete with men in the business world. She can achieve success on her own merit.

"I wouldn't put my feet in a pair of men's shoes for anything in the world."

Speaking of careers and shoes, she keeps her own feminine high heels clicking faster than a troupe of flamenco dancers.

A normal workday may include 14 hours on the job, 100 to 150 phone calls (maybe 30 of them before leaving home), 100 or more letters to read and answer.

Labeled "The Flying Irishman" by Pan Pacific Airlines, she may, during a month's time, fly to Honolulu a couple of times (she's made 160 trips there the past three years), to Australia twice and make an average 10 trips to San Francisco.

Between flights she burns up the freeways visiting each of her area salons at least three times a week,

PAT WALKER first launched her current business in a small building in downtown Long Beach. Mustering all available cash for a vigorous newspaper advertising campaign, she had the salon operating at full capacity in less than four months.

That same year she acquired a business partner — Harrison W. Hertzberg, Los Angeles attorney whose added attraction was a degree in engineering.

Today the business has grown into a $2½ milllion operation.

Via telephone, automobile, airplane and ocean liner, Miss Walker now supervises two salons in the Long Beach-Lakewood area, one each in Pasadena, Reseda and San Francisco, two in Hawaii and one in Australia.

Taking more of the weight of the world on her shoulders, Miss Walker envisions future expansions including five more figure perfection palaces in Australia and similar operations in New Zealand, Hong Kong, Tokyo, Mexico City, Washington, D.C., Chicago, possibly New York and, coming soon, a swank salon on Los Angeles' fashionable Wilshire Boulevard.

Most recent success of the Walker-Hertzberg partnership: they're using electronics to help shape up the world.

All salons (including those already in operation) will be equipped with the firm's new all-electronic Figuretron and Fotometric equipment which scientifically reduces and photographically measures the most minute changes in each female's statistics.

THE 5-FOOT-3, 102-pound figure authority doesn't know how many women are walking around with Pat Walker figures . . . but the figure is considerable.

Her patrons have ranged in age from 7 to 94 years.

The greatest individual weight reduction: from 240 to 106 pounds.

The average weight of a patron who walks through her doors ("first visit, of course"): 170 pounds.

Her files bulge with success stories, with accounts of marriages that didn't go on the rocks, afterall . . . of romances and jobs that were saved . . . of stars who made comebacks with new box office figures.

Miss Walker's own figure is her best advertisement.

Though she's mad for quality clothes, alligator shoes and bags, minks and dramatic jewelry, she says the figure is more important to the way clothes look than any other factor.

"Buying clothes to camouflage a bad figure is a waste of time and money. The most expensive costume is overshadowed by a bulgy, bad figure. It's more economical to be thin."

What's the most common figure fault? Hips and thighs.

What are the ideal female statistics? "There are none," says Miss Walker. "It depends on bone structure, height, distribution of weight. A woman can weigh 135 and have a perfect figure; or she may weigh 102 and have a very bad one. I have seen 36-24-36 dimensions that added up to a bad figure.

"Bone structure is the key to overall proportions. Inches are more important than pounds. When there is NO fatty tissue in any given area, then you have a perfect figure—for YOU. And every woman is different.

MORE ABOUT dress: "I firmly disapprove of the girdled look—both from the appearance it creates (men hate it!) and because of the tendency to cause flabbiness. Women should not depend on girdles to hold them in. That's what muscles are supposed to do."

Also, she believes in a limited wardrobe of quality fabrics with classic lines ("afterall, you can't wear more than one outfit at a time") . . . in clothes that show off the figure (probably because she has one to show off) . . . in good posture ("poor posture causes more ills than anything") . . . and in keeping up with what's going on ("even a good figure doesn't compensate for an empty head").

Miss Walker limits her hobbies to her business . . . her home, an old mansion in the Hollywood Hills . . . and her children.

In addition to all her other responsibilities, she's the very devoted mother of a 7-year-old daughter, Bridgett, and an infant adopted son, Sean.

Nursery schools take spotlight this week

It's a wonderful world for children.

All it takes is a little use of their imaginations for Long Beach tots to visit the most glamorous and exciting spots on the globe and never take so much as one step from area playgrounds.

At Wardlow Park, youngsters capture the spirit of safari by climbing aboard an elephant and then sliding down his trunk.

At College Estates Playground, they become heroes of the Old West as they sit and play in an authentic stagecoach.

At El Dorado Park, they become astronauts and space scientists by launching a rocket while adjusting flashing lights and ringing bells on an electrical board.

At Bayshore Park, they can go "nowhere" in a rustic sailboat.

Preschoolers will agree all this supervised play time and classes in crafts, music and games is pretty serious business to prepare for the learning days ahead.

This variety of equipment and fun is offered at parks throughout Long Beach where 16 Parent Participation Nursery Schools meet.

Beginning today, the 16 groups are joining forces with Long Beach child care centers, Long Beach City College Child Development Center and 34 pre-school parent education classes to provide a one-week open house program in observance of Nursery Education Week.

Exhibits will be on display in libraries, programs will be aired on Long Beach radio stations and model classes will be conducted at centers. Launching the observance will be an interview, titled "Insight," today on CBS-TV.

Additional information on open house schedules may be obtained at libraries or from Mrs. Daniel Krchbiel, 3166 Senesac Ave.

GETTING INTO THE SWING OF GUIDED PLAY
. . . Mrs. Roger Sutton watches over pre-schoolers Julie, Kam and Billy.

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD

Neglected husband sounds off

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

You are always hearing about "mama's boys" — what about "mama's girls"? That's just what my wife is.

She not only neglects me, she neglects our two boys. "Mama" lives across town and calls Susan every time she has a stomach-ache! And Susan goes flying over there to fix her lunch or dinner and watch over her. Many times the boys come home from school to an empty house, finding a note saying, "Supper is in the refrigerator. I'll be home later."

Needless to say, by the time I get home from work (two hours later) the boys (ages 10 and 12) are running the neighborhood — no supervision and a snack for supper.

All this is unnecessary. Susan has an older sister living near her mother who could do all that Susan is doing but Susan is her "baby" and no one else will do. Fact of the matter is no one else WOULD do it. "Mama" never really gave up Susan, didn't want her to get married at all, and Susan says she feels guilty if she doesn't help her mother when she calls.

What am I going to do about her? I've talked to her, her sister has talked to her. Nothing does any good. You can tell wives what to do about their husbands and their mothers. Now tell me what to do about my wife and her mother — if you can! — FED UP

DEAR FED UP:

It seems the best answer would be more distance between Susan and her mother, but that might not help as much as we would hope. Susan just might stay longer each time Mama called.

You could put your foot down and tell her she must stop neglecting her own family — or else. The "or else" could lead to a talk with a family counselor who, I'm sure, could do more to set her straight than either you or I.

If her mother really needs help, couldn't the girls arrange for a part-time maid or nurse for her? These mothers who won't "give up" their daughters can really make things rough and some daughters just do not have the "guts" to make the break.

It's up to you to take drastic steps to convince Susan that her first duty is to her family — her husband and her boys. So, get tough for a change, boy!—M.M.

METHODIST CEREMONY

Marilyn Arey wed to Dennis McQuown

Wedding vows were exchanged by Marilyn Onalee Arey and Dennis Shawn McQuown in a double ring ceremony Friday evening witnessed by 700 guests at Los Altos Methodist Church.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Everett W. Arey, 6480 El Jardin St., and Mr. and Mrs. Noel A. McQuown of Los Angeles.

The bride wore a formal gown of dulatt satin. The empire waistline was accented with a fabric bow forming a base for an elaborate desgn in beads, seed pearls and crystals. Her veil was a Brussels' lace mantilla held by a tiny crown of seed pearls.

Judy McQuown, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor and David Berkus was best man. Completing the wedding party were Donna Brooks, Linda Friebus, Pamela Henson, Joanne Moser and Anne Pickup, bridesmaids; Erika Moser, flower girl; Jerry Breen, Edward Millar, Stephen Salyer, Robert Swenson, David Young, William Schmidt and Kenneth Schmidt, ushers.

A reception at Elks Club honored the newlyweds prior to their departure on a honeymoon trip to Acapulco. They will reside in Torrance on return.

The bridegroom will be graduated in June from UCLA School of Medicine. His bride is a teacher in the Garden Grove Elementary School District.

Taking a plunge proves fatal to false eyelashes in the swim

Fortunate persons who take winter vacations find a plunge in the hotel swimming pool or the ocean a significant part of their vacation in the sun. If you use mascara, even water-resistant, blot your eyes when emerging from water but don't rub. This helps avoid smears. Don't swim with your false eyelashes on.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

He's the apple of his Girl Scouts' eyes

By MILDRED K. FLANARY
I.-P-T Food Editor

A man of many talents, today's Chef of the Week, Dr. Francis J. (Frenchy) Flynn, is an educator, administrator, artist, musician — and most especially — a duo-doctor—executive dean of development at Long Beach State College, and "el doctor" of the Girl Scouts Camp at Idylwild.

Campus duties for Dean Flynn are "everyday," but Girl Scouts are extra special, and since this has been declared National Girl Scout Week, it is fitting that we give credit to a man, whose contributions to the Girl Scout program would be hard to match.

AS A MEMBER of the board of directors for the Greater Long Beach Girl Scout Council (it includes 12,000 girls), he has performed as "engineer-contractor and layer-outer" of their Skyland Ranch at Idylwild.

The trailer, occupied these many years by the caretaker and his wife, has been replaced by a new home; heated washrooms have been added to the dormitories, a foot bridge makes more accessible a certain path. New buildings will be erected as time and finances permit. As a result, he was recently given the Girl Scout Council special award.

Flynn came to Cal-State in the fall of 1950 as lecturer in education, and to assume responsibility for campus development, which has continued to the present time. In 1951 he became the first business manager; served from 1952-58 as dean of students, accepting his present position in 1958 — the responsibility for the college's building program.

BORN IN McCloud, Calif., he attended elementary and high school in Los Angeles, received his A.B. (Agriculture and Fine Arts), his M.S. and Ed. D. degrees from U.S.C.

Prior to coming to Cal-State, he spent, 17 years as teacher and public school administrator in Owens Valley and South Pasadena schools.

Flynn spent three years in the United States Navy, two in the South Pacific as communications officer.

A member and past vice president of Long Beach Rotary Club, Flynn belongs to Long Beach Masonic Lodge No. 327, and serves on the board of directors Long Beach Girl Scout Council, Torch Club International and College Religious Conference.

FLYNN and his wife, Jessica (a Zeta Tau Alpha from U.S.C.) met aboard ship enroute to a USC-Stanford football game. They have a son, Gary, a graduate of LBSC and proprietor of The Livery men's shop, and a daughter, Nancy, a graduate of Wilson High, now working in LaJolla.

DR. FRANCIS J. FLYNN

Flynn's extracurricular pursuits—if he ever has a stolen moment—are gardening, traveling and being a doting grandpa to little Keri, aged 4.

He dreams of the day when he can pursue his art and music. Having taught art, Flynn's talents run the gamut of oil painting, wood carving, jewelry designing and hand lettering.

As for his music, he plays the violin and sings a mean tenor.

True to his profession, he occasionally indulges in a bit of absentmindedness, i.e., driving to school and walking home sans car, or retracing his steps for a mislaid article.

But when it comes to his Apple Pancakes, he's never been known to forget an ingredient.

APPLE PANCAKES

1 cup sifted flour
1½ tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
⅛ cup granulated sugar
1 egg
¾ cup milk
½ cup apples (finely chopped)
1 tblsp. melted shortening

Mix as typical hotcake recipe with addition of the finely chopped apples. Bake on hot griddle, and while hot, spread with ¼ cup melted butter and brown sugar, roll and hold together with toothpicks.

Wonderful with coffee for a Sunday night supper or snack.

Oswald Jacoby

Start the play; south is ready for anything

A letter from Madison, Wis., reads:

"I opened the king of hearts and continued with the queen after South allowed me to hold the first trick. South took that trick in dummy and, after stewing around awhile, led a club. My partner played the deuce and South took the trick with the jack. Then South cashed the king of clubs. My partner dropped the queen and after some more study South led his last club and finessed against my ten. Then he discarded one spade on the ace of clubs and wound up losing only three tricks. I congratulated South on his play but my partner blamed me for not either opening a spade or shifting to that suit at trick two. What's your opinion?"

South's play was excellent. He must have reasoned that East held 10 cards in diamonds and spades for his bids. It also turns out that West's trump leads were rather helpful in that when South finessed against the ten of clubs he was not risking a two-trick set.

* * * *

THAT DOES not mean any criticism at all of the initial trump lead. In fact we know of no expert who would not have opened the king of hearts. Hearts had been bid and raised and West could not be expected to know that dummy would have no ruffing power at all.

Even an initial spade play might not have beaten the hand. South could cash dummy's ace of trumps and then play clubs to get the same spade discard.

Smooth Out Wrinkles

Wrinkles are riverbeds of dry cells caused by the plasma colloids (water carriers of the skin) having dried out through harsh weather. You can soon bring beauty and the glow of a healthy complexion back and protect your skin against wrinkle dryness. Ask your druggist for oil of Olay and before applying make-up smooth it over the face, neck and hands to lubricate and soften the skin and give it a peaches-and-cream bloom.

Winners of student contest in Debut Concert spotlight

Vicki Bacon, Valerie Mays and Dennis Morel, winners of Long Beach Student Competition, will perform with Long Beach Symphony Orchestra in a Debut Concert next Sunday at 4 p.m. in Long Beach City College Auditorium. There is no admission charge.

Vicki, 17, cellist competing in the strings division, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Bacon, 2410 Fanwood Ave. She attends Millikan High School, studies cello with Gabor Rejo in Los Angeles and is enrolled in the preparatory division of USC.

* * * *

WINDS division winner, Valorie, 17, plays flute and is a student of Roger Stevens, flutist with Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra. Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Mays, 1401 Hackett Ave., she attends Wilson High School.

Dennis, 21, won in the piano division. A sophomore at Long Beach City College, he studies piano with Joanna Hodges of Long Beach. His parents are Capt. and Mrs. William B. Morel, 3630 Delta Ave.

No award was presented in the voice division this year.

In addition to their concert appearances, the three winners will receive $100 each, awards contributed by Long Beach service clubs.

* * * *

VICKI will play the first movement of "Concerto for Cello and Orchestra" by Boccherini, Valerie will play "Poem for Flute and Orchestra" by Griffes and Dennis will play the first movement of the "Second Piano Concerto" by Shostakovich.

To complete the program, Lauris Jones, conductor, has chosen "Ballet Suite No. 1" by Gluck-Mottl and the second movement of Beethoven's "Symphony No. 7."

The Symphonettes, a high school girls club affiliated with Long Beach Symphony, will sponsor a reception for the young artists immediately following the concert, at a location to be announced. It is open to the public.

Conservatory program at Cerritos College

Cerritos College music department Wednesday will begin a new project, the Cerritos District Music Conservatory. The program, designed to supplement school music programs in the district, will continue through the middle of June. It is open to students now enrolled in school music programs who have their applications approved by their music instructor or district coordinator.

Students must provide their own instruments except in the case of large percussion, string or wind instruments. They also must provide their own transportation to the classes at Cerritos and at other locations in the district, and must maintain regular attendance.

* * * *

"ALTHOUGH existing music programs in our schools are doing an adequate to outstanding job at all levels," said Jack Wheaton, head of Cerritos music department, "there are many vital areas in music instruction not available to them."

These areas include private or small group instruction by professionals, voice classes where the individuals can receive detailed and personal instruction on methods of vocal production and repertoire, class piano with the newest techniques of the electronic piano lab, classes in basic musicianship where the fundamentals of sight-singing, sight reading, ear training and theory can be taught in small groups.

Also, highly specialized classes such as improvisation, student conducting, rhythm section drill, piano accompanying, arranging and music copying and finally district training groups such as the junior philharmonic orchestra and the district stage band.

* * * *

"EVERY effort has been made to meet with administrators and music teachers," Wheaton continued, "to help to develop the kind of program that will be the most beneficial to all; the students, parents, existing music programs and the community as a whole."

MUSEUM'S JURIED SHOW

Will enhance image

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

"The Fourth Annual Juried Show" at Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 East Ocean Blvd., opens today and will continue through March 27. Perhaps it was the handsome purchase awards which attracted the high level of work and the large number of sculptures.

The first award of $1,000 (from the Long Beach Museum Association) is for David Elder's "Corporeal Landscape Monument No. 4." This is a large welded steel piece, creatively burnished. It seems to be a figure resting atop a post; the contrast of full volumes with the rectangular base has the quality of spiritual commentary.

* * * *

FRIENDS of the Museum award of $500 goes to James Simpson's "Miss Goody Two-Shoes," a large painting. There is an all-over pattern of bouncing forms on the flat orange ground. The composition derives its strength from the contrast of flat painting with lively visual texture.

Gin Eggleston won the $100 prize offered by the Long Beach Branch of American Association of University Women, and Frederick Orth won the $100 Grumbacher Award. The $50 Past President Award went to Tarmu-Pillin; Barry J. McCallion received the $50 Dr. and Mrs. Robert Buffum Award. There were nine honorable mentions.

BESIDES THESE, there are a number of excellent works, subtly installed upstairs and down. In the entrance foyer is Kenneth Hasstick's "Swinger," a large, dynamic steel sculpture. In the East Gallery, among other sculptures of bronze, wood, steel and iron, is Paul Kasper's remarkable "Cosmos Orbitus." In the West Gallery, near Elder's prize-winner, is another of burnished steel, this one rather like a growing plant done by Ralph Dunham.

There are a number of paintings. "Red Queen" by Lenore Weiner glows with the most livid of pink, orange and green. In the other downstairs gallery, Sue Lautman Hertel's "Kitchen Feeding Time" reflects a family with a beloved menagerie.

* * * *

AMONG WORKS upstairs is a handsome bronze by Ikegawa and a reclining sculpture of lacquered steel, "Baby Blue," by William Leavitt. A large split circle of multi-layered laminated wood in red and blue by Tom Holder is arresting. Robert Stevenson's plexiglass cube with pierced sheets within is the only sculptural work in the "Op" vein; the adjacent painting by Wilbur Hayne is of the hard-edge "Op" school.

This is a very important show for the community and should serve to enhance the image of our museum considerably in art circles.

Judges' choice

Selecting prizes for museum's Fourth Annual Juried Show was serious business for judges. Top award of $1,000 went to David Elder for this welded steel piece, "Corporeal Landscape Monument No. 4."

FORTY paintings by the Russian artist Alexi Jawlensky, who repeatedly painted the human head, will be on exhibit at the University of California, Irvine, from Saturday through March 31.

Titled "Jawlensky and the Serial Image," the exhibition is co-sponsored by the University of California, Riverside. It may be seen at the UC Irvine art gallery from noon to 5 p.m. daily except Mondays and from noon to 9 p.m. Wednesdays. Admission is free.

In the 1890s, Calude Monet painted several series based on the repetitious use of an image but Jawlensky is the first modern artist who consistently based and organized all his work on a serial image.

Born near Moscow in 1864, son of an officer in the Russian Imperial Army, Jawlensky gave up an army career to study painting in Munich. He traveled extensively. In 1907 entered Matisse's teaching studio in Paris and exhibited with the Fauves. He and his colleagues—Kandinsky, Klee and Feininger made up the "Blue Four."

Toward the end of his life, Jawlensky concentrated more and more on painting the face and closed eyes that took on deep religious meaning. Many of the last sombre, tragic masks he painted are in the UCI exhibit.

Because of the crippling effects of arthritis, Jawlensky ceased to paint in 1938 and died three years later.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

He's the apple of his Girl Scouts' eyes

By MILDRED K. FLANARY
I.-P.-T. Food Editor

A man of many talents, today's Chef of the Week, Dr. Francis J. (Frenchy) Flynn, is an educator, administrator, artist, musician — and most especially — a duo-doctor—executive dean of development at Long Beach State College, and "el doctor" of the Girl Scouts Camp at Idylwild.

Campus duties for Dean Flynn are "everyday," but Girl Scouts are extra special, and since this has been declared National Girl Scout Week, it is fitting that we give credit to a man, whose contributions to the Girl Scout program would be hard to match.

AS A MEMBER of the board of directors for the Greater Long Beach Girl Scout Council (it includes 12,000 girls), he has performed as "engineer-contractor and layer-outer" of their Skyland Ranch at Idylwild.

The trailer, occupied these many years by the caretaker and his wife, has been replaced by a new home; heated washrooms have been added to the dormitories, a foot bridge makes more accessible a certain path. New buildings will be erected as time and finances permit. As a result, he was recently given the Girl Scout Council special award.

Flynn came to Cal-State in the fall of 1950 as lecturer in education, and to assume responsibility for campus development, which has continued to the present time. In 1951 he became the first business manager; served from 1952-58 as dean of students, accepting his present position in 1958 — the responsibility for the college's building program.

BORN IN McCloud, Calif., he attended elementary and high school in Los Angeles, received his A.B. (Agriculture and Fine Arts), his M.S. and Ed. D. degrees from U.S.C.

Prior to coming to Cal-State, he spent, 17 years as teacher and public school administrator in Owens Valley and South Pasadena schools.

Flynn spent three years in the United States Navy, two in the South Pacific as communications officer.

A member and past vice president of Long Beach Rotary Club, Flynn belongs to Long Beach Masonic Lodge No. 327, and serves on the board of directors Long Beach Girl Scout Council, Torch Club International and College Religious Conference.

FLYNN and his wife, Jessica (a Zeta Tau Alpha from U.S.C.) met aboard ship enroute to a USC-Stanford football game. They have a son, Gary, a graduate of LBSC and proprietor of The Livery men's shop, and a daughter, Nancy, a graduate of Wilson High, now working in LaJolla.

DR. FRANCIS J. FLYNN

Flynn's extracurricular pursuits—if he ever has a stolen moment—are gardening, traveling and being a doting grandpa to little Keri, aged 4.

He dreams of the day when he can pursue his art and music. Having taught art, Flynn's talents run the gamut of oil painting, wood carving, jewelry designing and hand lettering.

As for his music, he plays the violin and sings a mean tenor.

True to his profession, he occasionally indulges in a bit of absentmindedness, i.e., driving to school and walking home sans car, or retracing his steps for a mislaid article.

But when it comes to his Apple Pancakes, he's never been known to forget an ingredient.

APPLE PANCAKES

1 cup sifted flour
1½ tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
⅛ cup granulated sugar
1 egg
¾ cup milk
½ cup apples (finely chopped)
1 tblsp. melted shortening

Mix as typical hotcake recipe with addition of the finely chopped apples. Bake on hot griddle, and while hot, spread with ¼ cup melted butter and brown sugar, roll and hold together with toothpicks.

Wonderful with coffee for a Sunday night supper or snack.

Oswald Jacoby

Start the play; south is ready for anything

A letter from Madison, Wis., reads:

"I opened the king of hearts and continued with the queen after South allowed me to hold the first trick. South took that trick in dummy and, after stewing around awhile, led a club. My partner played the deuce and South took the trick with the jack. Then South cashed the king of clubs. My partner dropped the queen and after some more study South led his last club and finessed against my ten. Then he discarded one spade on the ace of clubs and wound up losing only three tricks. I congratulated South on his play but my partner blamed me for not either opening a spade or shifting to that suit at trick two. What's your opinion?"

South's play was excellent. He must have reasoned that East held 10 cards in diamonds and spades for his bids. It also turns out that West's trump leads were rather helpful in that when South finessed against the ten of clubs he was not risking a two-trick set.

* * * *

THAT DOES not mean any criticism at all of the initial trump lead. In fact we know of no expert who would not have opened the king of hearts. Hearts had been bid and raised and West could not be expected to know that dummy would have no ruffing power at all.

Even an initial spade play might not have beaten the hand. South could cash dummy's ace of trumps and then play clubs to get the same spade discard.

Smooth Out Wrinkles

Wrinkles are riverbeds of dry cells caused by the plasma colloids (water carriers of the skin) having dried out through harsh weather. You can soon bring beauty and the glow of a healthy complexion back and protect your skin against wrinkle dryness. Ask your druggist for oil of Olay and before applying make-up smooth it over the face, neck and hands to lubricate and soften the skin and give it a peaches-and-cream bloom.

MUSEUM'S JURIED SHOW

Will enhance image

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

"The Fourth Annual Juried Show" at Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 East Ocean Blvd., opens today and will continue through March 27. Perhaps it was the handsome purchase awards which attracted the high level of work and the large number of sculptures.

The first award of $1,000 (from the Long Beach Museum Association) is for David Elder's "Corporeal Landscape Monument No. 4." This is a large welded steel piece, creatively burnished. It seems to be a figure resting atop a post; the contrast of full volumes with the rectangular base has the quality of spiritual commentary.

FRIENDS of the Museum award of $500 goes to James Simpson's "Miss Goody Two-Shoes," a large painting. There is an all-over pattern of bouncing forms on the flat orange ground. The composition derives its strength from the contrast of flat painting with lively visual texture.

Winners of student contest in Debut Concert spotlight

Vicki Bacon, Valerie Mays and Dennis Morel, winners of Long Beach Student Competition, will perform with Long Beach Symphony Orchestra in a Debut Concert next Sunday at 4 p.m. in Long Beach City College Auditorium. There is no admission charge.

Vicki, 17, cellist competing in the strings division, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Bacon, 2410 Fanwood Ave. She attends Millikan High School, studies cello with Gabor Rejo in Los Angeles and is enrolled in the preparatory division of USC.

* * * *

WINDS division winner, Valorie, 17, plays flute and is a student of Roger Stevens, flutist with Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra. Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Mays, 1401 Hackett Ave., she attends Wilson High School.

Dennis, 21, won in the piano division. A sophomore at Long Beach City College, he studies piano with Joanna Hodges of Long Beach. His parents are Capt. and Mrs. William B. Morel, 3630 Delta Ave.

No award was presented in the voice division this year.

In addition to their concert appearances, the three winners will receive $100 each, awards contributed by Long Beach service clubs.

* * * *

VICKI will play the first movement of "Concerto for Cello and Orchestra" by Boccherini, Valerie will play "Poem for Flute and Orchestra" by Griffes and Dennis will play the first movement of the "Second Piano Concerto" by Shostakovich.

To complete the program, Lauris Jones, conductor, has chosen "Ballet Suite No. 1" by Gluck-Mottl and the second movement of Beethoven's "Symphony No. 7."

The Symphonettes, a high school girls club affiliated with Long Beach Symphony, will sponsor a reception for the young artists immediately following the concert at a location to be announced. It is open to the public.

Conservatory program at Cerritos College

Cerritos College music department Wednesday will begin a new project, the Cerritos District Music Conservatory. The program, designed to supplement school music programs in the district, will continue through the middle of June. It is open to students now enrolled in school music programs who have their applications approved by their music instructor or district coordinator.

Students must provide their own instruments except in the case of large percussion, string or wind instruments. They also must provide their own transportation to the classes at Cerritos and at other locations in the district, and must maintain regular attendance.

* * * *

"ALTHOUGH existing music programs in our schools are doing an adequate to outstanding job at all levels," said Jack Wheaton, head of Cerritos music department, "there are many vital areas in music instruction not available to them."

These areas include private or small group instruction by professionals, voice classes where the individuals can receive detailed and personal instruction on methods of vocal production and repertoire, class piano with the newest techniques of the electronic piano lab, classes in basic musicianship where the fundamentals of sight-singing, sight reading, ear training and theory can be taught in small groups.

Also, highly specialized classes such as improvisation, student conducting, rhythm section drill, piano accompanying, arranging and music copying and finally district training groups such as the junior philharmonic orchestra and the district stage band.

* * * *

"EVERY effort has been made to meet with administrators and music teachers," Wheaton continued, "to help to develop the kind of program that will be the most beneficial to all; the students, parents, existing music programs and the community as a whole."

When you go in Springtime

By Fred Taylor Kraft
Travel Editor

When Spring arrives the world becomes gay and excited like a beautiful girl before a mirror in her first evening dress.

Drabness fades like a mirage and there is fresh, exquisitie color. Hillsides and valleys scintillate with greenery, buds and blossoms. Everywhere the people react with new hope and happiness, and they celebrate.

Springtime becomes Traveltime, for it is only then that you reap these special bonuses that make a trip remembered always.

Almost anywhere you go between now and mid-June you will be greeted with gala fairs, fiestas, festivals and carnivals, parades and processions. Gay natives will dance in the streets in striking costumes. Each event will commemorate some very special occasion.

* * * *

LAST YEAR, the peoples of the world spent an estimated $53 billion on domestic and international travel, according to the American Automobile Association. Spending by Americans — who find Springtime travel more and more to their liking—was $28.8 billion, or 54% of the total.

The chances are that you were one of these Americans. If you were, you will know that in addition to the bonuses just outlined, Springtime travel often permits you to save on the budget. On a plane. Aboard a cruise ship. After you get there.

And there is less crowding, a better chance of getting the reservations you seek.

IF YOU GO in early April, you will witness flamboyant Easter festivities which are celebrated throughout the Christian world, particularly in Europe, Mexico and in Central and South America.

Next come exciting May Day fetes.

But before, in between, and later there will be such outstanding celebrations as Japan's Flower Festival (April 8), Hawaii's Cherry Blossom Festival (April), Fjord Blossom Time in Norway (May 20-June 10), Vienna's International Music and Drama Festival (May 21-June 19) and the Anniversary of Brasilia, Brazil, Festival (May 30).

* * * *

THERE ARE many others, including: Moharrum, the processions of "tazias," Delhi, India (May 2); Santacruzan Festival, throughout the Philippines (May 1-31); Songran/Water Festival, Chiengmai, Thailand (April 13-15); College Weeks, Bermuda (March 20-April 24); Casals Festival, Pio Piedras, Puerto Rico (May).

Carnival Virgin Islands, St. Thomas (April 24-30); Fiesta of Tehauntepec, Mexico (May 31-June 29); International Music Festival, Prague, Czechoslovakia May 12-June 4); Viking Festival, Frederikssund, Denmark (June 18-July 3); Sibelius Music Festival, Helsinki, Finland (May-June); Bravade Folklore Festival, St. Tropez, France (May 16-18); International May Festival, Wiesbaden, Germany (May 1-30); Kilkenny Beer Festival, Kilkenny, Ireland (May-June).

Holland Festival of the Arts, The Hague-Scheveningen, Rotterdam, Utrecht and other Netherlands towns (June 15-July 16); Murcia Spring Festival, Murcia, Spain (April 18-25); National Swedish Museum of Fine Art 100 Year Exhibition, Jonkoping, Sweden (April 28-May 8); International June Festival 1966, Zurich and Lausanne, Switzerland (June); The Derby, Epsom, Surrey, England (May 25); Moscow Stars Arts Festival (May 5-15).

(The continuing accuracy of the above dates cannot be guaranteed because changes can, and often do, take place in scheduling of events.)

There are many more, all when touring is at its best, in Springtime.

Biggest year beckons Pacific cruise ships

The big rumble in Pacific travel, which has been gathering momentum since 1960, will rocket to an all-time high this year with more and more of the leisure class choosing the queenly cruise ships.

Last year, for which the Pacific Area Travel Association points to a 14% increase in Pacific jaunting, Hawaii was—(and will be this year) —the most popular destination with 603,410 visitors. Hong Kong, in second place, had 406,508 tourists and Japan, ranking third, counted 368,000.

Cruise-wise from California, steamship companies carrying the great bulk of the passengers were Matson Navigation Co., P&O-Orient Lines, and American President Lines; all of which serve Los Angeles Harbor.

* * * *

MATSON'S three liners—Lurline, Mariposa and Monterey — will have 18 sailings from Wilmington between March 25 and Aug. 31.

The Lurline sails between the West Coast and Hawaii while the Mariposa and Monterey go on six-week cruises to the South Seas, New Zealand and Australia.

The Lurline's "Special Interest" voyage to Honolulu, with professional dancing and photography experts aboard, sails March 26. Its 15-day Merry Monarch Festival Cruise to Hawaii's four major islands starts April 7.

Subsequent Lurline sailings from Los Angeles are April 22, May 3, 16 and 26; June 18; July 9 and 30, and Aug. 20 and 31.

For the Mariposa and Monterey, the March 25 sailing from Los Angeles Harbor will mark the first of four special 25% reduced fare cruises. Other sailings will be the Mariposa on April 18, Monterey on May 9, and the Mariposa on June 3. Remaining summer sailings will be the Monterey on June 27 and Aug. 12, and the Mariposa on July 18.

* * * *

A "FIRST" in the sixth of a series of summer cruises around the Pacific aboard P&O-Orient Lines' Orsova will be a visit to Noumea, capital of New Caledonia. The 57-day escorted cruise starts from Los Angeles June 29. Other Orsova departures are June 29, Aug. 25 and Nov. 18.

P&O-Orient's Oriana makes these Los Angeles departures: March 25, June 27, Aug. 31, and Dec. 16, for South Seas, Port Said and Europe. Canberra: April 23 and July 17 for Acapulco, Caribbean and Europe; Sept. 26 via South Seas to Europe. Chusan: April 29 for London via Vancouver, Hawaii, South Seas, Bombay, Italy and Spain. Iberia: June 26 and Oct. 26 for London via same route as Chusan. Arcadia: Oct. 8 for Acapulco, Nassau, Florida, Bermuda, France and London. Orcades, Oct. 26 for Hawaii and South Seas, Far East, Europe and London.

SPRING - Summer departure schedule of American President Lines' cruise ships from Los Angeles Harbor: President Roosevelt, April 18, after completing her first Around-the-World luxury cruise; bound for an Orient cruise to Hawaii, Japan, Hong Kong and Philippines

President Wilson, May 7, and the President Cleveland, May 21 for special cruises to the Orient with three added ports of call. In addition to regular stops at Honolulu, Yokohama, Hong Kong and Manila, the President Wilson will call at Keelung, Taiwan, Nagasaki and Kobe, Japan, and transit Japan's Inland Sea. These voyages are of six-weeks' duration.

Free 56-page book "Vacations in Britain"

Your guide to visiting 4 countries for the price of one

THIS new British Travel book has over 60 color photographs showing the pageantry and beauty of the British Isles. It even has a special section on how much your trip will cost. Here's a fact-filled guide to four excitingly different countries—England, Wales, Scotland, and Northern Ireland. And you can visit them all for the price of one.

When you purchase a round trip ticket to London, you can fly to Glasgow and Edinburgh, Scotland and Belfast, Northern Ireland at no extra cost. Wales is easily reached, too. Cardiff is only 135 miles from London by rail or car.

So clip the coupon for your copy of this fine free book. Contents include:

What to see and do in London. Famous and lesser-known sights you shouldn't miss—plus a map.

Theatre and Music. Plays, concerts and festivals in Britain. London alone has 50 theatres—twice as many as New York.

Historic Towns. A guide to ancient towns, Norman cathedrals, and medieval castles.

Country Houses and Gardens. Lovely traditional gardens surrounding the stately homes of Britain.

Seeing Britain by Road. Modern motorways—and scenic byways that wander everywhere.

Plus special sections on vacations in Scotland, Wales, and Northern Ireland—and many other facts and hints on how to make your vacation in Britain a huge success.

Send the coupon now for this valuable free book and see your travel agent.

A SWEEP OF THE SCOTTISH HIGHLAND

There's Paris, Pisa Palma...and Pitlochry

Among the great tourist centers of Europe under the letter "P" you'll find Paris, Pisa and Palma. You'll also find Pitlochry.

Pitlochry is the geographical center of Scotland, and although it's a small town it gives its name — or at least its influence — to a wide sweep of Scottish Highland countryside.

Step into Macnaughton's, a treasure house of fine tweeds and cloths the like of which you probably won't see in London or Paris or New York. And even if you do, they won't be anything like this home-grown price.

As you choose a suit length, or skirt length or two from the rich hales, just think of the hills around. For it's as if giant bundles of tweeds were casually, almost carelessly, draped over naked rock. They say in the best tweeds there are all the colors of the Scottish countryside—purple heather, yellow gorse, browns, reds, blues, and a thousand greens.

* * * *

PITLOCHRY is also a center for good drama, according to British Overseas Airways Corp., travel advisors. Its "theatre in the hills" is still new and exciting and is still only a prefabricated building.

An hour's drive from one of Pitlochry's fine hotels brings in more typically Scottish scenery. In fact, there are those who say that if a visitor has only a couple of days to do Scotland, then the way to do it is drive from Prestwick Airport on the southwest coast through Edinburgh, the capital, up to Pitlochry. Or fly to Edinburgh from London in an hour, and start from there.

But there is one essential duty you owe yourself at Pitlochry. And that's the walk up the footpath to Ben Vrackie ("Ben" being a mountain).

Ben Vrackie is a couple of hundred feet short of 3,000 feet. Surprisingly enough, the footpath to the top is so easy that elderly ladies in stout walking shoes do it.

* * * *

IT'S THERE that you'll see all the myriad colors of the countryside. And it's there that you can speak, without raising your voice, and be heard clearly an impossible distance away.

The little mountain streams, too, are like nectar. A thimbleful of water seems to quench the wildest thirst. (No wonder the whisky they make is unique.)

Pitlochry (say "Pif-lock-rae" and you'll be near it) seems to know how to offer a Highland welcome and at the same time give internationally acceptable comfort and service. If tourism is more a state of mind than a set of attractions, then Pitlochry is doubly rich. And that makes it one of the most rewarding centers a visitor could hope to find, in Scotland or anywhere in Europe.

TRAVEL and RESORTS

Traveling with Stan Delaplane

HONOLULU—By advance indications, this will be another record year for tourists in the islands. Some hotels are booked solid for the summer already. It's no place to fly in and take a chance. If you plan Hawaii, make it definite now.

* * * *

"Where can you buy books with 'easy-to-use phrases' in foreign languages?"

USUALLY a number of these on airport news and magazine stands—both here and abroad. Also on the newsstands in the big tourist hotels.

* * * *

"In what countries of Europe must you neither eat fresh fruits or vegetables nor drink the tap water?"

I DON'T KNOW any European country that is dangerous on these points — though I'm for bottled water in southern Europe out in the country. On the other hand, I don't know any place you can say is absolutely safe with the great flow of tourists from all over the world. In recent years, we've seen typhoid in Switzerland and Scotland, countries with high public health standards.

An armful of updated inoculations gives you a nice feeling of security.

* * * *

"How long can an American citizen stay in a foreign country without losing his citizenship? How about the Social Security check? What, if he marries a foreign woman?"

SO FAR as I know citizenship isn't affected by any length of time outside the country. Nor by foreign marriage. But this is too important for my say so. Write the Department of State. And ask Social Security about the check.

* * * *

"Do you think a woman of 40 would be safe traveling alone in Italy?"

I NEVER heard any complaints. (This question comes in often enough. Italy certainly has a reputation!) There are a few good looking boys who sometimes follow a lone woman on the street and suggest lunch or dinner — you pick up the check. But ignore them and they drift away.

* * * *

"We want to rent a small house or apartment in a warm climate near a beach in Europe for several months. Do you know such a place—something like Puerto Vallarta in Mexico?"

I'D SAY Portugal. And for a town, try Setafs across the river from Lisbon. It's a fishing village and rather picturesque. There's one new, good hotel. Don't know about rents. But it will be a question of finding something you like. Prices are low enough. There just aren't a lot of good rental houses.

* * * *

"I am interested in attending summer college in Mexico. . ."

WRITE the University of Arizona. They have a good summer school in Guadalajara.

* * * *

"Can we buy flashlight batteries while in Europe?"

YOU CAN. But those I bought in Portugal and Spain were pretty bad. Leaked acid all over the case.

* * * *

"Can we get soap and Kleeenex?"

EVERYWHERE. A little higher priced than here in some places. But not enough to warrant packing a lot with you.

* * * *

"Can we fly from place to place in England?"

BETWEEN all larger cities. BEA runs planes around England like commuter buses.

* * * *

"How long will it take us from Paris to London?"

ONE HOUR if you fly. Eight hours if you take the train — the Golden Arrow — and the channel boat. This train trip is rather pleasant. You get on at the Gare du Nord in Paris at half past noon, a civilized hour. Have lunch en route.

What's new? Dance tours!

A variety of dance tours to Europe and the Far East featuring ballroom dancing and geared to the amateur as well as the professional are offered this year by Special Interest Tours. Strong emphasis is put on the "people to people" aspects at local dance parties and dinners.

First is a 25-day Orient tour leaving New York on April 4. Tour participants will visit dance studios and view professional exhibitions in Japan, Hong Kong and Hawaii. Dance lessons will be given and dance parties are planned in Kyoto, Hong Kong and Honolulu. All-inclusive price for the tour is $1,925.

Europe-bound travelers have the choice of two 21-day dance tours to Europe. The first tour departing June 6 visits Holland, Denmark, Germany, France and England, while an Aug. 3 tour highlights Switzerland, Austria, Germany, Denmark and Holland. All-inclusive price for either tour is under $1,100.

A professional dance workshop departs in May and includes the finals of the British Championships at Blackpool and a week to participate in the World Dance Congress. Price for the 15-day tour is $600 from New York.

Osaka Festival bills ensembles

The Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra, the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra and the Asami Maki Ballet Company of Japan are among the ensembles to perform in April at the Ninth Osaka International Festival in Japan.

The Festival opens April 12 with a performance of the NHK (Japan Broadcasting Corporation) Symphony.

Complete schedules of the festival, including works to be performed, are available at Japan Air Lines offices. Within the schedule is a ticket order form.

Continental DC9s to go into service

Continental Airlines will inugurate service with its new Long Beach-made Golden Jet DC-9s April 10, serving Los Angeles, El Paso, Lubbock, Dallas, Albuquerque, Denver, Wichita and Tulsa.

The airline has 12 DC-9s on order, with an option to buy six more. Although the line's initial DC9's will be basically all-passenger aircraft, they will have capacity for three times more cargo than can be carried in the jet-prop Viscounts Continental currently operates over many of its routes.

Land of legend

Recorded history in Korea began only as recently as 57 B. C., but the first ruler of that country that is just west of Japan was born in 2333 B. C., according to legend.

When you go in Springtime

By Fred Taylor Kraft
Travel Editor

When Spring arrives the world becomes gay and excited like a beautiful girl before a mirror in her first evening dress.

Drabness fades like a mirage and there is fresh, exquisitie color. Hillsides and valleys scintillate with greenery, buds and blossoms. Everywhere the people react with new hope and happiness, and they celebrate.

Springtime becomes Travéltime, for it is only then that you reap these special bonuses that make a trip remembered always.

Almost anywhere you go between now and mid-June you will be greeted with gala fairs, fiestas, festivals and carnivals, parades and processions. Gay natives will dance in the streets in striking costumes. Each event will commemorate some very special occasion.

* * * *

LAST YEAR, the peoples of the world spent an estimated $53 billion on domestic and international travel, according to the American Automobile Association. Spending by Americans — who find Springtime travel more and more to their liking—was $28.8 billion, or 54% of the total.

The chances are that you were one of these Americans. If you were, you will know that in addition to the bonuses just outlined, Springtime travel often permits you to save on the budget. On a plane. Aboard a cruise ship. After you get there.

And there is less crowding, a better chance of getting the reservations you seek.

IF YOU GO in early April, you will witness flamboyant Easter festivities which are celebrated throughout the Christian world, particularly in Europe, Mexico and in Central and South America.

Next come exciting May Day fetes.

But before, in between, and later there will be such outstanding celebrations as Japan's Flower Festival (April 8), Hawaii's Cherry Blossom Festival (April), Fjord Blossom Time in Norway (May 20-June 10), Vienna's International Music and Drama Festival (May 21-June 19) and the Anniversary of Brasilia, Brazil, Festival (May 30).

THERE ARE many others, including: Moharrum, the processions of "tazias," Delhi, India (May 2); Santacruzan Festival, throughout the Philippines (May 1-31); Songran/Water Festival, Chiengmai, Thailand (April 13-15); College Weeks, Bermuda (March 20-April 24); Casals Festival, Pio Piedras, Puerto Rico (May).

Carnival Virgin Islands, St. Thomas (April 24-30); Fiesta of Tehauntepec, Mexico (May 31-June 29); International Music Festival, Prague, Czechoslovakia May 12-June 4); Viking Festival, Frederikssund, Denmark (June 18-July 3); Sibelius Music Festival, Helsinki, Finland (May-June); Bravade Folklore Festival, St. Tropez, France (May 16-18); International May Festival, Wiesbaden, Germany (May 1-30); Kilkenny Beer Festival, Kilkenny, Ireland (May-June).

Holland Festival of the Arts, The Hague-Scheveningen, Rotterdam, Utrecht and other Netherlands towns (June 15-July 15); Murcia Spring Festival, Murcia, Spain (April 18-25); National Swedish Museum of Fine Art 100 Year Exhibition, Jonkoping, Sweden (April 28-May 8); International June Festival 1966, Zurich and Lausanne, Switzerland (June); The Derby, Epsom, Surrey, England, (May 25); Moscow Stars-Arts Festival (May 5-15).

(The continuing accuracy of the above dates cannot be guaranteed because changes can, and often do, take place in scheduling of events.)

There are many more, all when touring is at its best, in Springtime.

Biggest year beckons Pacific cruise ships

The big rumble in Pacific travel, which has been gathering momentum since 1960, will rocket to an all-time high this year with more and more of the leisure class choosing the queenly cruise ships.

Last year, for which the Pacific Area Travel Association points to a 14% increase in Pacific jaunting, Hawaii was—(and will be this year) —the most popular destination with 603,410 visitors. Hong Kong, in second place, had 406,508 tourists and Japan, ranking third, counted 368,000.

Cruise-wise from California, steamship companies carrying the great bulk of the passengers were Matson Navigation Co., P&O-Orient Lines, and American President Lines, all of which serve Los Angeles Harbor.

* * * *

MATSON'S three liners—Lurline, Mariposa and Monterey — will have 18 sailings from Wilmington between March 25 and Aug. 31.

The Lurline sails between the West Coast and Hawaii while the Mariposa and Monterey go on six-week cruises to the South Seas, New Zealand and Australia.

The Lurline's "Special Interest" voyage to Honolulu, with professional dancing and photography experts aboard, sails March 26. Its 15-day Merry Monarch Festival Cruise to Hawaii's four major islands starts April 7.

Subsequent Lurline sailings from Los Angeles are April 22, May 3, 16 and 26; June 18; July 9 and 30, and Aug. 20 and 31.

For the Mariposa and Monterey, the March 25 sailing from Los Angeles Harbor will mark the first of four special 25% reduced fare cruises. Other sailings will be the Mariposa on April 18, Monterey on May 9, and the Mariposa on June 3. Remaining summer sailings will be the Monterey on June 27 and Aug. 12, and the Mariposa on July 18.

* * * *

A "FIRST" in the sixth of a series of summer cruises around the Pacific aboard P&O-Orient Lines' Orsova will be a visit to Noumea, capital of New Caledonia. The 57-day escorted cruise starts from Los Angeles June 29. Other Orsova departures are June 29, Aug. 25 and Nov. 18.

P&O-Orient's Oriana makes these Los Angeles departures: March 25, June 27, Aug. 31, and Dec. 16, for South Seas, Port Said and Europe. Canberra: April 23 and July 17 for Acapulco, Caribbean and Europe; Sept. 26 via South Seas to Europe. Chusan: April 29 for London via Vancouver, Hawaii, South Seas, Bombay, Italy and Spain. Iberia: June 26 and Oct. 26 for London via same route as Chusan. Arcadia: Oct. 8 for Acapulco, Nassau, Florida, Bermuda, France and London. Orcades, Oct. 26 for Hawaii and South Seas, Far East, Europe and London.

SPRING - Summer departure schedule of American President Lines' cruise ships from Los Angeles Harbor: President Roosevelt, April 18, after completing her first Around-the-World luxury cruise; bound for an Orient cruise to Hawaii, Japan, Hong Kong and Philippines

President Wilson, May 7, and the President Cleveland, May 21 for special cruises to the Orient with three added ports of call. In addition to regular stops at Honolulu, Yokohama, Hong Kong and Manila, the President Wilson will call at Keelung, Taiwan, Nagasaki and Kobe, Japan, and transit Japan's Inland Sea. These voyages are of six-weeks' duration.

Free 56-page book "Vacations in Britain"

Your guide to visiting 4 countries for the price of one

THIS new British Travel book has over 60 color photographs showing the pageantry and beauty of the British Isles. It even has a special section on how much your trip will cost. Here's a fact-filled guide to four excitingly different countries—England, Wales, Scotland, and Northern Ireland. And you can visit them all for the price of one.

When you purchase a round trip ticket to London, you can fly to Glasgow and Edinburgh, Scotland and Belfast, Northern Ireland at no extra cost. Wales is easily reached, too. Cardiff is only 135 miles from London by rail or car.

So clip the coupon for your copy of this fine free book. Contents include:

What to see and do in London. Famous and lesser-known sights you shouldn't miss—plus a map.

Theatre and Music. Plays, concerts and festivals in Britain. London alone has 50 theatres—twice as many as New York.

Historic Towns. A guide to ancient towns, Norman cathedrals, and medieval castles.

Country Houses and Gardens. Lovely traditional gardens surrounding the stately homes of Britain.

Seeing Britain by Road. Modern motorways—and scenic byways that wander everywhere.

Plus special sections on vacations in Scotland, Wales, and Northern Ireland—and many other facts and hints on how to make your vacation in Britain a huge success.

Send the coupon now for this valuable free book and see your travel agent.

A SWEEP OF THE SCOTTISH HIGHLAND

There's Paris, Pisa, Palma...and Pitlochry

Among the great tourist centers of Europe under the letter "P" you'll find Paris, Pisa and Palma. You'll also find Pitlochry.

Pitlochry is the geographical center of Scotland, and although it's a small town it gives its name — or at least its influence — to a wide sweep of Scottish Highland countryside.

Step into Macnaughton's, a treasure house of fine tweeds and cloths the like of which you probably won't see in London or Paris or New York. And even if you do, they won't be anything like this home-grown price.

As you choose a suit length, or skirt length or two from the rich bales, just think of the hills around. For it's as if giant bundles of tweeds were casually, almost carelessly, draped over naked rock. They say in the best tweeds there are all the colors of the Scottish countryside—purple heather, yellow gorse, browns, reds, blues, and a thousand greens.

* * * *

PITLOCHRY is also a center for good drama, according to British Overseas Airways Corp., travel advisors. Its "theatre in the hills" is still new and exciting and is still only a prefabricated building.

An hour's drive from one of Pitlochry's fine hotels brings in more typically Scottish scenery. In fact, there are those who say that if a visitor has only a couple of days to do Scotland, then the way to do it is drive from Prestwick Airport on the southwest coast through Edinburgh, the capital, up to Pitlochry. Or fly to Edinburgh from London in an hour, and start from there.

But there is one essential duty you owe yourself at Pitlochry. And that's the walk up the footpath to Ben Vrackie ("Ben" being a mountain).

Ben Vrackie is a couple of hundred feet short of 3,000 feet. Surprisingly enough, the footpath to the top is so easy that elderly ladies in stout walking shoes do it.

* * * *

IT'S THERE that you'll see all the myriad colors of the countryside. And it's there that you can speak, without raising your voice, and be heard clearly an impossible distance away.

The little mountain streams, too, are like nectar. A thimbleful of water seems to quench the wildest thirst. (No wonder the whisky they make is unique.)

Pitlochry (say "Pit-lock-rae" and you'll be near it) seems to know how to offer a Highland welcome and at the same time give internationally acceptable comfort and service. If tourism is more a state of mind than a set of attractions, then Pitlochry is doubly rich. And that makes it one of the most rewarding centers a visitor could hope to find, in Scotland or anywhere in Europe.

TRAVEL and RESORTS

Traveling with Stan Delaplane

HONOLULU—By advance indications, this will be another record year for tourists in the islands. Some hotels are booked solid for the summer already. It's no place to fly in and take a chance. If you plan Hawaii, make it definite now.

* * * *

"Where can you buy books with 'easy-to-use phrases' in foreign languages?"

USUALLY a number of these on airport news and magazine stands—both here and abroad. Also on the newsstands in the big tourist hotels.

* * * *

"In what countries of Europe must you neither eat fresh fruits or vegetables nor drink the tap water?"

I DON'T KNOW any European country that is dangerous on these points — though I'm for bottled water in southern Europe out in the country. On the other hand, I don't know any place you can say is absolutely safe with the great flow of tourists from all over the world. In recent years, we've seen typhoid in Switzerland and Scotland, countries with high public health standards.

An armful of updated inoculations gives you a nice feeling of security.

* * * *

"How long can an American citizen stay in a foreign country without losing his citizenship? How about the Social Security check? What if he marries a foreign woman?"

SO FAR as I know citizenship isn't affected by any length of time outside the country. Nor by foreign marriage. But this is too important for my say so. Write the Department of State. And ask Social Security about the check.

* * * *

"Do you think a woman of 40 would be safe traveling alone in Italy?"

I NEVER heard any complaints. (This question comes in often enough. Italy certainly has a reputation!) There are a few good looking boys who sometimes follow a lone woman on the street and suggest lunch or dinner — you pick up the check. But ignore them and they drift away.

* * * *

"We want to rent a small house or apartment in a warm climate near a beach in Europe for several months. Do you know such a place—something like Puerto Vallarta in Mexico?"

I'D SAY Portugal. And for a town, try Setais across the river from Lisbon. It's a fishing village and rather picturesque. There's one new, good hotel. Don't know about rents. But it will be a question of finding something you like. Prices are low enough. There just aren't a lot of good rental houses.

* * * *

"I am interested in attending summer college in Mexico. . . ."

WRITE the University of Arizona. They have a good summer school in Guadalajara.

* * * *

"Can we buy flashlight batteries while in Europe?"

YOU CAN. But those I bought in Portugal and Spain were pretty bad. Leaked acid all over the case.

* * * *

"Can we get soap and Kleenex?"

EVERYWHERE. A little higher priced than here in some places. But not enough to warrant packing a lot with you.

* * * *

"Can we fly from place to place in England?"

BETWEEN all larger cities. BEA runs planes around England like commuter buses.

* * * *

"How long will it take us from Paris to London?"

ONE HOUR if you fly. Eight hours if you take the train — the Golden Arrow — and the channel boat. This train trip is rather pleasant. You get on at the Gare du Nord in Paris at half past noon, a civilized hour. Have lunch en route.

What's new? Dance tours!

A variety of dance tours to Europe and the Far East featuring ballroom dancing and geared to the amateur as well as the professional are offered this year by Special Interest Tours. Strong emphasis is put on the "people to people" aspects at local dance parties and dinners.

First is a 25-day Orient tour leaving New York on April 4. Tour participants will visit dance studios and view professional exhibitions in Japan, Hong Kong and Hawaii. Dance lessons will be given and dance parties are planned in Kyoto, Hong Kong and Honolulu. All-inclusive price for the tour is $1,925.

Europe-bound travelers have the choice of two 21-day dance tours to Europe. The first tour departing June 6 visits Holland, Denmark, Germany, France and England, while an Aug. 3 tour highlights Switzerland, Austria, Germany, Denmark and Holland. All-inclusive price for either tour is under $1,100.

A professional dance workshop departs in May and includes the finals of the British Championships at Blackpool and a week to participate in the World Dance Congress. Price for the 15-day tour is $600 from New York.

Osaka Festival bills ensembles

The Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra, the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra and the Asami Maki Ballet Company of Japan are among the ensembles to perform in April at the Ninth Osaka International Festival in Japan.

The Festival opens April 12 with a performance of the NHK (Japan Broadcasting Corporation) Symphony.

Complete schedules of the festival, including works to be performed, are available at Japan Air Lines offices. Within the schedule is a ticket order form.

Continental DC9s to go into service

Continental Airlines will inugurate service with its new Long Beach-made Golden Jet DC-9s April 10, serving Los Angeles, El Paso, Lubbock, Dallas, Albuquerque, Denver, Wichita and Tulsa.

The airline has 12 DC-9s on order, with an option to buy six more. Although the line's initial DC9's will be basically all-passenger aircraft, they will have capacity for three times more cargo than can be carried in the jet-prop Viscounts Continental currently operates over many of its routes.

Land of legend

Recorded history in Korea began only as recently as 57 B. C., but the first ruler of that country that is just west of Japan was born in 2333 B. C., according to legend.

'Easy Life' Rules in Acapulco

TRAVEL and RESORTS

By Bud Lewis

Acapulco is more popular than ever this winter. And with the accelerated influx of world travelers, gone is its youthful simplicity, replaced by an alluring sophistication. It's la dolce vita, the easy life, and the glittering international set which swarms in from all over the world loves every bit of it. Today its harbor, once the haven for pirate galleons, is filled with sleek yachts from Cannes and Newport and Rio. On any given day, the registers of the resort's luxurious hotels carry the names of prominent and celebrated personages, statesmen, royalty, industrial leaders, sports figures, and stars of the entertainment industry.

EASY DOES IT at the Tropical Palacio, posh spot in Acapulco.

Lynda Bird came here, and the White House set has always been influential in popularizing resorts. The play-by-play description of her whirl about Acapulco with actor George Hamilton was carried on the front pages of the nation's press.

* * * *

OF COURSE, probably more directly responsible for the upsurge of tourists this year is the new bilateral air agreement which Mexico signed with the United States, whereby five American airlines are now permitted flights into the new Acapulco jet strip that had previously been the exclusive domain of the government-owned Aeronaves de Mexico. Then there is the new biweekly cruise service from Los Angeles pouring in hordes more of fun-loving, fun-seeking vacationers.

With this, tourism in Acapulco, according to the Mexican National Tourist Council, is expected to increase by 200% in the next couple of years. There are already some 300 hotels here with more than 8,000 rooms. But, 6,000 more rooms are urgently needed.

The Hotel Pierre Marques reports running on an average of 95% full for the year, and during the big winter season turning away almost as many tourists as they are able to take in. Tourists, however, are not easily discouraged. They keep coming back and bringing more friends.

* * * *

SEASONAL travel is now largely a myth, except for prices. Acapulco's modern era opened up in 1925 with a road from Mexico City. This rugged two-lane mountain highway gave way in 1955 to a wide new highway cutting the time for the 260-mile course to five hours, thanks to former president, Lic. Miguel Aleman, who now heads the Mexican National Tourist Council.

The great bay is lined with scores of hotels along the waterfront and clinging to the cliffs overlooking the sparkling water. Here are some of the world's finest hostelries, offering all that can be desired by the most discriminating visitor, towering 12 and 15 stories, with balconies providing spectacular views of the bay and ocean.

THE ACAPULCO HILTON is a high-rise featuring a pool which circles a colorful bar and thatched-roof tropical restaurant.

The most romantic nest in town is the colony of casitas called Las Brisas, running up a hillside on the southern side of Acapulco Bay. The casitas, like every thing else at Las Brisas are all done in pink. Each has a marble bath, a refrigerator, and a terrace sweeping up to the harbor and the twinkling town beyond. One hundred of them have their own swimming pools, which are sprinkled daily with hibiscus blossoms.

* * * *

IN THE by-laws of the jet set it is written that all celebrities landing on the shores of Acapulco must check in with Teddy Stauffer, one-time band leader, one-time husband of Hedy Lamarr, and one-time Swiss. Stauffer currently oversees the activities of the Villa Verda with its luxurious white cottages perched high in the hills above the great blue curved bay. The hotel has 10 pools, nine of them private, but the big one has a plus factor: a bar adjoining one end has its barstools waist deep in water, where you can half soak in the water while soaking up a Coco Loco, a Margarita, a pie eye, or a dry martini.

Another pool in Acapulco ranks high in the unique category. This is midway on the 12-mile palm-dotted beach that faces Acapulco Bay. Here Hilton has built a handsome high-rise featuring a pool which, like a moat, circles a colorful bar and thatch roofed tropical restaurant in the center of the hotel grounds. Guests can take a sip or a bite, swim the circumference of the pool and come back where they started for seconds.

* * * *

AS EXPECTED, the curving beaches of Acapulco Bay stretch for miles. The hibiscus and oleander and copa de oro bloom as scheduled on the jungled, boulder-punctuated hillsides and the cliff-hanging homes of the movie stars and the stars themselves are just where they're supposed to be. A three-decked ferry will take you on a cruise around the bay where you can sail by the pastel-colored dwellings of John Wayne, Dolores Del Rio, Merle Oberon, and the baby-blue house where John and Jackie Kennedy spent their honeymoon.

No one for any reason ever dresses up. You can hop a bus downtown in a bikini without so much as getting ogled . . . much . . ., or go to a banker's meeting in shorts. About the worst that can happen to you is that you may have to put on slacks to go into the hotel dining room, but only in deluxe hotels. You can always spot the first nighters—still full of ambition and sweltering in suits and dresses.

* * * *

NIGHT LIFE in Acapulco, like other Mexican cities, begins at 11 p.m., and by midnight the city is jumping. All the hotels have their night clubs, but those who seek the most adventuresome aspect of Acapulco at night find sport off the main streets and on the fringe of the downtown section. Here the floor shows are more on the risque side, and the bands give way with a more native beat.

Yes, the chief industry in Acapulco is living, and it's worth the try. Last year more than a million visitors were entertained by Mexico and a large proportion of them included Acapulco on their itinerary. With the tourists setting their sights on the land below the border, and with the increased air service to be supplied by U.S. carriers, Acapulco will set a new record of visitors in 1966.

"I want to see all of Mexico... close-up ...and for less money

"That's why I'm taking a Greyhound Escorted Tour of MEXICO!"

Really see the beauty and charm of Mexico on a fun-packed Greyhound Escorted Tour. Ride through the heart of the country, within touching distance of the sights...within hearing distance of the sounds. See things you can't see from a railroad track or a high-flying plane. What's more, by Greyhound you ride in your own private air-conditioned luxury coach...a bilingual escort explains all points of interest...you stay at first-class hotels every night. And remember, Greyhound gives you more Mexico for your money than planes, trains or driving yourself.

SEE IT ALL: 15 different Mexican states...scores of towns and villages off the beaten track...places tourists seldom go! Plus Mexico City, Taxco, Chihuahua, Guadalajara, Mazatlan, and much more! All transportation included.

TRAVEL and RESORTS

Springtime spreads color at Palm Springs

Spring in the desert is unlike Spring anywhere else.

And Spring in Palm Springs is even better.

Wildflowers, rampant from the rains of fall and winter, spread an unprecedented carpet over the sandy basin. Visitors to the Palm Springs Aerial Tramway, cable car which climbs 8,000 feet up Mt. San Jacinto in 15 minutes, have an extraordinary view as the once-beige desert floor turns lavender with desert verbena.

Spring in the desert also means the arrival of the California Angels to their Palm Springs training grounds, and the beginning of exhibition games March 12 and 13 to thrill visitors and villagers alike.

* * * *

IT ALSO means polo season, with Prince Philip's visit to watch the March 13 matches at Eldorado. And other tourists arrive to watch the natives dress western for giant Desert Circus week March 28 through April 3.

Visitors and residents throughout the golden sands roll from their chaise lounges and warm, tanning sun into the cool, clear refreshing pools of the Canyon Club Inn, the Tropics, the El Mirador, the Oasis . . .

And "Spartans" on the health program at the plush Palm Springs Spa take their exercise with pampering in the sun and in swirling mineral water baths, glow with sun and with well-being.

GOLFERS roam the area's 20-odd manicured courses, with visitors partial to the Palm Springs Municipal Golf Course.

Conventioners flock to springtime Palm Springs, their wives to the delightful shops of Palm Canyon Drive.

There are also mountain trails, scenic canyons complete with waterfalls, tennis courts and horses. And an ice-skating rink in the Market Basket Shopping Center.

Cool spring nights follow warm spring days and fine restaurants and nightclubs dot the desert oasis as the palm trees dot the golf courses.

And it's green and warm and the air is clear.

It's fun—springtime Palm Springs!

Camps open in Europe to youth of U.S.

More and more American parents are learning it does not require unlimited means to give children the cultural opportunities of travel and study abroad. The expense of sending a child to an exclusive summer camp in Europe compares economically with summer-long vacations in the U.S.

Prominent families in other countries have long realized this, for enrollment at elite European summer camps for years has been a virtual junior United Nations of well-bred young people.

Boys and girls between the ages of 10-18 years can embark upon and enjoy a truly international vacation this coming summer by going to camp in France, Spain or Switzerland.

For the past 16 years, American youngsters have been joining European children for a full eight weeks of camping, sightseeing, studying a foreign language, and cruising, all through the auspices of Cultural Exchange Club Ltd., 280 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y. 10016.

The staff at each camp is selected from the faculty of local private schools. A doctor and nurse are continually available, the club assures.

4 trips combine travel, camping

Four new-type trips for boys and girls aged 10 to 17, combining travel with camping, are being offered by Wally Hyde (11111 Lexington Dr., Apt. 8), Los Alamitos.

Departures from Los Angeles, according to Hyde, are June 21 and 28, and July 5 and 12. Itineraries will include interesting spots in the western states and Canada. Trip costs include transportation, meals, lodging, leadership, houseboat and canoe trip, laundry, insurance, and fishing equipment.

Cologne offers 5 o'clock tea

The Cologne Tourist Office will offer visitors an opportunity to get acquainted. From mid-May through mid-September visitors may "drop in" for a cup of tea and a chat on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays between 5 and 6 p.m. at the Tourist Office reception room. Cologne citizens with foreign language skills will answer questions and offer timely suggestions for an enjoyable local visit.

Golf becomes darling of Las Vegas sports

In their quest to find the most popular outdoor sport to offer visitors to Las Vegas, resort hotel owners reached back 500 years and selected the ancient game of golf.

They picked a winner.

Not that golf was waiting around to be discovered — it's been something of a national craze since the mid-1950s—but it took the bank-sized investment capital of interested resort owners, their confidence in the game's future, and year around promotion to make it the darling of the area's participation sports.

Today it's not only the leading sport, but it has brought Las Vegas the distinction of being the only U. S. city to annually host two of the game's top PGA endorsed tournaments: the Tournament of Champions classic at the Desert Inn, and the Sahara Hotel's $111,111.11 Invitational.

* * * *

AS AN ADDED sports fillip, the 25th playing of the Baseball Celebrity National Open was held for the first time this year at the Dunes Hotel and Country Club.

In all, the city's sports calendar lists 19 tournaments sprinkled throughout the year. Dates for the events are set a year in advance by planners who know they can count on abundant sunshine to provide near perfect weather, no matter what the season.

And between the action-packed high tension professional tournaments, visitors by the thousands tee up on the area's nine constantly manicured courses.

Full 18-hole layouts are operated by the Dunes, Tropicana, Desert Inn and Stardust hotels. The city maintains a municipal course and the county has recently opened Winterwood at the foot of nearby Sunrise Mountains.

* * * *

ONE PRIVATE club, Paradise Valley, and two "short 9s" at the Aladdin open April 1 and the Hacienda complete the roster of courses.

In total size as well as design, they are impressive. Laid end-to-end, the 20 miles of golf links could be woven back and forth across the length of the city five times and it would still take a long drive to reach the last green!

Before the year is out, Nevada Equities say work will be completed on their Nevada International Country Club. This championship course will feature nine acres of water hazards — a unique undertaking for desert golf architects.

Still in the planning stage, but a definite project in the near future, is a short course at the Sands Hotel.

Prima opens in Las Vegas

Louis Prima, one of the big attractions in show business, has opened at the Sands in Las Vegas for a seven-week engagement to begin a million dollar contract, largest ever signed by any show business personality for this glittering resort town.

Greyhound maps tours

Greyhound's annual series of 11-day "Sunny Southwest Escorted Tours" resume March 21, with departures also scheduled April 18, May 16, June 20, and again in September and October.

Among spots of interest on the tours are Phoenix, Tucson, Tombstone, El Paso, Carlsbad Caverns, Santa Fe, Albuquerque, the Painted Desert and Petrified Forest, Oak Creek Canyon and Montezuma's ancient ruins in Arizona, the Grand Canyon and Las Vegas.

Cost for the all-inclusive sightseeing trip is $281.85 per person for twin/double accommodations; $327.45 for single accommodation from Los Angeles.

Greyhound also has scheduled a "Spring Flower Escorted Tour", departing Los Angeles on March 20. The itinerary includes Texas, New Orleans and the Southern states to Florida, then moves north through Alabama, the Carolinas and Virginia to Washington, D.C., visiting famous gardens en route. The cost: $848.80 per person for twin/double accommodations, $990.95 for single accommodations.

Air France films May 1

Beginning May 1, Air France will offer airborne entertainment aboard all its transatlantic services, and on all other long-haul services. Programming will include first-run color motion pictures, and 10 sound channels devoted to a wide selection of music offerings. The announcement by Henri G. Marescot, Air France's general manager in North America, said the airline would be the first to show both American and French films, and also be first to have two language soundtracks.

The French airline will be the first to introduce two-language soundtracks, English and French, for all films.

The airborne entertainment, designated "Festival in the Sky," will make use of overhead projection on giant 54 by 27-inch screens, located in both first and economy class cabins.

Airport frolic

Mexico City's International Airport will soon have a nightclub, according to the Mexican National Tourist Council, to be operated by the Balsa Hotel chain.

Another hotelier, Western International, has refurbished and redecorated Mexico City's "El Senorial" night club, the latest addition to its restaurant operation.

Catholic tours start April 4

Six major national Catholic Tours to the Holy Land, Rome and Lourdes are being organized by the Paulist Fathers to depart New York each month via TWA Super Jets April through September, it was announced by Crest Tours, a division of Fugazy Travel, 488 Madison Ave., New York City. Reservations and inquiries are being handled by travel agents nationally. The first group departing April 4 will be in the Holy Land for Holy Week and Easter.

The other departures are on May 16, June 6, July 18, Aug. 1 and Sept. 12. Each tour is of three weeks duration and includes visits to Athens, Rome, Lourdes, Paris and London.

Cable car for Athens

A cable car, rising 1,000 feet to the top of Lycabettus Hill, now offers a superb view of Athens with the Acropolis and the port of Piraeus.

The most romantic nest in town is the colony of casitas called Las Brisas, running up a hillside on the southern side of Acapulco Bay. The casitas, like everything else at Las Brisas are all done in pink. Each has a marble bath, a refrigerator, and a terrace sweeping up to the harbor and the twinkling town beyond. One hundred of them have their own swimming pools, which are sprinkled daily with hibiscus blossoms.

* * * *

IN THE by-laws of the jet set it is written that all celebrities landing on the shores of Acapulco must check in with Teddy Stauffer, one-time band leader, one-time husband of Hedy Lamarr, and one-time Swiss. Stauffer currently oversees the activities of the Villa Verda with its luxurious white cottages perched high in the hills above the great blue curved bay. The hotel has 10 pools, nine of them private, but the big one has a plus factor: a bar adjoining one end has its barstools waist deep in water, where you can half soak in the water while soaking up a Coco Loco, a Margarita, a pie eye, or a dry martini.

Another pool in Acapulco ranks high in the unique category. This is midway on the 12-mile palm-dotted beach that faces Acapulco Bay. Here Hilton has built a handsome high-rise featuring a pool which, like a moat, circles a colorful bar and thatch roofed tropical restaurant in the center of the hotel grounds. Guests can take a sip or a bite, swim the circumference of the pool and come back where they started for seconds.

* * * *

AS EXPECTED, the curving beaches of Acapulco Bay stretch for miles. The hibiscus and oleander and copa de oro bloom as scheduled on the jungled, boulder-punctuated hillsides and the cliff-hanging homes of the movie stars and the stars themselves are just where they're supposed to be. A three-decked ferry will take you on a cruise around the bay where you can sail by the pastel-colored dwellings of John Wayne, Dolores Del Rio, Merle Oberon, and the baby-blue house where John and Jackie Kennedy spent their honeymoon.

No one for any reason ever dresses up. You can hop a bus downtown in a bikini without so much as getting ogled . . . much . . ., or go to a banker's meeting in shorts. About the worst that can happen to you is that you may have to put on slacks to go into the hotel dining room, but only in deluxe hotels. You can always spot the first nighters—still full of ambition and sweltering in suits and dresses.

* * * *

NIGHT LIFE in Acapulco, like other Mexican cities, begins at 11 p.m., and by midnight the city is jumping. All the hotels have their night clubs, but those who seek the most adventuresome aspect of Acapulco at night find sport off the main streets and on the fringe of the downtown section. Here the floor shows are more on the risque side, and the bands give way with a more native beat.

Yes, the chief industry in Acapulco is living, and it's worth the try. Last year more than a million visitors were entertained by Mexico and a large proportion of them included Acapulco on their itinerary. With the tourists setting their sights on the land below the border, and with the increased air service to be supplied by U.S. carriers, Acapulco will set a new record of visitors in 1966.

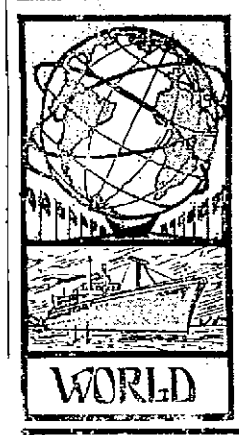
I want to see all of Mexico... close-up ...and for less money

"That's why I'm taking a Greyhound Escorted Tour of MEXICO!"

Really see the beauty and charm of Mexico on a fun-packed Greyhound Escorted Tour. Ride through the heart of the country, within touching distance of the sights...within hearing distance of the sounds. See things you can't see from a railroad track or a high-flying plane. What's more, by Greyhound you ride in your own private air-conditioned luxury coach...a bilingual escort explains all points of interest... you stay at first-class hotels every night. And remember, Greyhound gives you more Mexico for your money than planes, trains or driving yourself.



SEE IT ALL: 15 different Mexican states...scores of towns and villages off the beaten track...places tourists seldom go! Plus Mexico City, Taxco, Chihuahua, Guadalajara, Mazatlan, and much more! All transportation included.

Golf becomes darling of Las Vegas sports

In their quest to find the most popular outdoor sport to offer visitors to Las Vegas, resort hotel owners reached back 500 years and selected the ancient game of golf.

They picked a winner.

Not that golf was waiting around to be discovered — it's been something of a national craze since the mid-1950s—but it took the bank-sized investment capital of interested resort owners, their confidence in the game's future, and year around promotion to make it the darling of the area's participation sports.

Today it's not only the leading sport, but it has brought Las Vegas the distinction of being the only U. S. city to annually host two of the game's top PGA endorsed tournaments: the Tournament of Champions classic at the Desert Inn, and the Sahara Hotel's $111,111.11 Invitational.

* * * *

AS AN ADDED sports fillip, the 25th playing of the Baseball Celebrity National Open was held for the first time this year at the Dunes Hotel and Country Club.

In all, the city's sports calendar lists 19 tournaments sprinkled throughout the year. Dates for the events are set a year in advance by planners who know they can count on abundant sunshine to provide near perfect weather, no matter what the season.

And between the action-packed high tension professional tournaments, visitors by the thousands tee up on the area's nine constantly manicured courses.

Full 18-hole layouts are operated by the Dunes, Tropicana, Desert Inn and Stardust hotels. The city maintains a municipal course and the county has recently opened Winterwood at the foot of nearby Sunrise Mountains.

* * * *

ONE PRIVATE club, Paradise Valley, and two "short 9s" at the Aladdin open April 1 and the Hacienda complete the roster of courses.

In total size as well as design, they are impressive. Laid end-to-end, the 20 miles of golf links could be woven back and forth across the length of the city five times and it would still take a long drive to reach the last green!

Before the year is out, Nevada Equities say work will be completed on their Nevada International Country Club. This championship course will feature nine acres of water hazards — a unique undertaking for desert golf architects.

Still in the planning stage, but a definite project in the near future, is a short course at the Sands Hotel.

Air France films May 1

Beginning May 1, Air France will offer airborne entertainment aboard all its transatlantic services, and on all other long-haul services. Programming will include first-run color motion pictures, and 10 sound channels devoted to a wide selection of music offerings. The announcement by Henri G. Marescot, Air France's general manager in North America, said the airline would be the first to show both American and French films, and also be first to have two language soundtracks.

The French airline will be the first to introduce two-language soundtracks, English and French, for all films.

The airborne entertainment, designated "Festival in the Sky," will make use of overhead projection on giant 54 by 27-inch screens, located in both first and economy class cabins.

Airport frolic

Mexico City's International Airport will soon have a nightclub, according to the Mexican National Tourist Council, to be operated by the Balsa Hotel chain.

Another hotelier, Western International, has refurbished and redecorated Mexico City's "El Senorial" nightclub, the latest addition to its restaurant operation.

Prima opens in Las Vegas

Louis Prima, one of the big attractions in show business, has opened at the Sands in Las Vegas for a seven-week engagement to begin a million dollar contract, largest ever signed by any show business personality for this glittering resort town.

Greyhound maps tours

Greyhound's annual series of 11-day "Sunny Southwest Escorted Tours" resume March 21, with departures also scheduled April 18, May 16, June 20, and again in September and October.

Among spots of interest on the tours are Phoenix, Tucson, Tombstone, El Paso, Carlsbad Caverns, Santa Fe, Albuquerque, the Painted Desert and Petrified Forest, Oak Creek Canyon and Montezuma's ancient ruins in Arizona, the Grand Canyon and Las Vegas.

Cost for the all-inclusive sightseeing trip is $281.85 per person for twin/double accommodations; $327.45 for single accommodation from Los Angeles.

Greyhound also has scheduled a "Spring Flower Escorted Tour" departing Los Angeles on March 20. The itinerary includes Texas, New Orleans and the Southern states to Florida, then moves north through Alabama, the Carolinas and Virginia to Washington, D.C., visiting famous gardens en route. The cost: $848.80 per person for twin/double accommodations, $990.95 for single accommodations.

Cable car for Athens

A cable car, rising 1,000 feet to the top of Lycabettus Hill, now offers a superb view of Athens with the Acropolis and the port of Piraeus.

TRAVEL and RESORTS

Camps open in Europe to youth of U.S.

More and more American parents are learning it does not require unlimited means to give children the cultural opportunities of travel and study abroad. The expense of sending a child to an exclusive summer camp in Europe compares economically with summer-long vacations in the U.S.

Prominent families in other countries have long realized this, for enrollment at elite European summer camps for years has been a virtual junior United Nations of well-bred young people.

Boys and girls between the ages of 10-18 years can embark upon and enjoy a truly international vacation this coming summer by going to camp in France, Spain or Switzerland.

For the past 16 years, American youngsters have been joining European children for a full eight weeks of camping, sightseeing, studying a foreign language, and cruising, all through the auspices of Cultural Exchange Club Ltd., 280 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y. 10016.

The staff at each camp is selected from the faculty of local private schools. A doctor and nurse are continually available, the club assures.

Catholic tours start April 4

Six major national Catholic Tours to the Holy Land, Rome and Lourdes are being organized by the Paulist Fathers to depart New York each month via TWA Super Jets April through September, it was announced by Crest Tours, a division of Fugazy Travel, 488 Madison Ave., New York City. Reservations and inquiries are being handled by travel agents nationally. The first group departing April 4 will be in the Holy Land for Holy Week and Easter.

The other departures are on May 16, June 6, July 18, Aug. 1 and Sept. 12. Each tour is of three weeks duration and includes visits to Athens, Rome, Lourdes, Paris and London.

Springtime spreads color at Palm Springs

Spring in the desert is unlike Spring anywhere else.

And Spring in Palm Springs is even better.

Wildflowers, rampant from the rains of fall and winter, spread an unprecedented carpet over the sandy basin. Visitors to the Palm Springs Aerial Tramway, cable car which climbs 8,000 feet up Mt. San Jacinto in 15 minutes, have an extraordinary view as the once-beige desert floor turns lavender with desert verbena.

Spring in the desert also means the arrival of the California Angels to their Palm Springs training grounds, and the beginning of exhibition games March 12 and 13 to thrill visitors and villagers alike.

* * * *

IT ALSO means polo season, with Prince Philip's visit to watch the March 13 matches at Eldorado. And other tourists arrive to watch the natives dress western for giant Desert Circus week March 28 through April 3.

Visitors and residents throughout the golden sands roll from their chaise lounges and warm, tanning sun into the cool, clear refreshing pools of the Canyon Club Inn, the Tropics, the El Mirador, the Oasis . . .

And "Spartans" on the health program at the plush Palm Springs Spa take their exercise with pampering in the sun and in swirling mineral water baths, glow with sun and with well-being.

GOLFERS roam the area's 20-odd manicured courses, with visitors partial to the Palm Springs Municipal Golf Course.

Conventioners flock to springtime Palm Springs, their wives to the delightful shops of Palm Canyon Drive.

There are also mountain trails, scenic canyons complete with waterfalls, tennis courts and horses. And an ice-skating rink in the Market Basket Shopping Center.

Cool spring nights follow warm spring days and fine restaurants and nightclubs dot the desert oasis as the palm trees dot the golf courses.

And it's green and warm and the air is clear.

It's fun—springtime Palm Springs!

4 trips combine travel, camping

Four new-type trips for boys and girls aged 10 to 17, combining travel with camping, are being offered by Wally Hyde (11111 Lexington Dr., Apt. 8), Los Alamitos.

Departures from Los Angeles, according to Hyde, are June 21 and 28, and July 5 and 12. Itineraries will include interesting spots in the western states and Canada. Trip costs include transportation, meals, lodging, leadership, houseboat and canoe trip, laundry, insurance, and fishing equipment.

Cologne offers 5 o'clock tea

The Cologne Tourist Office will offer visitors an opportunity to get acquainted. From mid-May through mid-September visitors may "drop in" for a cup of tea and a chat on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays between 5 and 6 p.m. at the Tourist Office reception room. Cologne citizens with foreign language skills will answer questions and offer timely suggestions for an enjoyable local visit.

STARTING PLACE FOR A VACATION IN EUROPE

Scandinavia is all charm

Scandinavia offers the adventurous tourist to Europe a kaleidoscopic view of the charm and enchantment of the Old World blended quite magnificently with the urban sophistication of its three capitals.

To the nature lover, Scandinavia has scenery unmatched—the eternal tranquility of Norwegian fjords, the rich pastures and fairy-tale towns of Denmark, the splendor of color in rugged Lapland, and the folk-lore castles of Sweden.

Copenhagen, the SAS gateway to Europe, is the logical starting place for a Scandinavian vacation. It is easily accessible by the trans-polar service from Los Angeles and direct transatlantic flights from New York.

* * * *

VISITORS to Copenhagen are drawn by its gaiety and charm and nowhere are these qualities more evident than in Tivoli Gardens, the Danish counterpart of Disneyland. It has its share of merry-go-rounds and amusements, but the special atmosphere of Tivoli is created by the abundance of flower arrangements which are ingeniously floodlit at night and the small boats which sail on an idyllic lake with a miniature fishing village. Tivoli offers outdoor dancing, daily concerts, pantomime and ballet shows. There are 20 restaurants and beer gardens.

A visit to Copenhagen isn't complete without seeing the famous "Little Mermaid" from Hans Christian Andersen's fairy tale on the Langelinie Promenade. Other enjoyable things to do include window shopping down the "Stroget" (shopping street), visiting Gefion Fountain, viewing "The Changing of the Guard" at Amalienborg Palace, seeing the National Museum, and visiting one of the two breweries, Carlsberg and Tuborg. For a permanent display of Danish arts and crafts try an afternoon perusal at Den Permanente.

One of the most popular excursions to the Danish countryside is a drive to North Sealand and see 2,000 deer graze at Dyrehaven. On further to the tip of the large island of Elsinore is Hamlet's Castle, Kronborg, and behind it is the Sound and a view of the Swedish coast.

* * * *

STOCKHOLM, a gracious city steeped with elegance and sophistication, is the largest and most serene of the Scandinavian capitals and is only one hour's flight from Copenhagen. The city is built on 20 islands in Lake Malaren and Saltsjon, which are part of the Baltic Sea, is linked together by bridges spreading out to the mainland.

The Swedish capital, founded in 1252, offers a great deal to the traveler interested in history and the arts. The Stadshuset, or City Hall, is one of the outstanding examples of modern architecture in Europe. The Riddarholm Church is the Swedish "Pantheon" in which Kings Gustav, Adolf, and Karl XII are buried.

The Royal Palace, built between 1690 and 1754, is famed for its exquisite interior with baroque and rococo decorations and fine collections of tapestry and china. Skansen Museum features ancient farm houses, Lapp huts, 15th century churches and meeting halls that were once scattered all over Sweden.

Other areas of historical and cultural interest include the National Museum which has a rich collection of Sweden's paintings, sculpture, and applied art. For the archeological enthusiasts there is the Wasa Museum, which houses the warship "Wasa" which was brought up from the bottom of Stockholm Harbor in 1961, after lying there for 333 years!

If one has the time, a good way to take in the Swedish countryside is to drive the 300 miles to Oslo, which takes about seven hours passing through scenic lakes and wooded forests. He can fly to Oslo in 55 minutes.

* * * *

OSLO, the capital of Norway, occupies a magnificent physical site, with high hills on three sides, and the great Oslo Fjord—60 miles long—in front. Its most astounding feature is the crisp, clear mountain air spiked with a salty-sea bit of vigor.

More than any of the Scandinavian capitals, Oslo recalls the days of the Vikings and the Norse legends of Thor and Odin. At the Viking Ship Museum, on the Bygdoy Peninsula which is only 15 minutes from Oslo, there are three Viking ships on display—the Oseberg, the Gokstad and the Tune, each taking their names after places where they were found in modern times.

Also at Bygdoy is the Fram Museum which shows the Fram, the famous vessel that took Nansen to the North Pole in 1893 and Roald Amundsen to the South Pole in 1910. A great modern Norwegian feat is on display at the Kon-Tiki Museum.

A visit to Frogner Park should not be missed. This park, which encompasses 75 acres, features 150 controversial sculptures by Gustav Vigeland which depict the life-cycle of man, from birth to death.

* * * *

ONE OF the "musts" when visiting Norway is to see the magnificent fjords which were created during the Ice Age. These long arms of the seat cut inland spectacularly past towering mountains.

Three-day fjord tours between Oslo and Bergen start May 14 and continue to Sept. 9. The warmth of the Gulf Stream keeps the fjords open all year.

Just as Bergen is a gateway to the fjord country, so is Oslo an aerial gateway to northern Norway and the Land of the Midnight Sun. Round-trip Midnight Sun flights to Bodo, just above the Arctic Circle, begin in early June and continue through July. Flying time is two hours and 40 minutes, and Bodo is reached around midnight where one sees the awesome sight of the sun staying above the horizon. There's time for sightseeing and supper on Ronvik Mountain before the return flight.

Americans love Scandinavia because of the genuine hospitality found there. The people are friendly and courteous. Perfect strangers on the street are willing to walk several blocks out of their way to show a visitor where he wants to go. The Yankee who wants to travel where he's sincerely wanted will find Scandinavia to his liking.

DIAMONDS, PIRATE LOOT, PEARLS . . .

Strike it rich in Venezuela

By Chris Sewell

CARACAS — Leisure can be lucrative in Venezuela. Anyone who is bored by the beach or satiated with sightseeing can, for example, try such profitable pastimes as digging for diamonds in the jungles of Canaima, searching for pirate's loot, or diving for pearls off Margarita Island.

While tourism is the road to riches for many a country, many a tourist in Venezuela has 'struck-it-rich.'

Or, if not really rich, let us say in all honesty, many have come away with a tangible treasure or two. Venezuela has been a haven for foreign fortune-hunters since the turn of the 15th century, when the Spanish came along and forced the Indians to pan for gold. One thing, as usual, led to another and before you could say "Simon Bolivar," all sorts of characters in search of buried booty were rummaging around between the peaks of the Andes and the shores of the Caribbean.

* * * *

ALL THIS prospecting did, of course, pay off with the discovery of a sea of "black gold" in the Maracaibo basin, and minerals galore in the Orinoco. Tourists nowadays who have no time to drill for oil or sift the slopes of the Andes for nuggets can still hope for profit on a weekend excursion from Caracas, the ultra-modern capital with luxurious hotels. A popular package for prospectors-in-a-hurry takes in the Gran Sabana (Great Plains) of Canaima, a plateau rising 6,000 in the heart of the jungle.

A pristine paradise of primitive Indians and exotic foliage, Canaima is now linked with the outside world by air. The flight from Caracas offers passengers a rare close-up view of Angel Falls, cascading out of the clouds like a supernal stream. The falls, 20 times higher than Niagara, plummeting down over 3,000 feet to the jungle floor, were sighted for the first time by the late pilot Jimmy Angel in 1935.

Angel, incidentally, explored the Venezuelan interior at a time when the Indians were attempting to discourage white intruders and warned explorers of a mysterious monster akin to the Formidable Snowman of the Himalayas.

* * * *

TODAY, Canaima is a comfortable oasis in the wilderness with an airfield and a comfortable lodge serving food and drink. Tourists can bed down in rustic cabins complete with screens and copper plumbing. Anyone who cares to rought it a bit can rent a "bohareque," a simple hut with thatched roof, and sleep in a "chinchorro," a hammock with mosquito netting. Travelers who insist on the simple life had best hurry, since Canaima is now being considered as a site for a luxury hotel with all the amenities of civilzation.

A long weekend in Canaima runs $90, according to SATO, the South American Travel Organization. This price covers roundtrip air fare from Caracas, food and lodging just a short hop from an emerald lagoon. Pink sands fringe the shore, and the water is ideal at any season for swimming, boating and water skiing.

With no organized tours or planned play periods, the traveler is strictly on his own. The Indians who have become friendly (that is, they no longer regard planes as evil spirits) show anglers how to bait a hook with fruit, and demonstrate the blow gun used to bag jaguar in the ravines.

* * * *

THE FLORA is as fabulous as the fauna with miniature orchids at every turn, and palms thrusting their fronds high in the sky. Five foaming ribbons of water feed into the lagoon from the Carao River to form Hacha Falls. The river has produced many a nugget, thus panning for gold is more than an optimist's dream of opulence.

Since Canaima is part of a diamond concession area, there are tales aplenty of men who have picked up a fortune in crystallized carbon. The terrain, however, is also littered with great glittering pieces of white quartz, sparkling like the Hope Diamond but worthless. Prospectors are forewarned to prevent heart-failing frustration.

While this exotic Eden is a place to find diamonds, Canaima is no place to wear them. Dress runs to bush jackets with pith helmets, slacks and stout shoes, preferably spiked or ridged to avoid slipping on the wet rocks leading into caves around the lagoon.

Anyone who doesn't make his fortune in Canaima can always try the Island of Margarita, another easy sidetrip from Caracas, with fine accommodations. On this lush tropical island, the waters yield pearls of rare price and treasure from the sunken ships of the Conquistadores. One way or another, there's hidden value in a venture into Venezuela.

British offer rail coupons

British Rail has announced that ThriftRail Coupons which offer up to 1,000 miles of travel in Britain for $30 can now be used to buy tickets for an entire family and for friends. They will also carry a completely unlimited validity. Heretofore the coupons had been restricted to the purchaser and his immediate family and were valid for 6 months only.

The coupons are good on all trains in England, Scotland and Wales (except Continental boat trains), on cross-channel services to Ireland, on ships serving the Clyde Coast and on Loch Lomond. They can also be used to pay for seats, sleepers and berths. They are not restricted to one class of travel; the same book can be used to buy both first and second class tickets.

This convenient travel plan "Britain in a book" is sold exclusively in North America at considerable savings over regular fares and cannot be purchased in Britain.

A brochure describing ThriftRail Coupons in detail is available through local travel agents, or can be secured by writing to British Rail-International, 630 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10020.

Longest ferry service starts May 20 in B.C.

The world's longest ferry trip is being offered to West Coast motorists this spring.

On May 20, British Columbia Ferry Authority will begin a sea-going ferry service between Kelsey Bay on Vancouver Island, and Prince Rupert, British Columbia's northernmost seaport and western terminus of scenic Hwy. 16.

It will connect with the Alaska Ferry System which opeates between Prince Rupert and Skagway, providing a thousand-mile sea trip.

Awesome mountain scenery and the most dramatic seascapes in the world await the motorist bound for northern British Columbia, the Yukon or Alaska.

* * * *

FIRST LEG of the northbound trip commences at Tsawwassen Bay, just north of the international boundary. This hour-long ferry trip wends through the beautiful Gulf Islands, landing at Victoria, the old-English city of Vancouver Island.

From Victoria northward along the island for 170 miles, Hwy. 1 traverses one of Canada's most beautiful vacationlands.

Scenery along the route varies from near-tropical lush growth in the south, where pink-legged arbutus trees pace the highway, to rugged mountainous terrain around Kelsey Bay, where the main ferry trip commences.

First vessel ordered by British Columbia Ferries is the M.V. Queen of Pince Rupert. This 325-foot ocean-going ferry has a beam of 58 feet, and cruises at 18 knots; 3,500 tons, carrying 443 passengers and 120 vehicles.

* * * *

OVERNIGHT accommodation is available in 113 double-berth, six four-berth, and 16 deluxe staterooms. Meals will be served in a luxurious 200-seat dining room, and a large, modern cafeteria.

Twin controllable-pitch screws, twin rudders, active fin stabilizers and bow propeller will give skippers of the new vessels perfect control, whether on the high seas, or at docking.

The latest design in stowing and unloading facilities combine with ocean-going-type luxury to make the new Pacific Coast ferry trip a membrable one.

TRAVEL and RESORTS

'Pick City' trip offered

"Choose your city and pick your price" is the theme of a new 14 to 21-day Jet Away Excursion Plan being offered by Air France. The terms of the plan allow travelers to visit up to four major cities from a total of 20 Air France European destinations, and select their own class of travel: thrift, moderate or quality. Rates are $3, $6, and $9 per day, respectively, plus air transportation.

Round-trip jet excursion fares from New York to Paris and beyond begin at $371, Economy Class, and are applicable during the periods April 4-June 9, July 11, Aug. 4, and Aug. 20-March 30, 1967. No transatlantic travel is allowed on any Friday, Saturday or Sunday in each given period.

The cities included in the Plan are Amsterdam, Athens, Barcelona, Berlin, Bordeaux, Brussels, Cologne, Frankfurt, Geneva, Lisbon, London, Madrid, Milan, Munich, Nice, Paris, Rome, Venice, Vienna, and Zurich. More than four cities can be visited, for a slight supplementary charge above the prices quoted.

In Paris, you get HELP!

The French have come up with a unique organization to make tourists feel welcome—and at home—for a "moderate" fee.

The organization, called HELP!—will meet you on on arrival in Paris and, if you wish, provide English-speaking escorts on a day-to-day basis, advise on shops and other places you wish to visit, arrange appointments, provide contacts with companies or individuals, even arrange for a secretary if you need one, all at a minimum of inconvenience.

In other words, HELP! will see that you meet the right people and get to the right places in the City of Light.

HELP! was organized by Mme. Irene Hannaux, 70 bis rue Notre Dame des Champs, Paris 6, France (Ph. Danton 61-40).

STARTING PLACE FOR A VACATION IN EUROPE

Scandinavia is all charm

Scandinavia offers the adventurous tourist to Europe a kaleidoscopic view of the charm and enchantment of the Old World blended quite magnificently with the urban sophistication of its three capitals.

To the nature lover, Scandinavia has scenery unmatched—the eternal tranquility of Norwegian fjords, the rich pastures and fairy-tale towns of Denmark, the splendor of color in rugged Lapland, and the folk-lore castles of Sweden.

Copenhagen, the SAS gateway to Europe, is the logical starting place for a Scandinavian vacation. It is easily accessible by the trans-polar service from Los Angeles and direct transatlantic flights from New York.

* * * *

VISITORS to Copenhagen are drawn by its gaiety and charm and nowhere are these qualities more evident than in Tivoli Gardens, the Danish counterpart of Disneyland. It has its share of merry-go-rounds and amusements, but the special atmosphere of Tivoli is created by the abundance of flower arrangements which are ingeniously floodlit at night and the small boats which sail on an idyllic lake with a miniature fishing village. Tivoli offers outdoor dancing, daily concerts, pantomime and ballet shows. There are 20 restaurants and beer gardens.

A visit to Copenhagen isn't complete without seeing the famous "Little Mermaid" from Hans Christian Andersen's fairy tale on the Langelinie Promenade. Other enjoyable things to do include window shopping down the "Stroget" (shopping street), visiting Gefion Fountain, viewing "The Changing of the Guard" at Amalienborg Palace, seeing the National Museum, and visiting one of the two breweries, Carlsberg and Tuborg. For a permanent display of Danish arts and crafts try an afternoon perusal at Den Permanente.

One of the most popular excursions to the Danish countryside is a drive to North Sealand and see 2,000 deer graze at Dyrehaven. On further to the tip of the large island of Elsinore is Hamlet's Castle, Kronborg, and behind it is the Sound and a view of the Swedish coast.

* * * *

STOCKHOLM, a gracious city steeped with elegance and sophistication, is the largest and most serene of the Scandinavian capitals and is only one hour's flight from Copenhagen. The city is built on 20 islands in Lake Malaren and Saltsjon, which are part of the Baltic Sea, is linked together by bridges spreading out to the mainland.

The Swedish capital, founded in 1252, offers a great deal to the traveler interested in history and the arts. The Stadshuset, or City Hall, is one of the outstanding examples of modern architecture in Europe. The Riddarholm Church is the Swedish "Pantheon" in which Kings Gustav, Adolf, and Karl XII are buried.

The Royal Palace, built between 1690 and 1754, is famed for its exquisite interior with baroque and rococo decorations and fine collections of tapestry and china. Skansen Museum features ancient farm houses, Lapp huts, 15th century churches and meeting halls that were once scattered all over Sweden.

Other areas of historical and cultural interest include the National Museum which has a rich collection of Sweden's paintings, sculpture, and applied art. For the archeological enthusiasts there is the Wasa Museum, which houses the warship "Wasa" which was brought up from the bottom of Stockholm Harbor in 1961, after lying there for 333 years!

If one has the time, a good way to take in the Swedish countryside is to drive the 300 miles to Oslo, which takes about seven hours passing through scenic lakes and wooded forests. He can fly to Oslo in 55 minutes.

* * * *

OSLO, the capital of Norway, occupies a magnificent physical site, with high hills on three sides, and the great Oslo Fjord—60 miles long—in front. Its most astounding feature is the crisp, clear mountain air spiked with a salty-sea bit of vigor.

More than any of the Scandinavian capitals, Oslo recalls the days of the Vikings and the Norse legends of Thor and Odin. At the Viking Ship Museum, on the Bygdoy Peninsula which is only 15 minutes from Oslo, there are three Viking ships on display—the Oseberg, the Gokstad and the Tune, each taking their names after places where they were found in modern times.

Also at Bygdoy is the Fram Museum which shows the Fram, the famous vessel that took Nansen to the North Pole in 1893 and Roald Amundsen to the South Pole in 1910. A great modern Norwegian feat is on display at the Kon-Tiki Museum.

A visit to Frogner Park should not be missed. This park, which encompasses 75 acres, features 150 controversial sculptures by Gustav Vigeland which depict the life-cycle of man, from birth to death.

* * * *

ONE OF the "musts" when visiting Norway is to see the magnificent fjords which were created during the Ice Age. These long arms of the seat cut inland spectacularly past towering mountains.

Three-day fjord tours between Oslo and Bergen start May 14 and continue to Sept. 9. The warmth of the Gulf Stream keeps the fjords open all year.

Just as Bergen is a gateway to the fjord country, so is Oslo an aerial gateway to northern Norway and the Land of the Midnight Sun. Round-trip Midnight Sun flights to Bodo, just above the Arctic Circle, begin in early June and continue through July. Flying time is two hours and 40 minutes, and Bodo is reached around midnight where one sees the awesome sight of the sun staying above the horizon. There's time for sightseeing and supper on Ronvik Mountain before the return flight.

Americans love Scandinavia because of the genuine hospitality found there. The people are friendly and courteous. Perfect strangers on the street are willing to walk several blocks out of their way to show a visitor where he wants to go. The Yankee who wants to travel where he's sincerely wanted will find Scandinavia to his liking.

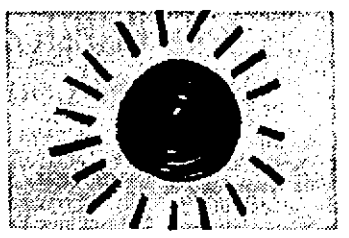
At this very moment, you're only 4½ hours (and $220 roundtrip) away from:

Sunbathing.

Horseracing.

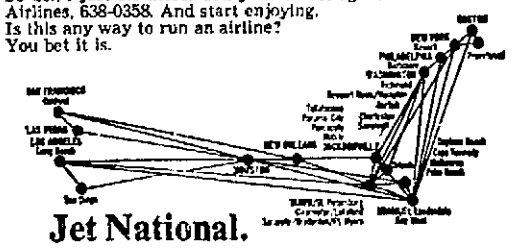


Nightclubbing.

Jai alai.

Greyhound racing.

Balmy tropical weather.



There's something for everyone in Miami. And National Airlines will jet you there nonstop in only 4½ hours for only $220 roundtrip (jet coach excursion fare*).

And the moment you land in Miami you're right in the middle of everything. Miami has some of the finest hotels, some of the best restaurants, some of the most beautiful golf courses, some of the jumpingest nightspots and some of the jumpingest fish in the world. They're all dedicated to giving you the most enjoyable winter vacation of your life. And they're all in full swing right now.

So don't just sit there. Call your travel agent or National Airlines, 638-0358. And start enjoying.

Is this any way to run an airline?

You bet it is.

DIAMONDS, PIRATE LOOT, PEARLS . . .

Strike it rich in Venezuela

By Chris Sewell

CARACAS — Leisure can be lucrative in Venezuela. Anyone who is bored by the beach or satiated with sightseeing can, for example, try such profitable pastimes as digging for diamonds in the jungles of Canaima, searching for pirate's loot, or diving for pearls off Margarita Island.

While tourism is the road to riches for many a country, many a tourist in Venezuela has 'struck-it-rich.''

Or, if not really rich, let us say in all honesty, many have come away with a tangible treasure or two. Venezuela has been a haven for foreign fortune-hunters since the turn of the 15th century, when the Spanish came along and forced the Indians to pan for gold. One thing, as usual, led to another and before you could say "Simon Bolivar," all sorts of characters in search of buried booty were rummaging around between the peaks of the Andes and the shores of the Caribbean.

* * * *

ALL THIS prospecting did, of course, pay off with the discovery of a sea of "black gold" in the Maracaibo basin, and minerals galore in the Orinoco. Tourists nowadays who have no time to drill for oil or sift the slopes of the Andes for nuggets can still hope for profit on a weekend excursion from Caracas, the ultra-modern capital with luxurious hotels. A popular package for prospectors-in-a-hurry takes in the Gran Sabana (Great Plains) of Canaima, a plateau rising 6,000 in the heart of the jungle.

A pristine paradise of primitive Indians and exotic foliage, Canaima is now linked with the outside world by air. The flight from Caracas offers passengers a rare close-up view of Angel Falls, cascading out of the clouds like a supernal stream. The falls, 20 times higher than Niagara, plummeting down over 3,000 feet to the jungle floor, were sighted for the first time by the late pilot Jimmy Angel in 1935.

Angel, incidentally, explored the Venezuelan interior at a time when the Indians were attempting to discourage white intruders and warned explorers of a mysterious monster akin to the Formidable Snowman of the Himalayas.

* * * *

TODAY, Canaima is a comfortable oasis in the wilderness with an airfield and a comfortable lodge serving food and drink. Tourists can bed down in rustic cabins complete with screens and copper plumbing. Anyone who cares to rought it a bit can rent a "bohareque," a simple hut with thatched roof, and sleep in a "chinchorro," a hammock with mosquito netting. Travelers who insist on the simple life had best hurry, since Canaima is now being considered as a site for a luxury hotel with all the amenities of civilzation.

A long weekend in Canaima runs $90, according to SATO, the South American Travel Organization. This price covers roundtrip air fare from Caracas, food and lodging just a short hop from an emerald lagoon. Pink sands fringe the shore, and the water is ideal at any season for swimming, boating and water skiing.

With no organized tours or planned play periods, the traveler is strictly on his own. The Indians who have become friendly (that is, they no longer regard planes as evil spirits) show anglers how to bait a hook with fruit, and demonstrate the blow gun used to bag jaguar in the ravines.

* * * *

THE FLORA is as fabulous as the fauna with miniature orchids at every turn, and palms thrusting their fronds high in the sky. Five foaming ribbons of water feed into the lagoon from the Carao River to form Hacha Falls. The river has produced many a nugget, thus panning for gold is more than an optimist's dream of opulence.

Since Canaima is part of a diamond concession area, there are tales aplenty of men who have picked up a fortune in crystallized carbon. The terrain, however, is also littered with great glittering pieces of white quartz, sparkling like the Hope Diamond but worthless. Prospectors are forewarned to prevent heart-failing frustration.

While this exotic Eden is a place to find diamonds, Canaima is no place to wear them. Dress runs to bush jackets with pith helmets, slacks and stout shoes, preferably spiked or ridged to avoid slipping on the wet rocks leading into caves around the lagoon.

Anyone who doesn't make his fortune in Canaima can always try the Island of Margarita, another easy sidetrip from Caracas, with fine accommodations. On this lush tropical island, the waters yield pearls of rare price and treasure from the sunken ships of the Conquistadores. One way or another, there's hidden value in a venture into Venezuela.

British offer rail coupons

British Rail has announced that ThriftRail Coupons which offer up to 1,000 miles of travel in Britain for $30 can now be used to buy tickets for an entire family and for friends. They will also carry a completely unlimited validity. Heretofore the coupons had been restricted to the purchaser and his immediate family and were valid for 6 months only.

The coupons are good on all trains in England, Scotland and Wales (except Continental boat trains), on cross-channel services to Ireland, on ships serving the Clyde Coast and on Loch Lomond. They can also be used to pay for seats, sleepers and berths. They are not restricted to one class of travel; the same book can be used to buy both first and second class tickets.

This convenient travel plan "Britain in a book" is sold exclusively in North America at considerable savings over regular fares and cannot be purchased in Britain.

A brochure describing ThriftRail Coupons in detail is available through local travel agents, or can be secured by writing to British Rail-International, 630 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10020.

Longest ferry service starts May 20 in B.C.

The world's longest ferry trip is being offered to West Coast motorists this spring.

On May 20, British Columbia Ferry Authority will begin a sea-going ferry service between Kelsey Bay on Vancouver Island, and Prince Rupert, British Columbia's northernmost seaport and western terminus of scenic Hwy. 16.

It will connect with the Alaska Ferry System which opeates between Prince Rupert and Skagway, providing a thousand-mile sea-trip.

Awesome mountain scenery and the most dramatic seascapes in the world await the motorist bound for northern British Columbia, the Yukon or Alaska.

* * * *

FIRST LEG of the northbound trip commences at Tsawwassen Bay, just north of the international boundary. This hour-long ferry trip wends through the beautiful Gulf Islands, landing at Victoria, the old-English city of Vancouver Island.

From Victoria northward along the island for 170 miles, Hwy. 1, traverses one of Canada's most beautiful vacationlands.

Scenery along the route varies from near-tropical lush growth in the south, where pink-legged arbutus trees pace the highway, to rugged mountainous terrain around Kelsey Bay, where the main ferry trip commences.

First vessel ordered by British Columbia Ferries is the M.V. Queen of Pince Rupert. This 325-foot ocean-going ferry has a beam of 58 feet, and cruises at 18 knots. 3,500 tons, carrying 443 passengers and 120 vehicles.

* * * *

OVERNIGHT accommodation is available in 113 double-berth, six four-berth, and 16 deluxe staterooms. Meals will be served in a luxurious 200-seat dining room, and a large, modern cafeteria.

Twin controllable-pitch screws, twin rudders, active fin stabilizers and bow propeller will give skippers of the new vessels perfect control, whether on the high seas, or at docking.

The latest design in stowing and unloading facilities combine with ocean-going-type luxury to make the new Pacific Coast ferry trip a memorable one.

TRAVEL and RESORTS

'Pick City' trip offered

"Choose your city and pick your price" is the theme of a new 14 to 21-day Jet Away Excursion Plan being offered by Air France. The terms of the plan allow travelers to visit up to four major cities from a total of 20 Air France European destinations, and select their own class of travel: thrift, moderate or quality. Rates are $3, $8, and $5 per day respectivaly, plus air transportation.

Round-trip jet excursion fares from New York to Paris and beyond begin at $371, Economy class, and are applicable during the periods April 4-June 9, July 11, Aug. 4, and Aug. 20-March 30, 1967. No transatlantic travel is allowed on any Friday, Saturday or Sunday in each given period.

The cities included in the Plan are Amsterdam, Athens, Barcelona, Berlin, Bordeaux, Brussels, Cologne, Frankfurt, Geneva, Lisbon, London, Madrid, Milan, Munich, Nice, Paris, Rome, Venice, Vienna, and Zurich. More than four cities can be visited for a slight supplementary charge above the prices quoted.

In Paris, you get HELP!

The French have come up with a unique organization to make tourists feel welcome—and at home—for a "moderate" fee.

The organization, called HELP!—will meet you on on arrival in Paris and, if you wish, provide English-speaking escorts on a day-to-day basis, advise on shops and other places you wish to visit, arrange appointments, provide contacts with companies or individuals, even arrange for a secretary if you need one, all at a minimum of inconvenience.

In other words, HELP! will see that you meet the right people and get to the right places in the City of Light.

HELP! was organized by Mme. Irene Hannaux, 70 bis rue Notre Dame des Champs, Paris 6, France (Ph. Danton 61-40).

Sayings Paying in 'Get Smart'

(See Page 6)

Bert's Eye View

By BERT RESNIK
TV and Radio Editor

AS IT APPEARS to others, the grass in the pasture on the other side of the fence sometimes looks greener to Robert Goulet.

The handsome, sophisticated singing star currently has the dramatic lead in ABC-TV's (channel 7's) "Blue Light" Wednesday evening COLOR series.

It is a demanding double-agent role, a challenge to his acting ability and a tremendous source of satisfaction to him because he was selected for the non-singing portrayal.

Nevertheless, there are still moments when the grass looks greener on the other side of the fence.

In those few moments, Goulet harkens back to a boyhood ambition.

"I would like to be a forest ranger," he said.

"I love nature, solitude, sunsets and animals.

"To wake up to a cool, crisp morning, to sit down with your wife to a breakfast of ham and eggs, to stroll down and look at the beauty of a lake—that's marvelous."

NATURE, SOLITUDE, sunsets and animals will have to wait for the brief vacations Goulet and family manage to intersperse in their busy lives.

Right now the singer is acting for his supper and that, too, is marvelous from his point of view.

While singing is his first love, Goulet sees no reason why he can't also act.

"I want to do both," he said. "A performer should extend himself to his furthest limits."

There is, in his opinion, a definite relationship between singing and acting.

"Anyone who sells a popular song can act—Frank Sinatra, Tony Bennett, Paul Anka are typical.

"If you're singing a lyric and telling a story, you have to act it out. You're not just singing words."

He concedes there are some singers who just "sing music" and aren't concerned about the telling of the story.

"They're like pitchers that can't hit. They're only worried about getting the ball over the plate."

Goulet prefers to be a hitting pitcher.

HE'S ALSO HAD a considerable number of turns up to hit at the dramatic bat, a fact not generally known to a public that basically thinks of him as a singer.

Much of that previous dramatic experience was in Canada where Goulet, a native of Lawrence, Mass., moved with his family after his father died when the boy was 11 years old.

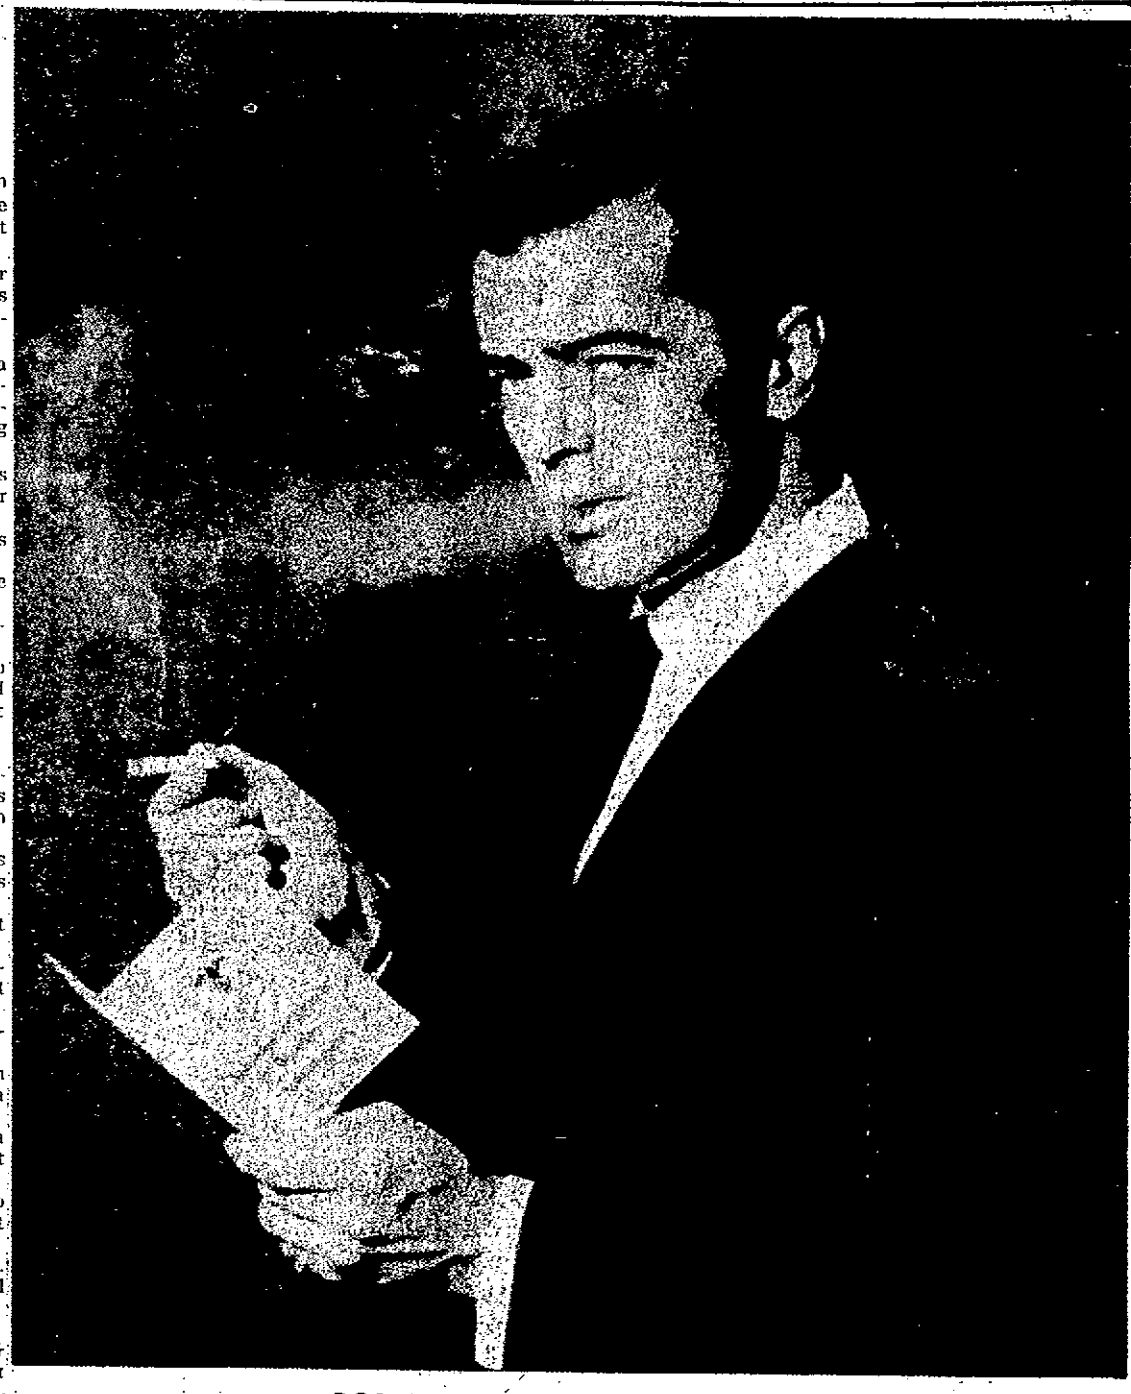
On Canadian television and radio, Goulet's range of activities varied from serving as a disc jockey to having a featured dramatic role in a Canadian television serial.

In the United States, he was featured in two motion pictures and had the role of Lancelot in the Broadway musical "Camelot." An outstanding performance as a GI in television's "Suspense Theater" was one of the factors that led to his procural as the lead in the "Blue Light" series.

Goulet is married to Broadway-TV actress Carol Lawrence. While he doesn't minimize the fact that "two acting egos are involved" when an actor and actress wed, he believes there are compensations that haven't been generally noted.

"Because Carol is an actress, she understands a lot of my problems, anxieties and the hours involved in my work schedule. I reciprocate as far as she's concerned.

"Furthermore, I respect Carol's judgment as well as her talent.

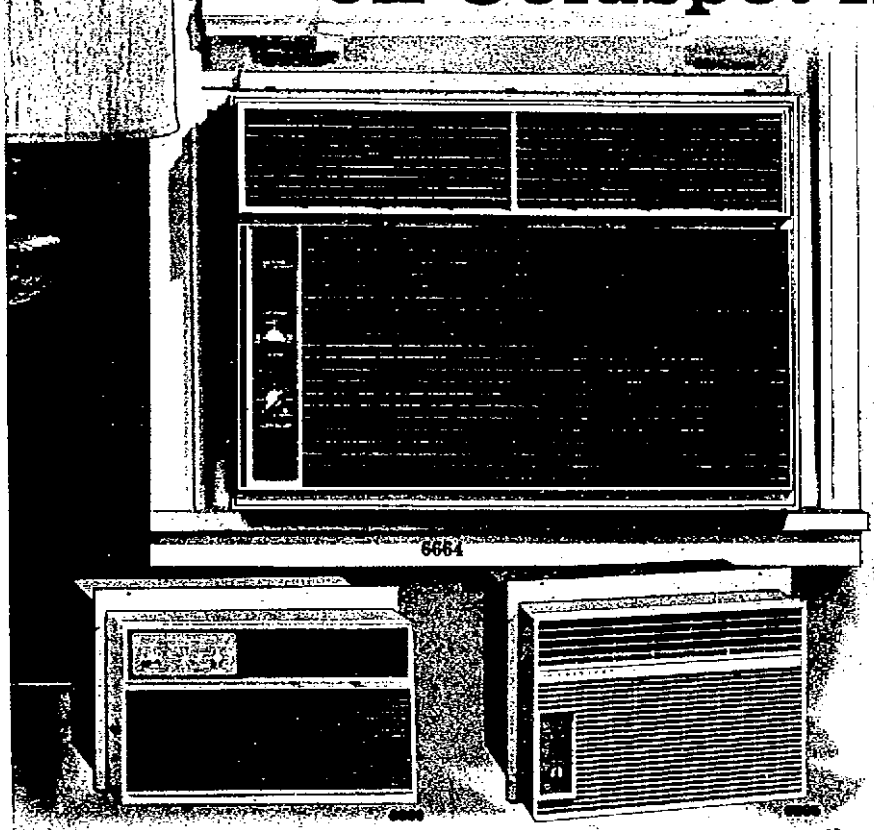


"Oftentimes, in connection with some dramatic bit, she'll say to me, 'Why not try it this way instead of that way?' Chances are she's right."

If Goulet is a big enough man to frequently accept his wife's judgment, Carol is enough of a woman to know that her husband comes first.

She plans her schedule around his.

When Goulet is touring the country for night-club appearances, Carol accompanies him. If they're going to be gone from home for more than two weeks, their 16-month-old son, Christopher, is taken along.



Future travel plans will be expanded. The Goulets are expecting another child next month.

NATURE, SOLITUDE, sunsets and animals will have to wait for the brief vacations Goulet and family manage to intersperse in their busy lives.

Right now the singer is acting for his supper and that, too, is marvelous from his point of view.

While singing is his first love, Goulet sees no reason why he can't also act.

"I want to do both," he said. "A performer should extend himself to his furthest limits."

There is, in his opinion, a definite relationship between singing and acting.

"Anyone who sells a popular song can act—Frank Sinatra, Tony Bennett, Paul Anka are typical.

"If you're singing a lyric and telling a story, you have to act it out. You're not just singing words."

He concedes there are some singers who just "sing music" and aren't concerned about the telling of the story.

"They're like pitchers that can't hit. They're only worried about getting the ball over the plate."

Goulet prefers to be a hitting pitcher.

HE'S ALSO HAD a considerable number of turns up to hit at the dramatic bat, a fact not generally known to a public that basically thinks of him as a singer.

Much of that previous dramatic experience was in Canada where Goulet, a native of Lawrence, Mass., moved with his family after his father died when the boy was 11 years old.

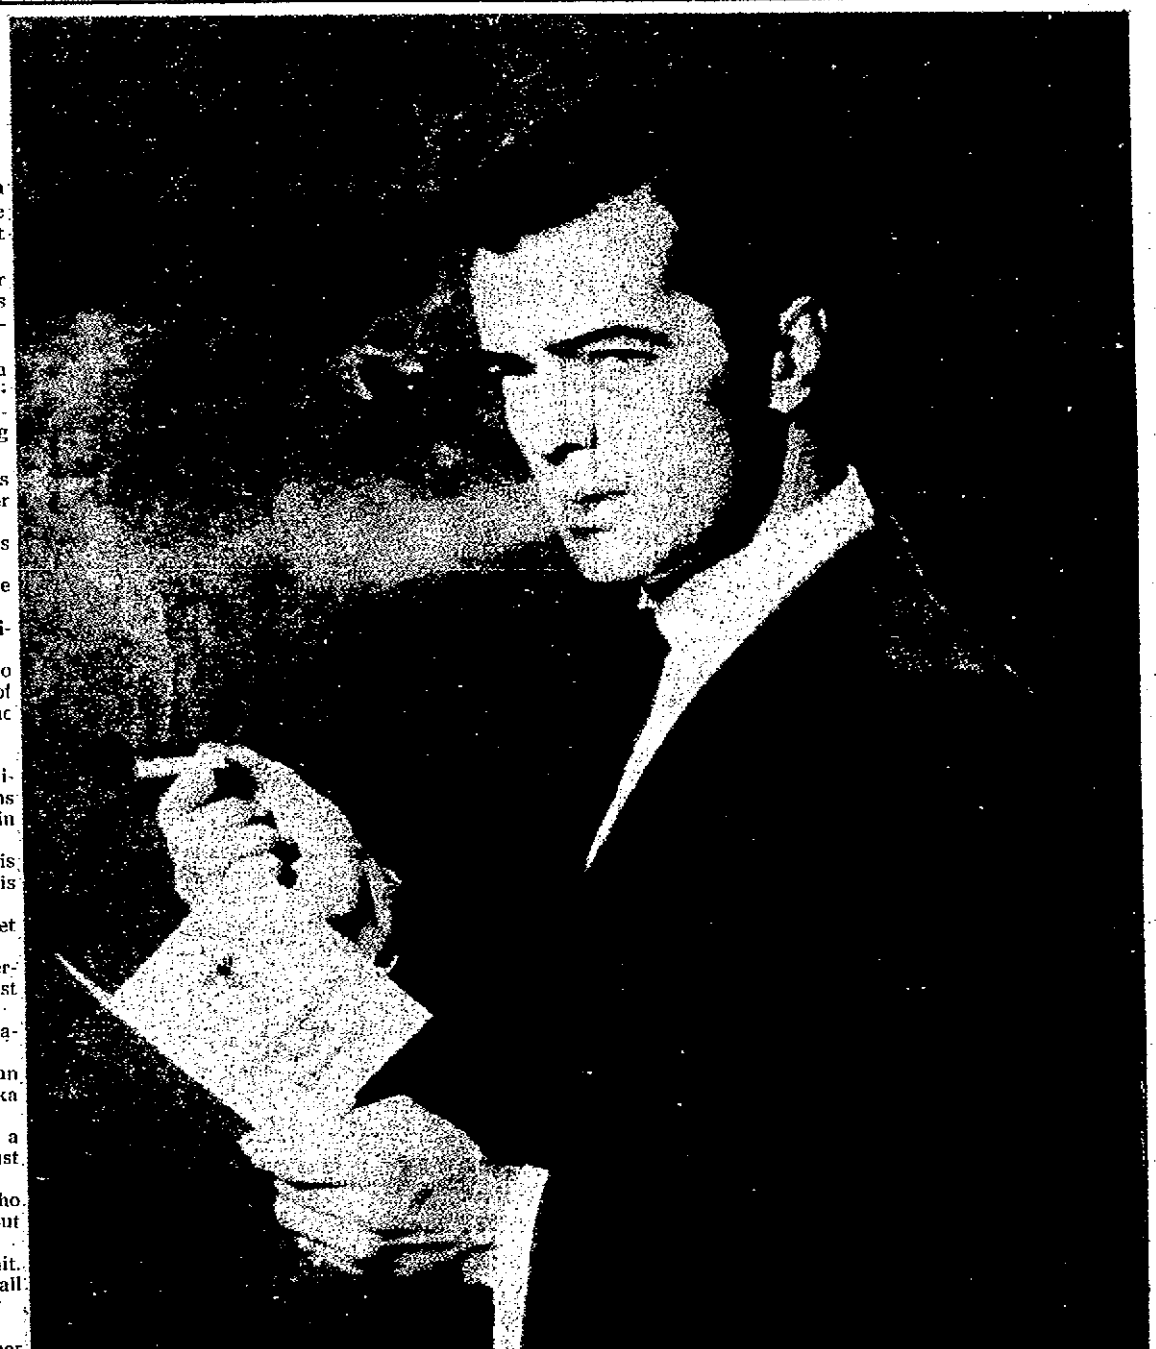
On Canadian television and radio, Goulet's range of activities varied from serving as a disc jockey to having a featured dramatic role in a Canadian television serial.

In the United States, he was featured in two motion pictures and had the role of Lancelot in the Broadway musical "Camelot." An outstanding performance as a GI in television's "Suspense Theater" was one of the factors that led to his procural as the lead in the "Blue Light" series.

Goulet is married to Broadway-TV actress Carol Lawrence. While he doesn't minimize the fact that "two acting egos are involved" when an actor and actress wed, he believes there are compensations that haven't been generally noted.

"Because Carol is an actress, she understands a lot of my problems, anxieties and the hours involved in my work schedule. I reciprocate as far as she's concerned.

"Furthermore, I respect Carol's judgment as well as her talent.



"Oftentimes, in connection with some dramatic bit, she'll say to me, 'Why not try it this way instead of that way?' Chances are she's right."

If Goulet is a big enough man to frequently accept his wife's judgment, Carol is enough of a woman to know that her husband comes first.

She plans her schedule around his.

When Goulet is touring the country for night-club appearances, Carol accompanies him. If they're going to be gone from home for more than two weeks, their 16-month-old son, Christopher, is taken along.

Future travel plans will be expanded. The Goulets are expecting another child next month.

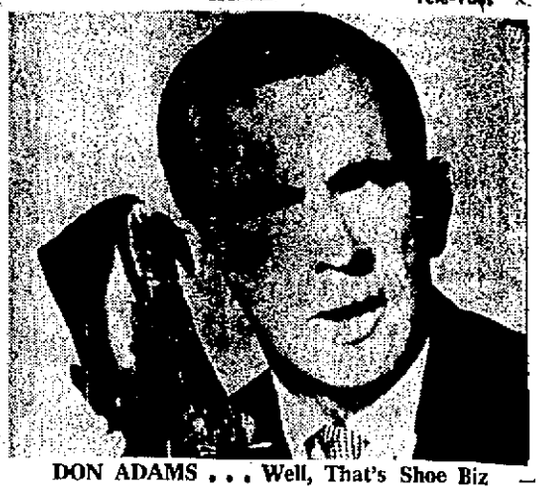
'Beverly Hillbillies' Tape Easter Show at Marineland

The Beverly Hillbillies and a huge crew from CBS-TV (Channel 2) will be on hand at Marineland March 12, 13 and 14 to shoot a one-hour television special, "Marineland Carnival," for airing Easter Sunday evening.

This latest edition of the traditional Easter Sunday Specials at the world's largest oceanarium will present the funny folk from the TV series visiting such aquatic stars as Bubbles the whale, Woofy the walrus, Flipper the dolphin, Cy the seal and many others.

Marineland will open at 9:30 a.m. on the three days when the TV crew will be there.



The regular schedule of sea shows will be conducted and the "Beverly Hillbillies" will perform for the TV cameras between Marineland's presentations.

All visitors to the famed oceanarium will not only see the regular shows but also will be able to watch a major TV Special being produced.

Cass 'Truth'

Peggy Cass, "To Tell the Truth" panelist, believes the key to her popularity is that "I'm sort of like the woman next door — somebody you half know, and someone you wouldn't be surprised to see with her hair in rollers."

DON ADAMS . . . Well, That's Shoe Biz

WOULD YOU BELIEVE TOP 15?

Catch Phrases Place 'Get Smart' in Top 10

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Are your children apologizing by saying, "Sorry about that, chief?"

Or when you punish them do they say, "Gee, you really know how to hurt a guy?"

When you doubt they got in from a date at midnight, so they reply, "Would you believe 1 a.m.?"

If so, gentle parent, you are harboring a "Get Smart" fan under your roof. Bungling, inept Maxwell Smart—television's first idiot spy—has become a folk hero, especially with the young set. And the above phrases are part of Smart's facile vocabulary.

The brains behind NBC-TV's dummy Smart belong to writer-creator Buck Henry and the dapper little actor who plays the role, Don Adams.

* * * *

THEY BOTH credit writer Joe Mikolas, who once worked with the late Ernie Kovacs, with providing most of the catch phrases which are fast becoming part of American jargon.

"Everybody goes around sounding like Don Adams," Henry grinned. "The repetition is great for the show. It's value is very commercial, because it allows kids — and adults—to play a character. And Maxwell Smart is perfect with ready-made dialogue."

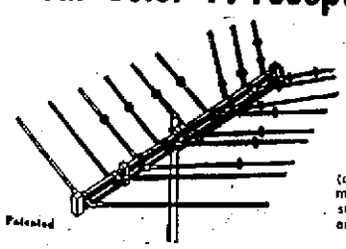
In a worldful of Don Adamses, the original is still the best. He nodded agreement with Henry and added: "We're coming up with a new running gag. Smart is saying, 'I hope I'm not out of line.'

"He uses that line right after he has insulted some villain, hit him with everything he's got, and the heavy just looks at Maxwell without blinking. Calling on all his resources, Max says, 'I hope I'm not out of line.'

* * * *

"ANOTHER favorite is when the chief describes the awful dangers and horrors involved in a particular assignment, ending with, 'You will be in peril every second.' Which is Smart's cue to say, 'and loving it.'"

There are other standard cliches and non sequiturs in his grab-bag of patter, including, "Funny you should put it that way," and "You noticed that, eh?"



"We've been in the top 10 ratings all season and we're not going to change anything next year except the stars," Adams laughed appreciatively.

Henry went on to say, "We've done 30 episodes so far, and there's no reason we can't provide an endless series of inanity taken from the daily newspapers. We can never hope to do anything as crazy as what happens in real life.

"The youngsters enjoy the show because for them it is pure comedy. Adults tune us in because we are one of the few series on the air based on satire. I just hope I'm not out of line."

"You noticed that, eh?" Adams asked.

Sandy and Don Should Check Lucy's Pitch for Dollars

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Dodger pitchers Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale might well study Lucille Ball's holdout techniques when it comes to signing new contracts.

Every winter for the past several years the zany redhead has announced she is quitting her weekly television series.

But at the start of every new season Lucy is on the tube with a new and generous contract. But then she has some things going for her that Koufax and Drysdale don't.

When Lucy chooses to turn on the charm, there are few men alive who can resist. The Dodger pitchers on the other hand, leave Walter O'Malley cold in the charm department. Moreover, the boys don't play to as many customers all season as Lucy does in a single show.

Last month Lucy announced she was quitting after 15 years on TV in the top 10 ratings. But her motives were vastly different from the Dodger stars who wanted a million dollars.

* * * *

LUCY'S already got a million.

"If it weren't for the option date in my contract, when I have to file my intentions, I'd probably never announce I was leaving the air," Lucy explained in her own private dining room in her own private studio (Desilu).

"The option time always comes up when I'm dead tired and in the middle of the season.

"I have to say yes or no by a certain date. And I'm so exhausted I automatically say, 'No.' I can't say 'Yes' because I'm just not up to it."

Once Lucy options for out, the network chieftains (CBS) and sponsors hold a powwow. There is much rending of hair, weeping, agonized soul-searching and table pounding. Then they come to Lucy with a new deal, all smiles and promises.

* * * *

LUCY, naturally, capitulates.

"I don't know why I decide to return all the time," she grinned. "It must be the network's persuasive ways.

"But I also come back to work because I have stockholders in Desilu to think about. I wear an executive hat in addition to my performing hat, you know."

It has been suggested that Lucy could do a great deal indeed for her stockholders by making a package deal with the network. That is to say she could agree to return to the air if the network was willing to accept three or four new Desilu series.

The thought revolts Lucy, although it has been successfully applied by other individuals in the past.

"That's sandbagging," she said. "People have discussed the possibility with me and I've always refused. If a show can't carry it's own weight, then it doesn't belong on the air."

Sports Today

NBA BASKETBALL, 11 a.m., ch. 7, is a clash between the Philadelphia 76ers and the Boston Celtics, with Boston Garden the setting.

CBS SPORTS Spectacular, 2:30 p.m., ch. 2, has Dick Button at Davos, Switzerland, with tapes of last weekend's world figure skating championships, including Peggy Fleming's dazzling gold medal victory, plus tapes of yesterday's Santa Anita Derby and the national AAU indoor track and field championships held yesterday at Albuquerque.

BIG THREE GOLF, 4 p.m., in color, ch. 4, has Jim Simpson at the Firestone course in Akron as Gary Player and Jack Nicklaus fight to overcome the first-round lead of Arnold Palmer.

AMERICAN Sportsman, 4 p.m., in color, ch. 7, watches Gen. Curtis LeMay fishing for red salmon and hunting for stag in Scotland, Rip Torn and Burt Reynolds shooting ducks in Louisiana, and an Australian research team in an underwater shark and sea snake hunt off the Great Barrier Reef.

SPECIAL

ARTHRITIS TELETHON—The 19-hour fund appeal, begun last night, continues to 6 p.m., ch. 5, with Johnny Grant as host. For some of the stars taking part, check the hourly bold face log ads appearing on this page.

OF HEAVEN & EARTH—Winston Burdett explores the exhibits of the new Israel Museum in Jerusalem during a color hour at 8 a.m., ch. 2. With the museum's Dr. William Sandberg and Karl Katz, we see the Vittorio Veneto Synagogue, the modern art wing, the Billy Rose Art Garden with its 43 pieces of sculpture, the Samuel Bronfman Biblical and Archaeological Wing and the Shrine of the Book which house the famous Dead Sea Scrolls.

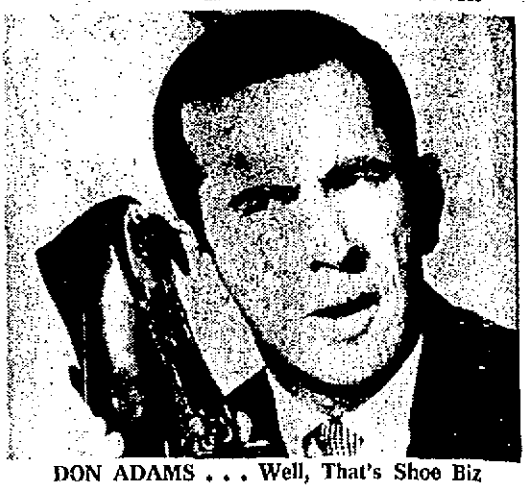
BIRTH CONTROL: A Continuing Controversy—The problems and solutions for the population explosion, as seen by international authorities on planning for population control, are studied in the first of four weekly programs to screen each Sunday during March at 2 p.m., ch. 28. Edward T. Tyler, M.D., of the UCLA School of Medicine, moderates the 4-hour telecast, taped at a symposium held Jan. 29 and 30 at UCLA.

STUART LITTLE—Johnny Carson is off-camera narrator for a televersion of E. B. White's children's classic about a debonair and philosophical mouse born to a New York City family, who sets out in the world to find his dearest friend, a beautiful bird named Margalo. The title "star," a 4-in. stuffed animal with 8 different bodies and several heads, joins a cast of non-professional humans, and a real bird and cat, during June Reig's adaptation for "NBC Children's Theatre" at 6:30 p.m. (ch. 4, in color.

Music Teacher

Dorothea Gillespie, teacher who supervises the youngsters appearing on "Art Linkletter's House Party," once taught music and headed her own orchestra.

'Beverly Hillbillies' Tape Easter Show at Marineland



The Beverly Hillbillies and a huge crew from CBS-TV (Channel 2) will be on hand at Marineland March 12, 13 and 14 to shoot a one-hour television special, "Marineland Carnival," for airing Easter Sunday evening.

This latest edition of the traditional Easter Sunday Specials at the world's largest oceanarium will present the funny folk from the TV series visiting such aquatic stars as Bubbles the whale, Woofy the walrus, Flipper the dolphin, Cy the seal and many others.

Marineland will open at 9:30 a.m. on the three days when the TV crew will be there.

The regular schedule of sea shows will be conducted and the "Beverly Hillbillies" will perform for the TV cameras between Marineland's presentations.

All visitors to the famed oceanarium will not only see the regular shows but also will be able to watch a major TV Special being produced.

DON ADAMS . . . Well, That's Shoe Biz

Cass 'Truth'

Peggy Cass, "To Tell the Truth" panelist, believes the key to her popularity is that "I'm sort of like the woman next door — somebody you half know, and someone you wouldn't be surprised to see with her hair in rollers."

Catch Phrases Place 'Get Smart' in Top 10

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Are your children apologizing by saying, "Sorry about that, chief?"

Or when you punish them do they say, "Gee, you really know how to hurt a guy?"

When you doubt they got in from a date at midnight, so they reply, "Would you believe 1 a.m.?"

If so, gentle parent, you are harboring a "Get Smart" fan under your roof. Bungling, inept Maxwell Smart—television's first idiot spy—has become a folk hero, especially with the young set. And the above phrases are part of Smart's facile vocabulary.

The brains behind NBC-TV's dummy Smart belong to writer-creator Buck Henry and the dapper little actor who plays the role, Don Adams.

* * * *

THEY BOTH credit writer Joe Mikolas, who once worked with the late Ernie Kovacs, with providing most of the catch phrases which are fast becoming part of American jargon.

"Everybody goes around sounding like Don Adams," Henry grinned. "The repetition is great for the show. It's value is very commercial, because it allows kids — and adults—to play a character. And Maxwell Smart is perfect with ready-made dialogue."

In a worldful of Don Adamses, the original is still the best. He nodded agreement with Henry and added: "We're coming up with a new running gag. Smart is saying, 'I hope I'm not out of line.'

"He uses that line right after he has insulted some villain, hit him with everything he's got, and the heavy just looks at Maxwell without blinking. Calling on all his resources, Max says, 'I hope I'm not out of line.'

* * * *

"ANOTHER favorite is when the chief describes the awful dangers and horrors involved in a particular assignment, ending with, 'You will be in peril every second.' Which is Smart's cue to say, 'and loving it.'"

There are other standard cliches and non sequiturs in his grab-bag of patter, including, "Funny you should put it that way," and "You noticed that, eh?"

"We've been in the top 10 ratings all season and we're not going to change anything next year except the stars."

Adams laughed appreciatively.

Henry went on to say, "We've done 30 episodes so far, and there's no reason we can't provide an endless series of inanity taken from the daily newspapers. We can never hope to do anything as crazy as what happens in real life.

"The youngsters enjoy the show because for them it is pure comedy. Adults tune in because we are one of the few series on the air based on satire. I just hope I'm not out of line."

"You noticed that, eh?" Adams asked.

Sandy and Don Should Check Lucy's Pitch for Dollars

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Dodger pitchers Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale might well study Lucille Ball's holdout techniques when it comes to signing new contracts.

Every winter for the past several years the zany redhead has announced she is quitting her weekly television series.

But at the start of every new season Lucy is on the tube with a new and generous contract. But then she has some things going for her that Koufax and Drysdale don't.

When Lucy chooses to turn on the charm, there are few men alive who can resist. The Dodger pitchers on the other hand, leave Walter O'Malley cold in the charm department. Moreover, the boys don't play to as many customers all season as Lucy does in a single show.

Last month Lucy announced she was quitting after 15 years on TV in the top 10 ratings. But her motives were vastly different from the Dodger stars who wanted a million dollars.

* * * *

LUCY'S already got a million.

"If it weren't for the option date in my contract, when I have to file my intentions, I'd probably never announce I was leaving the air," Lucy explained in her own private dining room in her own private studio (Desilu).

"The option time always comes up when I'm dead tired and in the middle of the season.

"I have to say yes or no by a certain date. And I'm so exhausted I automatically say, 'No.' I can't say 'Yes' because I'm just not up to it."

Once Lucy opts for out, the network chieftains (CBS) and sponsors hold a powwow. There is much rending of hair, weeping, agonized soul-searching and table pounding. Then they come to Lucy with a new deal, all smiles and promises.

* * * *

LUCY, naturally, capitulates.

"I don't know why I decide to return all the time," she grinned. "It must be the network's persuasive ways.

"But I also come back to work because I have stockholders in Desilu to think about. I wear an executive hat in addition to my performing hat, you know."

It has been suggested that Lucy could do a great deal indeed for her stockholders by making a package deal with the network. That is to say she could agree to return to the air if the network was willing to accept three or four new Desilu series.

The thought revolts Lucy, although it has been successfully applied by other individuals in the past.

"That's sandbagging," she said. "People have discussed the possibility with me and I've always refused. If a show can't carry it's own weight, then it doesn't belong on the air."

SPECIAL

ANDY WILLIAMS—Andy launches a contest for the sponsor he soon loses—singing a new tune by Oscar-winning Livingston and Evans which will be worth $10,000 to the contestant giving it a title. During remainder of 9 p.m. color hour, ch. 4, guests Peggy Lee and Tony Bennett join Andy in song, while the informal spot finds Frank Gorshin in imitations of famed Hollywood stars as they simply ask for a cup of coffee. The "Kraft Mystery Song" will be repeated March 21, when Andy's guests are Pat Boone and Dick Shawn. (Williams is expected to move to 10 p.m. Sundays next season, when Kraft takes this hour for an 1850-Kansas-set western starring Barry Sullivan with Andrew Prine, Brenda Scott, Kelly Corcoran and Glenn Corbett, to yield monthly to Como.)

THIN BLUE LINE — Narrator Van Heflin examines both sides of the coin— L.A. Negro councilman Thomas Bradley and civil rights lawyer Hugh Manes, both critics of police procedures, and California attorney general Thomas Lynch, who explains the plight of today's law enforcement agencies. In David L. Wolper's hour, at 10 p.m., ch. 7, we examine the rising crime rates in the U.S., including films of the development of the California state narcotics bureau's case against a heroin peddler. Crime in New York City, Chicago and Rochester, N.Y., also are probed, as is the latter city's efforts to deal with "brutality" charges through its Negro deputy commissioner of public safety. With the nation's 197 million people depending on a "Thin Blue Line" of 350,000 law enforcement officers, outnumbered 500 to 1 by the criminals, it is estimated that during 1966, 60 policemen will be slain, and 30 more lose their lives in accidents incurred in the line of duty. (Hour preempts "Ben Casey," which folds anyway after March 21 outing.)

Sports Today

NBA BASKETBALL, 11 a.m., ch. 7, is a clash between the Philadelphia 76ers and the Boston Celtics, with Boston Garden the setting.

CBS SPORTS Spectacular, 2:30 p.m., ch. 2, has Dick Button at Davos, Switzerland, with tapes of last weekend's world figure skating championships, including Peggy Fleming's dazzling gold medal victory, plus tapes of yesterday's Santa Anita Derby and the national AAU indoor track and field championships held yesterday at Albuquerque.

BIG THREE GOLF, 4 p.m., in color, ch. 4, has Jim Simpson at the Firestone course in Akron as Gary Player and Jack Nicklaus fight to overcome the first-round lead of Arnold Palmer.

AMERICAN Sportsman, 4 p.m., in color, ch. 7, watches Gen. Curtis LeMay fishing for red salmon and hunting for stag in Scotland, Rip Torn and Burt Reynolds shooting ducks in Louisiana, and an Australian research team in an underwater shark and sea snake hunt off the Great Barrier Reef.

SPECIAL

ARTHRITIS TELETHON—The 19-hour fund appeal, begun last night, continues to 6 p.m., ch. 5, with Johnny Grant as host. For some of the stars taking part, check the hourly bold face log ads appearing on this page.

OF HEAVEN & EARTH—Winston Burdett explores the exhibits of the new Israel Museum in Jerusalem during a color hour at 8 a.m., ch. 2. With the museum's Dr. William Sandberg and Karl Katz, we see the Vittorio Veneto Synagogue, the modern art wing, the Billy Rose Art Garden with its 43 pieces of sculpture, the Samuel Bronfman Biblical and Archaeological Wing and the Shrine of the Book which house the famous Dead Sea Scrolls.

BIRTH CONTROL: A Continuing Controversy—The problems and solutions for the population explosion, as seen by international authorities on planning for population control, are studied in the first of four weekly programs to screen each Sunday during March at 2 p.m., ch. 28. Edward T. Tyler, M.D., of the UCLA School of Medicine, moderates the 4-hour telecast, taped at a symposium held Jan. 29 and 30 at UCLA.

STUART LITTLE—Johnny Carson is off-camera narrator for a televersion of E. B. White's children's classic about a debonair and philosophical mouse born to a New York City family, who sets out in the world to find his dearest friend, a beautiful bird named Margalo. The title "star," a 4-in. stuffed animal with 8 different bodies and several heads, joins a cast of non-professional humans, and a real bird and cat, during June Reig's adaptation for "NBC Children's Theatre", at 6:30 p.m., ch. 4, in color.

CRITIC'S CORNER

Excerpted Reviews on Recent TV Programs

Program: "The Man From UNCLE," airing Fridays on channel 4.

"The Man From UNCLE," sires "The Girl From UNCLE," In this spinoff, a logical sequel, which will star a femme spy in what might turn out to be a Jane Bond trend. If this keeps up, who knows, season after next there may be a "Nephew From UNCLE," as well.

NBC-TV has already placed the "Girl" on its 1966-67 sked in this continuation of the esplonage parade, which shows no signs of abating. They bought the idea—a most promising one—but the spinoff itself was no great shakes.

Thrush is threatening our space program, and plans to go after Russia next so it can reach the muon first. They are foiled in the duly-allotted running time by Miss Mobley and her aide, Mary Ann Norman Fell, projected regulars for the new series.

Critic Daku of "Variety"

Program: "Testing: How Quick Is Your Eye?" aired last Monday on channel 4.

NBC had us watching TV with pencil and pad again, this time testing the quickness of our eyes and ears.

It was all good fun and reminiscent of tests most of us have encountered before, if not in classrooms, on the pages of magazines.

In the past year I have tested my driving, my knowledge of diseases, my citizenship, my honesty and now my eyes. Next month CBS wants me to test my knowledge of income tax regulations.

I hope the networks give this particular format a rest lest it become a bit of a bore.

Critic Cynthia Lowry of AP

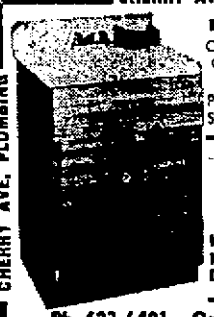
Weakest of the testing shows. All the effort and hours poured into this special availed the looker and listener small reward for his time. When the eye became watery from catching glimpses of fleeting objects, the producers turned to the ear for sounds and wisps of conversations. Other testing shows, especially those on CBS, the trailblazer, were more personal and provided more useful information. Coming up: your income tax. That's more like it.

Critic Helm of "Variety"

Program: "Town Meeting of the World," aired last Tuesday on channel 2.

Television's most distinguished series, CBS-TV's "Town Meeting of the World," presented a lively international debate on the spread of nuclear weapons—and how to stop it. The two-way Europe-America program was transmitted via the Early Bird satellite earlier in the day and was taped for delayed broadcast in prime time.

The participants were Sen. Robert Kennedy, in Washington; Lord Chalfont, British minister of state for foreign affairs, in Geneva; former West German defense minister Franz Josef Strauss, in Munich, and retired French Air Force Gen. Pierre Gallois, in Paris. The moderator once again for televison's most enlightened and purposeful use of the Early Bird satellite was Eric Sevareid.



Critic Rick Du Brow of UPI

When an actuality program like this lights up the late evening channels, the rest of TV's usual evening entertainment output seems even more second-rate and predictable than ever.

Critic Cynthia Lowry of AP

As a parent...

You expect a child of this age to wet the bed, because it's a part of "growing up"

but...when he reaches 4, 8, 12 yrs. or older and still wets the bed...

what can you do about it?

During the past 17 years, over 350,000 parents have asked us the same question. In over 97% of these cases, the ENURTONE method has proved it can STOP BED-WETTING (Enuresis),* when not caused by organic defects or diseases. Not a drug or diet... just a simple conditioning technique you can employ yourself—in the privacy of your home—to correct bed-wetting in as little as 2 to 4 weeks. Developed by a doctor, prescribed by many doctors as a recognized family service. Recommended ages 4 thru 50.

As Seen In Saturday Evening Post and Ladies Home Journal.

LEE REMICK appears on "I've Got a Secret" at 8 p. m. Monday, channel 2.

SPECIAL

ANDY WILLIAMS—Andy launches a contest for the sponsor he soon loses—singing a new tune by Oscar-winning Livingston and Evans which will be worth $10,000 to the contestant giving it a title. During remainder of 9 p.m. color hour, ch. 4, guests Peggy Lee and Tony Bennett join Andy in song, while the informal spot finds Frank Gorshin in imitations of famed Hollywood stars as they simply ask for a cup of coffee. The "Kraft Mystery Song" will be repeated March 21, when Andy's guests are Pat Boone and Dick Shawn. (Williams is expected to move to 10 p.m. Sundays next season, when Kraft takes this hour for an 1850-Kansas-set western starring Barry Sullivan with Andrew Prine, Brenda Scott, Kelly Corcoran and Glenn Corbett, to yield monthly to Como.)

THIN BLUE LINE — Narrator Van Heflin examines both sides of the coin— L.A. Negro councilman Thomas Bradley and civil rights lawyer Hugh Manes, both critics of police procedures, and California attorney general Thomas Lynch, who explains the plight of today's law enforcement agencies. In David L. Wolper's hour, at 10 p.m., ch. 7, we examine the rising crime rates in the U.S., including films of the development of the California state narcotics bureau's case against a heroin peddler. Crime in New York City, Chicago and Rochester, N.Y., also are probed, as is the latter city's efforts to deal with "brutality" charges through its Negro deputy commissioner of public safety. With the nation's 197 million people depending on a "Thin Blue Line" of 350,000 law enforcement officers, outnumbered 500 to 1 by the criminals, it is estimated that during 1966, 60 policemen will be slain, and 30 more lose their lives in accidents incurred in the line of duty. (Hour preempts "Ben Casey," which folds anyway after March 21 outing.)

CRITIC'S CORNER

Excerpted Reviews on Recent TV Programs

Program: "The Man From UNCLE," airing Fridays on channel 4.

"The Man From UNCLE," sires "The Girl From UNCLE," in this spinoff, a logical sequel, which will star a femme spy in what might turn out to be a Jane Bond trend. If this keeps up, who knows, season after next there may be a "Nephew From UNCLE," as well.

NBC-TV has already placed the "Girl" on its 1966-67 sked in this continuation of the espionage parade, which shows no signs of abating. They bought the idea—a most promising one—but the spinoff itself was no great shakes.

Thrush is threatening our space program, and plans to go after Russia next so it can reach the moon first. They are foiled in the duly-allotted running time by Miss Mobley and her aide, Mary Ann Norman Fell, projected regulars for the new series.

Critic Daku of "Variety"

Program: "Testing: How Quick Is Your Eye?" aired last Monday on channel 4.

NBC had us watching TV with pencil and pad again, this time testing the quickness of our eyes and ears.

It was all good fun and reminiscent of tests most of us have encountered before, if not in classrooms, on the pages of magazines.

In the past year I have tested my driving, my knowledge of diseases, my citizenship, my honesty and now, my eyes. Next month CBS wants me to test my knowledge of income tax regulations.

I hope the networks give this particular format a rest lest it become a bit of a bore.

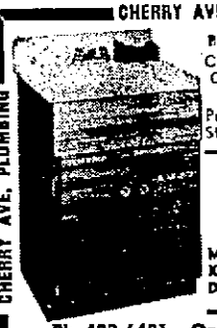
Critic Cynthia Lowry of AP

Weakest of the testing shows. All the effort and hours poured into this special availed the looker and listener small reward for his time. When the eye became watery from catching glimpses of fleeting objects, the producers turned to the ear for sounds and wisps of conversations. Other testing shows, especially those on CBS, the trail-blazer, were more personal and provided more useful information. Coming up: your income tax. That's more like it.

Critic Helm of "Variety"

Program: "Town Meeting of the World," aired last Tuesday on channel 2.

Television's most distinguished series, CBS-TV's "Town Meeting of the World," presented a lively international debate on the spread of nuclear weapons—and how to stop it. The two-way Europe-America program was transmitted via the Early Bird satellite earlier in the day and was taped for delayed broadcast in prime time.



The participants were Sen. Robert Kennedy, in Washington; Lord Chalfont, British minister of state for foreign affairs, in Geneva; former West German defense minister Franz Josef Strauss, in Munich, and retired French Air Force Gen. Pierre Gallois, in Paris. The moderator once again for televison's most enlightened and purposeful use of the Early Bird satellite was Eric Sevareid.

Critic Rick Du Brow of UPI

When an actuality program like this lights up the late evening channels, the rest of TV's usual evening entertainment output seems even more second-rate and predictable than ever.

Critic Cynthia Lowry of AP

ICAAAA TRACK MEET, 9:30 p.m., in color, ch. 9, has Mel Allen and Bob Richards at Madison Square Garden with taped highlights of the 45th annual indoor track and field championships, held last Saturday, with Villanova defending champion.

SPECIAL

OUR FRIENDS, the French —Eric Sevareid takes a provocative, witty look at the rupture in Franco-American relations that has been described as "more than a quarrel and less than a war," during a CBS News Special hour at 10 p.m., in color, ch. 2. Breakfasting with a typical Parisian family, talking with some of France's current movers and shakers, looking at the French atomic weapon, chatting with the man-at-his-cafe-on-street and attending a press conference with President De Gaulle, we try to find out why, despite officially friendly relations, the French since Ben Franklin's time have had an unofficial disdain for Americans, and vice versa. But as writer-producer Perry Wolff points out: "Recent American travelers report that the natives are friendlier—it's just the government that's more hostile. The French now spend more time disliking each other than they do disliking us." (Next week, a probe of the explosive growth of consumer credit.)

SUNDAY

MARCH of the Wooden Soldiers—4 p.m. on channel 9. A delightful 1934 movie during which Laurel and Hardy attempt to help a widow who is about to be evicted.

TUGBOAT Annie—5:30 p.m. on channel 7. A 1933 movie with Marie Dressler, Wallace Beery and Robert Young. About a lady skipper.

THE GLASS Menagerie—9 p.m. on channel 7. A 1950 movie adapted from a play by Tennessee Williams. About a woman who lives in her memories, her crippled daughter and her poetic son. Stars Jane Wyman, Kirk Douglas, Gertrude Lawrence and Arthur Kennedy.

CONCERT of Intrigue—11.15 p.m. on channel 7. A 1954 French movie with Brigitte Bardot and Pierre Cressoy. Italian count falls in love with niece of German official.

THE GREAT Victor Herbert—11:30 p.m. on channel 5. A 1939 movie with Allan Jones, Mary Martin and Walter Connelly. Biographical movie about the composer.

MONDAY

WHITE Witch Doctor — 7:30 p.m. in COLOR on channel 5. A 1953 movie with Susan Hayward, Robert Mitchum and Walter Slezak. Lust for gold.

ALL ABOUT Eve—11:30 p.m. on channel 2. A six-Oscar winner about an actress who rises to stardom. The 1950 film features Bette Davis, Anne Baxter, George Sanders and Marilyn Monroe.

TUESDAY

SEPTEMBER Affair — 9 p.m. on channel 4. A 1951 movie with Joan Fontaine, Joseph Cotten and Jessica Tandy. About the illicit romance of an engineer and a concert pianist.

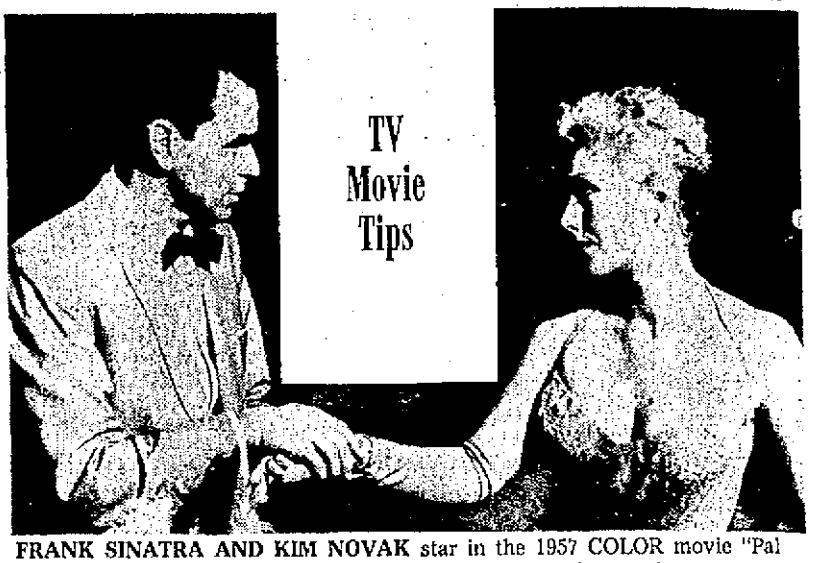
THURSDAY

POSTMARK for Danger—11 p.m. on channel 9. A 1956 English production with Terry Moore, Robert Beatty and William Sylvester. Artist gets involved with diamond smugglers.

WHY MUST I die?—11:30 p.m. on channel 7. A 1960 movie with Terry Moore, Debra Paget and Bert Freed. About a nightclub singer whose father is a safecracker.

FRIDAY

TRAPEZE — 8 p.m. on channel 11 in COLOR. A 1956 production with Burt Lancaster, Tony Curtis, Gina Lollobrigida and Katy Jurado. Exciting film about circus performers.



SATURDAY

A PLACE in the Sun — 9 p.m. on channel 4. A 1951 movie with Montgomery Clift, Elizabeth Taylor, Shelley Winters and Raymond Burr. Based on the Theodore Dreiser novel "An American Tragedy," the film concerns a man accused of murdering a girl with whom he had an affair. Burr, television's defense attorney "Perry Mason", plays the prosecuting lawyer in this one.

THE CROWDED Sky — 11:15 p.m. in COLOR on channel 2. Stars Dana Andrews, Efrem Zimbalist Jr., Rhonda Fleming and Anne Francis. About two planes on a collision course.

SOME Came Running — 11:15 p.m. in COLOR on channel 7. A 1959 movie with Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Shirley MacLaine and Martha Hyer. Former writer, returning from military service, gets involved with two women. Excellent.

TV Movie Tips

FRANK SINATRA AND KIM NOVAK star in the 1957 COLOR movie "Pal Joey" at 6 p. m. Friday on channel 7. It's about a singer who wants to open his own nightclub.

JANET Margolin is a schizophrenic student at a special school during the 1962 movie "David and Lisa" airing 10 p. m. Friday on channel 9 and at 11 p. m. Saturday.

ANNE Helm is featured in the 1962 movie "The Interns" at 9 p. m. Thursday, channel 2. It's about doctors in their last year of internship.

As a parent...

You expect a child of this age to wet the bed, because it's a part of "growing up"

but..when he reaches 4, 8, 12 yrs. or older and still wets the bed...

what can you do about it?

During the past 17 years, over 350,000 parents have asked us the same question. In over 97% of these cases, the ENURTONE method has proved it can STOP BED-WETTING (Enuresis),* when not caused by organic defects or diseases. Not a drug or diet . . . just a simple conditioning technique you can employ yourself—in the privacy of your home—to correct bed-wetting in as little as 2 to 4 weeks. Developed by a doctor, prescribed by many doctors as a recognized family service. Recommended ages 4 thru 50.

SPECIAL

GOLDEN AGE of Comic Books—Holy Batmania! Everybody's getting into the act. Bud Collyer's planning to do the soundtrack for Superman cartoons, Denny Miller's set to play Captain Marvel, and series on Brenda Starr and the Green Hornet have been sold. So now KMPC's Gary Owens takes an hour's lok at early comic books, at old movie serials based on them, and at their reflection of history, art and science. Joining in the color hour at 8:30 p.m., ch. 13, are Ray Bradbury, who cites early futuristic devices now realities, plus the present king of the comic book collectors.

SPECIAL

OUR FRIENDS, the French—Eric Sevareid takes a provocative, witty look at the rupture in Franco-American relations that has been described as "more than a quarrel and less than a war," during a CBS News Special hour at 10 p.m., in color, ch. 2. Breakfasting with a typical Parisian family, talking with some of France's current movers and shakers, looking at the French atomic weapon, chatting with the man-at-his-cafe-on-street and attending a press conference with President De Gaulle, we try to find out why, despite officially friendly relations, the French since Ben Franklin's time have had an unofficial disdain for Americans, and vice versa. But as writer-producer Perry Wolff points out: "Recent American travelers report that the natives are friendlier—it's just the government that's more hostile. The French now spend more time disliking each other than they do disliking us." (Next week, a probe of the explosive growth of consumer credit.)

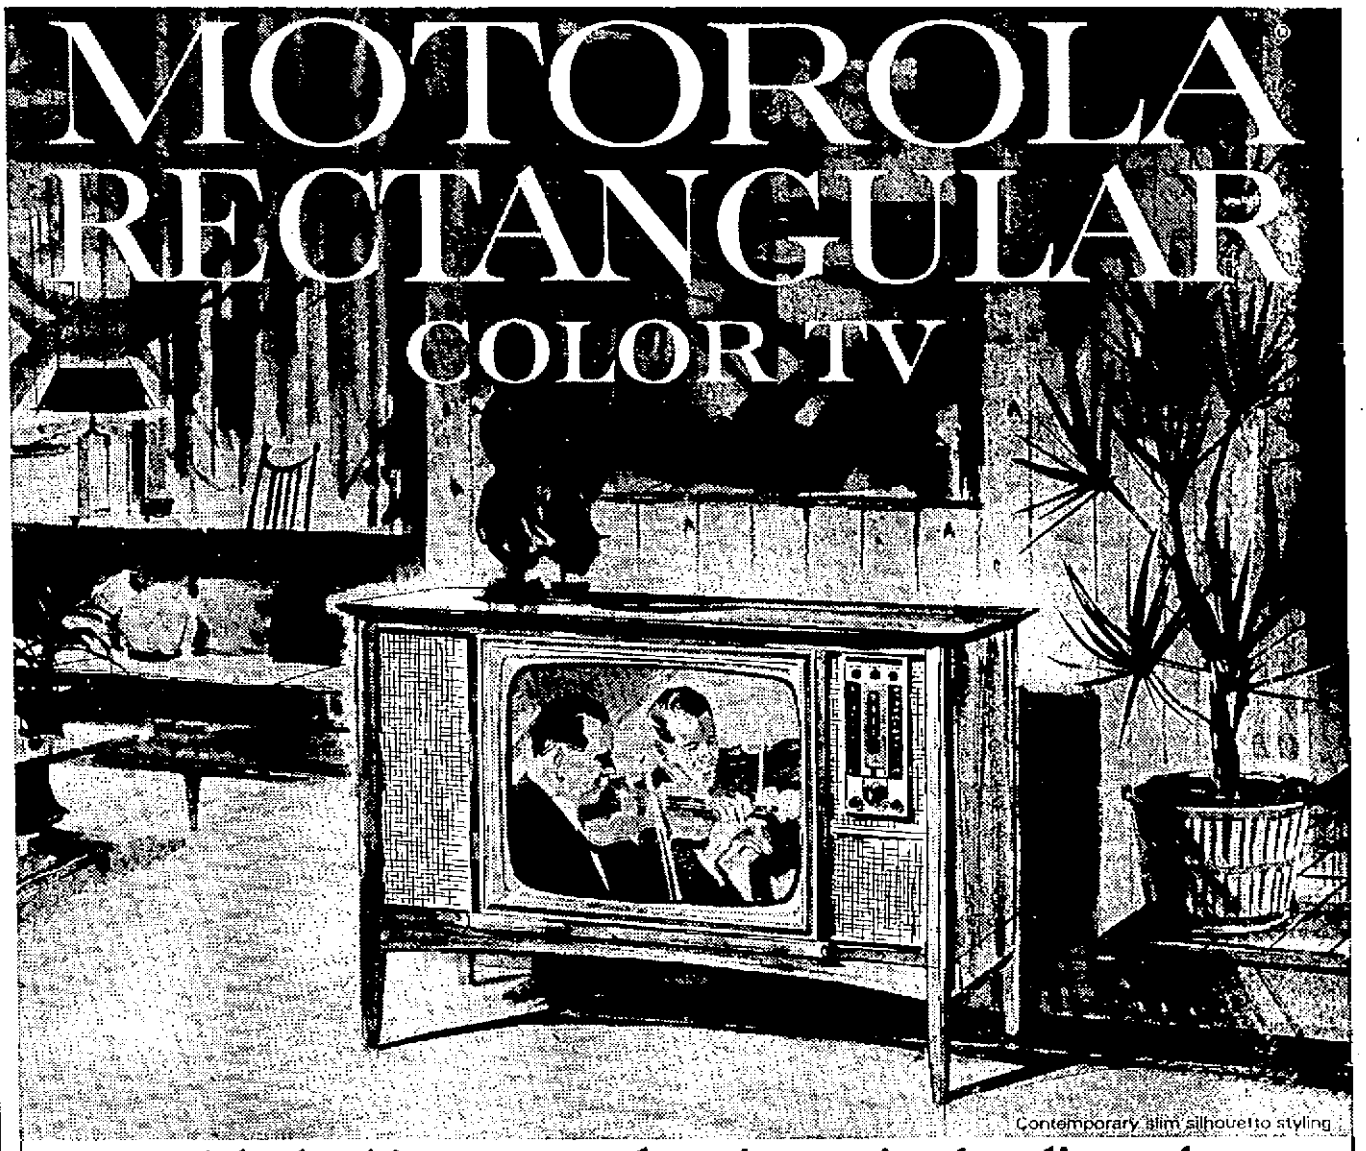
How Many TV Showmen Do You Know?

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Movie buffs can name countless showmen, creative or flamboyant or both, who turn out—or contribute to—the films presented to the public. Federico Fellini. Otto Preminger. Joe Levine. Billy Wilder. The list is endless—and the past was no exception. David O. Selznick. Irving Thalberg. Louis B. Mayer. D. W. Griffith. And so and so on. Even second-raters make a mark.

Today's question: How many television showmen, creative or flamboyant—or anything—can you name?

This thought came to mind during a pondering of the total lack of show business know-how exhibited in some of this television season's specials with big star names. One suddenly realized that nowhere near the top of network television's entertainment structures is there a single, solitary figure to whom one can look up even slightly as a dynamic, creative showman.



And one wonders how an industry like video can spend millions elsewhere, yet overlook an attempt to lure great showmen so their specials will offer something. This was, you may recall, the season that the specials were supposed to compensate for the junk that is seen every week.

* * * *

HOW CAN one explain, for instance, the near total waste of a star like Carol Channing in her recent hour —which was marked by an almost complete lack of understanding of her appeal? Likewise, how can one explain the Gene Kelly hour, which may have moderately satisfied fans like me, but certainly was far short of its potential? How can one explain the essentially saccharine emphasis throughout the Julie Andrews special, which conceivably could win the year-end television awards because of the star's great popularity, but which was a very minor contribution to any season?

It is a depressing situation for the viewer who watches his favorite entertainers manhandled by the dull, faceless, committee oriented "showmen" of television. The only performers who survive the lack of personal concern toward them by the industry are those who insist on virtual absolute control of what they do—the Fred Astairs, the Frank Sinatras, the Barbra Streisands. The others may pretend—or try—to help them. It is so easy to remedy. All it takes is money, which is all television has.

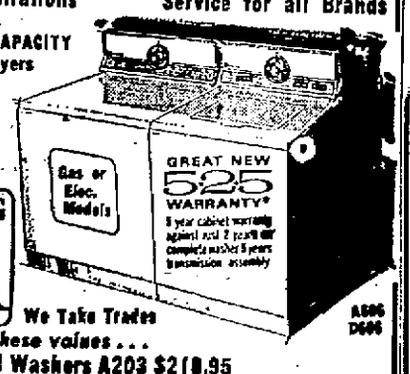
GLENN Ford narrates for "Operation Sea War: Viet Nam" at 10 p. m. in COLOR Thursday on channel 7.

SPECIAL

LET'S GO TO RACES — Premiere. Carl McIntire and Jack Drees are hosts to a new weekly half-hour that combines thoroughbred horse racing from Sunshine Park in Florida, with a game show for home viewers and a supermarket tie-in. Five filmed races are run at 7:30 p.m., in color, ch. 5, with a "purse" potential of $40,000 riding on tonight's program, from racing cards available free at Von's and Shopping Bag markets.

OR GIVE ME DEATH — Ignoring the political ramifications of the Viet Nam conflict, a special color hour at 9:30 p.m., ch. 9, looks instead at the other side of the coin—the many faces of American soldiers in combat. Filmed with U.S. troops in Viet Nam as a kind of Ernie Pyle story told via camera, hour will be repeated Sunday at 6 p.m.



OPERATION SEA WAR: Viet Nam — The unique, multi-faceted role played by the Navy in the Viet Nam conflict, a war unlike any the Navy ever has fought, will be told in a special ABC News documentary, narrated by Commander Glenn Ford (USNR) at 10 p.m., in color, ch. 7 (with repeat slated for Sun., April 3, at 5 p.m.). Filmed in Viet Nam, with real sights and sounds of the ships and men doing the fighting, hour will feature Adm. John Hyland, commander of the 7th Fleet; a Navy nurse in Saigon, a carrier combat pilot who "commutes" to war from the Kitty Hawk, a gunner on a destroyer doing inshore bombardment, and the advisor to the River Assault Group, an assemblage of converted Junks, LCM's and outboard-powered canoes which ply the canals and rivers of the Mekong Delta in search of VC ambushes.

SPECIAL

GOLDEN AGE of Comic Books—Holy Batmania! Everybody's getting into the act. Bud Collyer's planning to do the soundtrack for Superman cartoons, Denny Miller's set to play Captain Marvel, and series on Brenda Starr and the Green Hornet have been sold. So now KMPC's Gary Owens takes an hour's lok at early comic books, at old movie serials based on them, and at their reflection of history, art and science. Joining in the color hour at 8:30 p.m., ch. 13, are Ray Bradbury, who cites early futuristic devices now realities, plus the present king of the comic book collectors.

Why are people who like to watch discussion programs on TV penalized by being deprived of their sleep?

It seems the few stations offering such entertainment regularly follow a rule to schedule them only after 10:30 p.m.

Apparently the reasoning is that young people should not be exposed to the unrehearsed behavior of their elders, and that the often mentioned "average mental age" of 12 years would make too many "adult" shows financially unrewarding.

But I submit that there does exist an adult population, that there even is a segment of intellectually interested people, that most of them work, and that they too need a few hours of sound sleep.

I propose a drive to persuade the TV stations to rearrange the time spots for these discussion shows and start them at 9 p.m.

After all, the children should be all tucked in by then and the rest of the world may enjoy seeing their fellow men in action without props.

Grassroot support for this drive should be coming from many quarters. I hope that my fellow-sufferers will cry out as one if, indeed, after having watched last night's discussion show (which ended at 1 a.m.) and having worked all day, they can be awakened long enough to take action.

Herbert H. Shey, M.D., Seal Beach

Sounds like a prescription that could work.

Please settle an argument. Does Richard Chamberlain (TV's Dr. Kildare) do a TV commercial for Schlitz's beer?

If it isn't him, please tell me the name of the actor.

It's the commercial where the boss says they're going to have a celebration for the new office assistant.

R. Osborn, Garden Grove

The actor's name is Ed Griffith. Dr. Kildare hasn't been promoted recently.

I read that MGM is going to release a new television program called "The Girl From UNCLE" next fall.

Does this mean that the present "Man From UNCLE" show will be replaced?

Alice Sadofsky, Long Beach

No. In fact, if the trend gets any hotter, there's even a possibility of a third series, "The Dog From UNCLE." Rin-Tin-Tin is reading scripts.

My husband and I disagree as to who is the announcer on the Cold soap commercial.

I say it is George Fenneman (announcer on Groucho Marx's program, "You Bet Your Life"). My husband says not.

Anne Coby, Long Beach

Cold soap let's George do it.

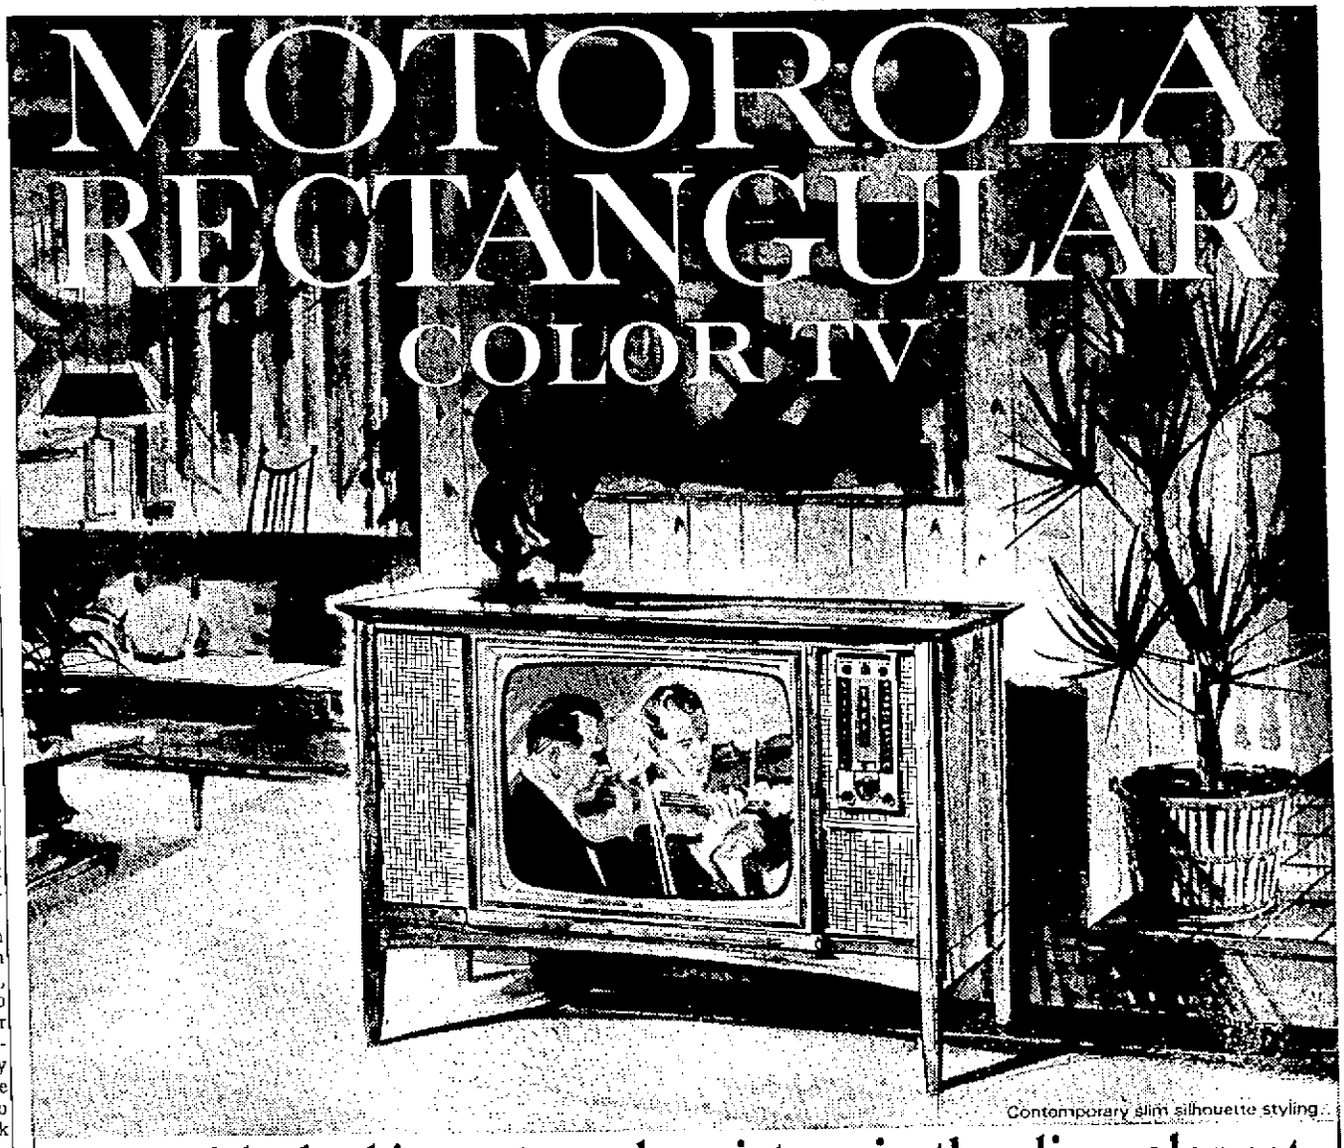
How Many TV Showmen Do You Know?

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Movie buffs can name countless showmen, creative or flamboyant or both, who turn out—or contribute to—the films presented to the public. Federico Fellini. Otto Preminger. Joe Levine. Billy Wilder. The list is endless—and the past was no exception. David O. Selznick. Irving Thalberg. Louis B. Mayer. D. W. Griffith. And so and so on. Even second-raters make a mark.

Today's question: How many television showmen, creative or flamboyant—or anything—can you name?

This thought came to mind during a pondering of the total lack of show business know-how exhibited in some of this television season's specials with big star names. One suddenly realized that nowhere near the top of network television's entertainment structures is there a single, solitary figure to whom one can look up even slightly as a dynamic, creative showman.



And one wonders how an industry like video can spend millions elsewhere, yet overlook an attempt to lure great showmen so their specials will offer something. This was, you may recall, the season that the specials were supposed to compensate for the junk that is seen every week.

* * * *

HOW CAN one explain, for instance, the near total waste of a star like Carol Channing in her recent hour —which was marked by an almost complete lack of understanding of her appeal? Likewise, how can one explain the Gene Kelly hour, which may have moderately satisfied fans like me, but certainly was far short of its potential? How can one explain the essentially saccharine emphasis throughout the Julie Andrews special, which conceivably could win the year-end television awards because of the star's great popularity, but which was a very minor contribution to any season?

It is a depressing situation for the viewer who watches his favorite entertainers manhandled by the dull, faceless, committee oriented "showmen" of television. The only performers who survive the lack of personal concern toward them by the industry are those who insist on virtual absolute control of what they do—the Fred Astairs, the Frank Sinatras, the Barbra Streisands. The others may pretend—or try—to help them. It is so easy to remedy. All it takes is money, which is all television has.

ZIZI Jeanmaire stars in "Ballet for Skeptics" at 7:30 p. m. Friday, channel 4, in COLOR.

SPECIAL

BALLET FOR SKEPTICS—A special program, produced in Paris, offers a series of ballets choreographed and staged by Roland Petit expressly for the TV cameras, to prove that ballet can be fun. Appearing as both host and dancer, Petit is joined at 7:30 p.m., in color, ch. 4, by his wife Zizi Jeanmarie, Claire Motte, Jean Pierre Bonnefous and other leading European dance artists—with costumes by Yves St. Laurent. Comparing ballet to baseball in that you must know the rules to appreciate it, Petit explains and demonstrates the five positions, shows how a ballet is put together, and then presents the completed dances—some classical, such as "Les Demoiselles de la Nuit," and some based on fantasy and humor, such as "Shrimp Cocktail," "Color Television Aspects" and, inspired by a Goya painting of a matador, "La Silla."

LET'S GO TO RACES — Premiere. Carl McIntire and Jack Drees are hosts to a new weekly half-hour that combines thoroughbred horse racing from Sunshine Park in Florida, with a game show for home viewers and a supermarket tie-in. Five filmed races are run at 7:30 p.m., in color, ch. 5, with a "purse" potential of $40,000 riding on tonight's program, from racing cards available free at Von's and Shopping Bag markets.

OR GIVE ME DEATH — Ignoring the political ramifications of the Viet Nam conflict, a special color hour at 9:30 p.m., ch. 9, looks instead at the other side of the coin—the many faces of American soldiers in combat. Filmed with U.S. troops in Viet Nam as a kind of Ernie Pyle story told via camera, hour will be repeated Sunday at 6 p.m.

OPERATION SEA WAR: Viet Nam — The unique, multi-faceted role played by the Navy in the Viet Nam conflict, a war unlike any the Navy ever has fought, will be told in a special ABC News documentary, narrated by Commander Glenn Ford (USNR) at 10 p.m., in color, ch. 7 (with repeat slated for Sun., April 3, at 5 p.m.). Filmed in Viet Nam, with real sights and sounds of the ships and men doing the fighting, hour will feature Adm. John Hyland, commander of the 7th Fleet; a Navy nurse in Saigon, a carrier combat pilot who "commutes" to war from the Kitty Hawk, a gunner on a destroyer doing inshore bombardment, and the advisor to the River Assault Group, an assemblage of converted junks, LCM's and outboard-powered canoes which ply the canals and rivers of the Mekong Delta in search of VC ambushes.

'Rawhide' Actor Eric Fleming Plans to Teach Literature

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Actors like athletes are prone to "retire" a dozen times before age, infirmities or public outrage forces withdrawal from active duty.

There is one performer, however, who's making retirement noises as if he means it.

ERIC FLEMING

He is Eric Fleming of "Rawhide."

The tall, somber star left the series last season—and without him the show bombed this season—to head for Hawaii and the good life. But MGM called him back to star in "The Glass Bottom Boat" with Doris Day.

Now that the picture is completed, Fleming is headed for the islands to try his hand at painting, sculpting and contemplating nature's wonders. But will it last?

* * * *

"ABSOLUTELY," said Fleming.

"I don't want to work anymore. At least, not at acting. I'd like to get a teaching credential from the University of Hawaii after I get out there. I want to teach literature.

"And in addition to sculpting and writing, I want to study oceanography.

"I was never a great actor. I never expected to be. But I was a good technician, a good straight man, especially for comedy. Now I want to move on to other fields."

Fleming is a down-to-earth guy who looks on the frenetic career chase of Hollywood with a mixture of amusement and disdain. He has chosen Hawaii for the easy pace, the languid atmosphere.

"The biggest attraction out there is time," he explained. "There's time to sit down and spend three hours enjoying a meal or to have an uninterrupted conversation for an entire evening. There just isn't enough room in Hollywood to live the kind of life I enjoy.

"You have to hustle just to stay alive in this town—even if you're a beach bum."

Catnip Antidote

Even the tame cats at Africa, U.S.A., where "Daktari" is filmed near Los Angeles for presentation in color on the CBS television network, are not bothered while they eat. If a trainer must enter their cages at mealtime for any reason, the food is removed first.

Here's what makes Good DENTAL PLATES

You'll Never, NEVER pay any Interest or Carrying Charge when you use my Liberal CREDIT PLAN

DR. H. LEO ROWAN
Dentist

The professional training and skill of your dentist — together with the development of more adaptable denture materials — have resulted in important improvements in Modern Dental Plates. Today, this progress of Dental Science makes it possible for your dentist to fit you with dentures that overcome many of the disadvantages of old-fashioned false teeth. Consult your dentist now about any plate problems you may have.

NO CASH DOWN

There's an important difference in credit plans — a difference of dollars. My credit plan is yours absolutely without cost . . . there's not one penny charged for interest, finance charge, carrying charge, or any other credit charge. You don't need any credit card . . . you don't deal with any bank or finance company. On approval of credit, you can get your plates promptly . . . spread the small monthly payments over any reasonable length of time.

UNION DENTAL PROGRAMS

We will be glad to fill out your forms and provide dentures or other dental work under your Union or California Dental Service Plan.

Come in and learn in advance at the Dr. Rowan Dental Office how easily you can afford modern dentures. All dental plates are made in Dr. Rowan's own dental laboratory in his office . . . an efficient service to save you both time and money, and to assure close professional supervision.

DENTAL PLATE SERVICE FOR O.A.S. PENSIONERS

Bring your O.A.S. Identification Card for immediate service for X-rays, plate repairs, emergency work. New plates on approval of the O.A.S. We also provide Dental Care under other County programs (A.T.D., A.P.S.B., A.N.D.).

Why are people who like to watch discussion programs on TV penalized by being deprived of their sleep?

It seems the few stations offering such entertainment regularly follow a rule to schedule them only after 10:30 p.m.

Apparently the reasoning is that young people should not be exposed to the unrehearsed behavior of their elders, and that the often mentioned "average mental age" of 12 years would make too many "adult" shows financially unrewarding.

But I submit that there does exist an adult population, that there even is a segment of intellectually interested people, that most of them work, and that they too need a few hours of sound sleep.

I propose a drive to persuade the TV stations to rearrange the time spots for these discussion shows and start them at 9 p.m.

After all, the children should be all tucked in by then and the rest of the world may enjoy seeing their fellow men in action without props.

Grassroot support for this drive should be coming from many quarters. I hope that my fellow-sufferers will cry out as one if, indeed, after having watched last night's discussion show (which ended at 1 a.m.) and having worked all day, they can be awakened long enough to take action.

Herbert H. Shey, M.D., Seal Beach

Sounds like a prescription that could work.

* * * *

Please settle an argument. Does Richard Chamberlain (TV's Dr. Kildare) do a TV commercial for Schlitz's beer?

If it isn't him, please tell me the name of the actor.

It's the commercial where the boss says they're going to have a celebration for the new office assistant.

R. Osborn, Garden Grove

The actor's name is Ed Griffith. Dr. Kildare hasn't been promoted recently.

* * * *

I read that MGM is going to release a new television program called "The Girl From UNCLE" next fall.

Does this mean that the present "Man From UNCLE" show will be replaced?

Alice Sadofsky, Long Beach

No. In fact, if the trend gets any hotter, there's even a possibility of a third series, "The Dog From UNCLE." Rin-Tin-Tin is reading scripts.

My husband and I disagree as to who is the announcer on the Cold soap commercial.

I say it is George Fenneman (announcer on Groucho Marx's program, "You Bet Your Life"). My husband says not.

Anne Coby, Long Beach

Cold soap let's George do it.

FRED Astaire is host for the "Hollywood Palace" at 9:30 p. m. Saturday, channel 7, in COLOR.

SPECIAL

Both producer-director George Stevens and NBC can claim victory in this screening. Stevens lost his court fight against commercials, but NBC was ordered to insert them in such a way as not to "emasculate" the artistic and pictorial quality or to destroy the mood. The 1951 Paramount movie, based on Theodore Dreiser's "An American Tragedy," screens for 150 minutes including carefully-placed blurbs, at 9 p.m., ch. 4, starring Montgomery Clift, Elizabeth Taylor and Shelley Winters. A man's plans for a comfortable married life with a wealthy girl are upset when a former girl friend demands a father for her unborn child—and an accidental drowning looks like murder to the court.

HOLLYWOOD PALACE—Fred Astaire returns as guest-host of the 9:30 p.m. color hour, ch. 7, and is joined by a bevy of stars including Ethel Merman, Marcel Marceau, Jack Jones, comic Pat Morita, the acrobatic Hardy Family and the three Rogge Sisters with an unusual balancing routine. Miss Merman solos "Some People" from "Gypsy," and joins Astaire in a medley of her hits, while the famed French mime offers "The Lion Tamer" clown dance

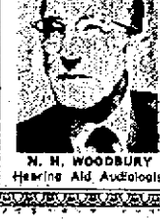
GETTING UP NIGHTS MAKES MANY FEEL OLD BEFORE THEIR TIME

Sufferers Find Quick Help For Kidney & Bladder Irritation & Secondary Backache or Nerve Tension

As we grow older, many men and women suffer from feeling old, tired, worn out and depressed by losing sleep and worrying about getting up nights, due to common irritation of the Kidneys, Bladder and Urinary Tract. This condition, often due to a germ called the colon bacillus, and non-specific germs resulting from colds, bad teeth and minor infections, may cause frequent, urgent and painful urination. These irritations may also cause strong, cloudy urine and sometimes result in secondary backache, headache and nervous tension. Then you should heed the warning from your nerves and try CYSTEX for quick help.

HOW CYSTEX HELPS



New Improved CYSTEX releases a gentle, soothing bacteriostat in acid urine to combat germs which may be causing irritation. This is like a gentle, mildly antiseptic, soothing bath for the Kidneys, Bladder and Urinary Passages. CYSTEX also contains two of the very best known analgesics for soothing, gentle relaxing relief of discomforting pains due to common Kidney and Bladder Irritations.

WORLD WIDE SUCCESS

Formulated by American scientists, CYSTEX has been helping people (in 72 countries) for 40 years to combat the foregoing irritations and thus feel cleansed and refreshed—and because of less nerve tension able to sleep better and feel more vigorous and cheerful. Get CYSTEX from druggist today. See how fast it can help you.

SPECIAL

BALLET FOR SKEPTICS—A special program, produced in Paris, offers a series of ballets choreographed and staged by Roland Petit expressly for the TV cameras, to prove that ballet can be fun. Appearing as both host and dancer, Petit is joined at 7:30 p.m., in color, ch. 4, by his wife Zizi Jeanmarie, Claire Motte, Jean Pierre Bonnefous and other leading European dance artists—with costumes by Yves St. Laurent. Comparing ballet to baseball in that you must know the rules to appreciate it, Petit explains and demonstrates the five positions, shows how a ballet is put together, and then presents the completed dances—some classical, such as "Les Demoiselles de la Nuit," and some based on fantasy and humor, such as "Shrimp Cocktail," "Color Television Aspects" and, inspired by a Goya painting of a matador, "La Silla."

'Rawhide' Actor Eric Fleming Plans to Teach Literature

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Actors like athletes are prone to "retire" a dozen times before age, infirmities or public outrage forces withdrawal from active duty.

There is one performer, however, who's making retirement noises as if he means it.

ERIC FLEMING

He is Eric Fleming of "Rawhide."

The tall, somber star left the series last season—and without him the show bombed this season—to head for Hawaii and the good life. But MGM called him back to star in "The Glass Bottom Boat" with Doris Day.

Now that the picture is completed, Fleming is headed for the islands to try his hand at painting, sculpting and contemplating nature's wonders. But will it last?

* * * *

"ABSOLUTELY," said Fleming.

"I don't want to work anymore. At least, not at acting. I'd like to get a teaching credential from the University of Hawaii after I get out there. I want to teach literature.

"And in addition to sculpting and writing, I want to study oceanography.

"I was never a great actor. I never expected to be. But I was a good technician, a good straight man, especially for comedy. Now I want to move on to other fields."

Fleming is a down-to-earth guy who looks on the frenetic career chase of Hollywood with a mixture of amusement and disdain. He has chosen Hawaii for the easy pace, the languid atmosphere.

"The biggest attraction out there is time," he explained. "There's time to sit down and spend three hours enjoying a meal or to have an uninterrupted conversation for an entire evening. There just isn't enough room in Hollywood to live the kind of life I enjoy.

"You have to hustle just to stay alive in this town—even if you're a beach bum."

Catnip Antidote

Even the tame cats at Africa, U.S.A., where "Daktari" is filmed near Los Angeles for presentation in color on the CBS television network, are not bothered while they eat. If a trainer must enter their cages at mealtime for any reason, the food is removed first.

CURB ASTHMA FOR BETTER SLEEP

At the first sign of wheezing, difficult breathing or coughing from recurring Bronchial Asthma or Bronchitis, aggravated by air contaminated by smoking, smog, dust and pollens, take quick acting MENDACO. It combats allergy, relaxes bronchial tubes, thins and helps remove thick, choking phlegm. This usually eases breathing fast, allays coughing, thus promoting better sleep. Get MENDACO at druggists. Let it help you.

Here's what makes Good DENTAL PLATES

You'll Never, NEVER pay any Interest or Carrying Charge when you use my Liberal CREDIT PLAN

DR. H. LEO ROWAN
Dentist

The professional training and skill of your dentist — together with the development of more adaptable denture materials — have resulted in important improvements in Modern Dental Plates. Today, this progress of Dental Science makes it possible for your dentist to fit you with dentures that overcome many of the disadvantages of old-fashioned false teeth. Consult your dentist now about any plate problems you may have.

NO CASH DOWN

There's an important difference in credit plans — a difference of dollars. My credit plan is yours absolutely without cost . . . there's not one penny charged for interest, finance charge, carrying charge, or any other credit charge. You don't need any credit card . . . you don't deal with any bank or finance company. On approval of credit, you can get your plates promptly . . . spread the small monthly payments over any reasonable length of time.

UNION DENTAL PROGRAMS

We will be glad to fill out your forms and provide dentures or other dental work under your Union or California Dental Service Plan.

Come in and learn in advance at the Dr. Rowan Dental Office how easily you can afford modern dentures. All dental plates are made in Dr. Rowan's own dental laboratory in his office . . . an efficient service to save you both time and money, and to assure close professional supervision.

DENTAL PLATE SERVICE FOR O.A.S. PENSIONERS

Bring your O.A.S. Identification Card for immediate service for X-rays, plate repairs, emergency work. New plates on approval of the O.A.S. We also provide Dental Care under other County programs (A.T.D., A.P.S.B., A.N.D.).

SPECIAL

Both producer-director George Stevens and NBC can claim victory in this screening. Stevens lost his court fight against commercials, but NBC was ordered to insert them in such a way as not to "emasculate" the artistic and pictorial quality or to destroy the mood. The 1951 Paramount movie, based on Theodore Dreiser's "An American Tragedy," screens for 150 minutes including carefully-placed blurbs, at 9 p.m., ch. 4, starring Montgomery Clift, Elizabeth Taylor and Shelley Winters. A man's plans for a comfortable married life with a wealthy girl are upset when a former girl friend demands a father for her unborn child—and an accidental drowning looks like murder to the court.

HOLLYWOOD PALACE—Fred Astaire returns as guest-host of the 9:30 p.m. color hour, ch. 7, and is joined by a bevy of stars including Ethel Merman, Marcel Marceau, Jack Jones, comic Pat Morita, the acrobatic Hardy Family and the three Rogge Sisters with an unusual balancing routine. Miss Merman solos "Some People" from "Gypsy," and joins Astaire in a medley of her hits, while the famed French mime offers "The Lion Tamer" clown dance

Sports Today

N.I.T. BASKETBALL Classic, 11 a.m., ch. 2, has KNX's Tom Kelly and Frank Gifford with a first-round game of the 29th annual invitational tournament, live from Madison Square Garden.

BASEBALL, 1 p.m., in color, ch. 5, finds Buddy Blattner and Don Wells at Palm Springs for a pre-season clash between the California Angels and the Chicago Cubs, first of 10 pre-season and 20 regular season games to be telecast, all in color. (The Dodgers TV schedule, all B&W, has pre-season clashes March 27 and April 7, with 9 regular season telecasts from Candlestick Park.)

GYMNASTICS, 1 p.m., ch. 11, finds Bill Welsh at Pauley Pavilion for a dual meet between USC and UCLA.

CBS GOLF Classic, 3:30 p.m., ch. 2, finds defending champions Bruce Devlin and Bob Charles meeting Dave Marr and Tommy Jacobs.

PRO BOWLERS Tour, 3:30 p.m., ch. 7, has Chris Schenkel and Billy Welu with the finals of the St. Paul Open.

SANTA ANITA Feature Race, 4:30 p.m., ch. 2, winds up its 11-telecast season with the $125,000-invitational San Juan Capistrano Handicap for 3-year-olds.

WONDERFUL WORLD of Golf, 5 p.m., in color, ch. 4, goes to the mountain-ringed Valley Golf Club on the island of Luzon as Dow Finsterwald takes on top Filipino golf pro Ben Arda.

ABC'S WIDE WORLD of Sports, 5 p.m., ch. 7, has tapes of the NCAA track and field championships (Detroit) and the national tourist trophy motorcycle championship (Gardena, Calif.)

NCAA BASKETBALL, 9 p.m., ch. 5, finds Frank Sims at Pauley Pavilion for the championship game in the Western Regional Tournament.

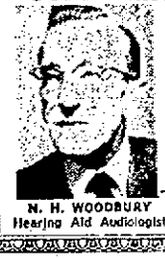
GETTING UP NIGHTS MAKES MANY FEEL OLD BEFORE THEIR TIME

Sufferers Find Quick Help For Kidney & Bladder Irritation & Secondary Backache or Nerve Tension

As we grow older, many men and women suffer from feeling old, tired, worn out and depressed by losing sleep and worrying about getting up nights, due to common irritation of the Kidneys, Bladder and Urinary Tract. This condition, often due to a germ called the colon bacillus, and non-specific germs resulting from colds, bad teeth and minor infections, may cause frequent, urgent and painful urination. These irritations may also cause strong, cloudy urine and sometimes result in secondary backache, headache and nervous tension. Then you should heed the warning from your nerves and try CYSTEX for quick help.

HOW CYSTEX HELPS



New Improved CYSTEX releases a gentle, soothing bacteriostat in acid urine to combat germs which may be causing irritation. This is like a gentle, mildly antiseptic, soothing bath for the Kidneys, Bladder and Urinary Passages. CYSTEX also contains two of the very best known analgesics for soothing, gentle relaxing relief of discomforting pains due to common Kidney and Bladder Irritations.

WORLD WIDE SUCCESS

Formulated by American scientists, CYSTEX has been helping people (in 72 countries) for 40 years to combat the foregoing irritations and thus feel cleansed and refreshed—and because of less nerve tension able to sleep better and feel more vigorous and cheerful. Get CYSTEX from druggist today. See how fast it can help you

THE WILLBANKS' STORY

The Willbanks' Carpet Co. is a departure from the usual carpet specialty shop. It was founded on the premise that quality carpet, backed by expert installation, could be sold at a minimum mark-up in sufficient volume to be profitable. The extension of this premise was to operate without frills and costly fixtures from a low rent and thus low overhead location in a factory warehouse on a side street in Signal Hill. By eliminating high rent and other cost-raising features, the company decided it could afford to pass on to its customers the substantial savings by giving more carpet at less cost.

Dad may claim boys of the "good old days" were angels, but there probably were some flaws.

So's Y'r Old Man!

By Ted Krec

YOUNGSTERS of the world, awake! You are being deluded right in your own homes!

Since I consider myself a friend to all young folk, I'd like to set the record straight.

To hear your Dad tell it, when he was a boy, he was a well-behaved angel who snapped to attention every-time an adult walked down the other side of the street. "We never did the things you kids do when I was a boy!" he will tell you — time and again.

WELL, I'M here to tell you "it just ain't so!" Kids have been kids since the beginning of time. They have always acted like kids. The only thing different was that when your Dad and I were kids we had to run away, nobody could afford automobiles.

IT'S TRUE, we didn't wear "beatle" haircuts, but there were two reasons for this. In the first place, it was an economic necessity to get your hair cut as short as you could, because no one could afford "men's and boys' hair stylists" every week. Secondly, when the tough crowd from the other side of town came over for a battle (we didn't call them "rumbles"), if you had long hair one of the other crowd might get hold of it and hold your head still while he massaged your face with his fist. (Nothing new here, either. I think it was Alexander the Great who made his warriors shave closely so the enemy could not grab them by the beards and decapitate them. See what I mean?)

I hear constant criticism about kids spending all their time watching TV. Well, when your Dad and I were young, we were movie fans. If you could promote a dime, you could go the Saturday matinee. And for that lowly dime saw a newsreel, a cartoon, one or more short subjects, the coming attractions, the feature picture and a cowboy film featuring Buck Jones or Ken Maynard.

AND THE KIDS lived in a dream world then, too. Catch some of those old movies on TV some night and just watch. When Charles Boyer was wooing a pretty young girl, he was always around. He never had to work for a living. I don't know where the money was supposed to come from, but the hero always had plenty.

When Dick Powell would be courting a sweet young thing, he'd just walk down the street and start to sing. And the music was always there!

All you hear about today is the bad things kids do. You don't hear, for example, that out at Memorial Hospital of Long Beach where I work they have an organization called the Volunteers. These are teen-aged boys and girls, 14 to 18, who devote much of their free time giving direct, indirect and special service to sick people. Last year they donated 16,585 service hours, and since the program was started in 1960, they have given 68,000 hours. There are 150 of them, too!

PRESS YOUR Dad about the "good old days." I was there — so I remember them well. We were ingenious.

For years, in rural areas where "outside plumbing" was the order of the day, it

Next Week

Alexander Pope once remarked that "To err is human," and he was so right. Particularly in speech, everyone pulls his share of bloopers and blunders, gaffes and goofs. Like a harried Washington host in greeting the Secretary of the Treasury: "Good evening, Mr. Sandwich, won't you have a Secretary." Writing in next week's Southland, free-lance writer Frank L. Remington relates some prize verbal fumbles, each worth an amused guffaw.

Miracle Coating Eliminates House Painting

An exterior wall coating so tough and durable that it is guaranteed to totally eliminate exterior house painting for over 10 years. This remarkable textured coating is Fiberglass FLEXON.

BEST IN NATION

Homeowners are requested not to spend a single penny on painting their residences until they hear the FLEXON STORY. This remarkable material insulates, waterproofs and beautifies, and every Fiberglass FLEXON job is factory guaranteed for 10 full years against chipping, flaking or peeling.

Fiberglass, a product of Owens-Corning, brings to FLEXON its great strength, its wonderful insulating properties, its resistance to time, weather and chemical attack.

PROVEN OVER MANY YEARS

FLEXON is one of the oldest, tried and true coatings now being marketed and has been applied on thousands of homes and commercial buildings. These buildings have remained in perfect condition after more than 10 years exposure in all types of weather.

SHOT FROM A GUN

FLEXON is applied with heavy duty spray equipment and is actually "shot from a gun" without muss, fuss or odor. FLEXON fuses itself to the wall and fills holes, cracks and covers building defects.

LICENSED and INSURED

THE OLD COWHANDS GO TO EUROPE

It's 'Giddy-Ap' in Tiber Gulch

By Harvey Matofsky

THE European Western, usually referred to as the "Eastern Western," is coming of age. For the first time, major American stars have been called to Europe to make a Hollywood-style Western epic aimed directly at U. S. audiences.

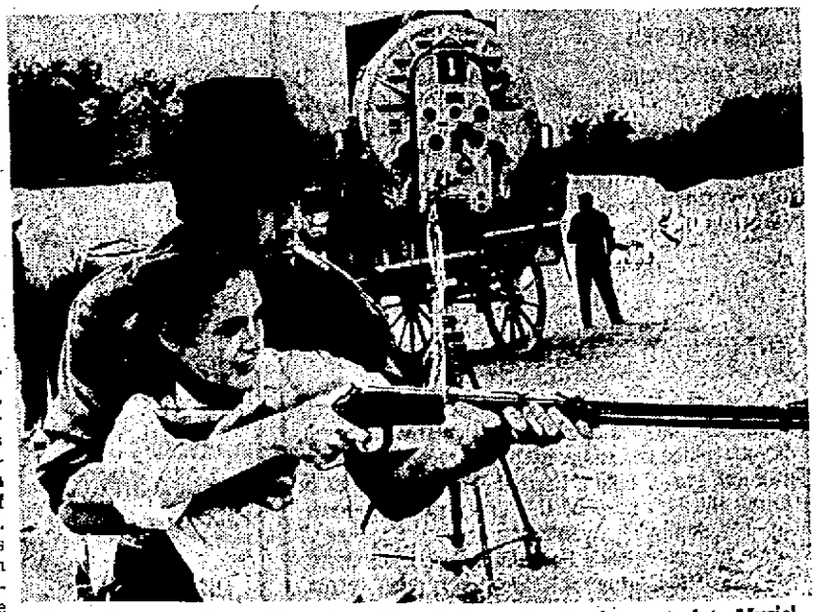
The picture is called "The Tramplers" and it's a long gallop from that first tentative European cowboy picture, "The Treasure of Silver Lake," the pioneer work in the "Eastern Western genre, produced only a few years ago.

"The Tramplers," now being filmed in Italy, stars Western veteran Joseph Cotten ("Duel in the Sun,") Gordon Scott (a one-time Tarzan and hero of countless sword-and-sandal pictures) and James Mitchum, the look-alike son of Robert who has already appeared in 15 films. The cast also includes Italian and French actors.

Producer-director Albert Band, who began as assistant to John Huston, feels the movie could well start a trend toward the making of big and costly Western in Europe. Though the film is budgeted at nearly $1 million, Band says it would cost half again as much in the States. A full-size Texas town has been constructed at the Elios Studios outside Rome; 10,000 cattle are being used for a mammoth cattle drive. Authentic horses, saddles, guns and other Western gear have been used. Band says he is stressing authenticity in the picture to the point of importing real Colt .45's from the U. S. For the cattle drive he is moving the entire troupe to nearby Yugoslavia. "There aren't that many cows in Italy," he explained.

BEHIND THE huge experiment is a very familiar figure—Joseph E. Levine, president of Embassy Pictures. Levine began as a distributor with the "Hercules" type pictures which were once the backbone of the Italian film industry. Since the enormous success last year of an Italian Western called "For a Fistful of Dollars," the costume epics have almost completely vanished and have been replaced by cowboy films. Levine, feeling it was time for a blockbuster that would be acceptable to American Western fans, arranged production of "The Tramplers" for worldwide distribution by his Embassy Pictures.

Rome on the range finds Gordon Scott and Franco Nero in a shoot-'em-up scene from "The Tramplers," a big-time western being filmed in Europe.



Look-alike son of Robert, Jim Mitchum has made grade in films—only 23, he has 15 film credits.

Band has had the difficulties to be expected in such a highly international undertaking. The movie is being shot in English, and he had to hire a diologue coach to teach his non-American actors "Texas lingo." Italian promp men stocked the saloon with Scotch and cognac the first day of shooting and filming was delayed while more authentic bottles of "red-eye" were found.

But for the most part a real Western atmosphere has been created.

In "The Tramplers" Cotten portrays an iron-willed Texas cattle baron who refuses to accept the defeat of the South in the Civil War. He organizes his own private army and declares north Texas off limits to Yankees. His only opposition comes from Scott and Mitchum, as the two youngest of his five sons. The conflict eventually breaks out into open warfare in which most of the family is wiped out as brother coldbloodedly shoots down brother. The story is based on a novel by Will Cook called "Guns of North Texas."

Gun collector and now Hercules with a holster, Scott gives starlet Muriel Franklin a riflery lesson. Scott has traded spear and sandals for saddles.

NEXT WEEK

Alexander Pope once remarked that "To err is human," and he was so right. Particularly in speech, everyone pulls his share of bloopers and blunders, gaffes and goofs. Like a harried Washington host in greeting the Secretary of the Treasury: "Good evening, Mr. Sandwich, won't you have a Secretary." Writing in next week's Southland, free-lance writer Frank L. Remington relates some prize verbal fumbles, each worth an amused guffaw.

What Your Name Means

Send your name to La Reina Rule in care of Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90801, for origin, meaning and brief genealogy, for reply only in this column.

MISS RULE: Would you give brief data on McCRAY — P.M., K.M., Bellflower.

McCRAY descended from the Scotch-Gaelic clan name MacRath. This proud, ancient lineage claims as an ancestor a Highland chieftain called Rath, meaning "lucky one." The clan home was at Kintail in Ross-shire, Scotland. MacRath was Anglicized as MacCray, McCrea, McRae and MacRay by 18th century generations, some of whom migrated to other countries. The McCray armorial shield is silver, crossed by a blue stripe between three red stars and a red lion. Accompanying the shield is the motto "Fortitudine" meaning "Firmness."

MISS RULE: Please explain KLAUSEGGER.—P.R., Long Beach.

KLAUSEGGER began in the Middle Ages in Germany as a dialectical location term for the site of the ancestral home. "Klaus-Egger" was descriptive of "Hermitage-acreage," as well as "Acreage of Nikolaus."

MISS RULE: Kindly inform us on WHITEBREAD. —R.W., Bellflower.

WHITEBREAD of England began in the 13th century as "Wyte-bred," referring to the forefather's skill in baking "white bread" for his fellow villagers. Among ancestors was William Wytebred, recorded in 1273. The Whitebread shield has a black chevron between three red deer heads on a silver background.

MISS RULE: Please give the origin of SOWA.—S.S., Long Beach.

SOWA is a Slavic surname from Poland. Usage of Sowa came from its meaning, "Owl," referring to a vigilant and wise progenitor nicknamed for this silent, watchful bird. In addition, Sowa was adopted from a shop sign for a place trademarked with a pictured sign of an owl.

MISS RULE: Please inform us on ROWLEY, RAWLEY.—P.R., Garden Grove; J.R., Anaheim.

ROWLEY had its inception in old England as "Roelea," delineating the family home at a "roe-deer meadow." RAWLEY began as "Ruh-lea" descriptive of "rough, wild meadow." The Rowley shield is silver, decorated with three gold stars on a diagonal red stripe. For Rawley the shield is red, crossed by a diagonal stripe former of silver diamonds.

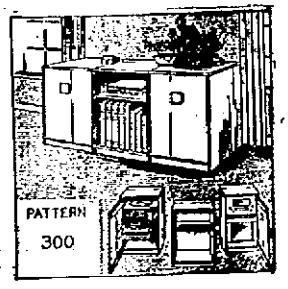
MISS RULE: What have you on WINNE.—M.W., Bellflower.

WINNE traces in medieval Germany to the term "Wini," typifying the ancestor as "friend and protector."

MISS RULE: Please give genealogy on WILL, WILLIS, WILKIE.—E.W., Long Beach; M.D., Garden Grove; A.W., Lakewood.

WILL, derived from the English warrior name William, means "Resolute protector." WILLIS and WILKIE were similar nickname forms. For Willis the shield is silver, decorated with a black chevron between three red stars; for Wilkie the background is silver, emblazoned with three red pineapples and three silver stag heads on a black chevron.

MISS RULE: Kindly inform us on MERCATORIS. —C.M., Downey



MERCATORIS can be Italian, derived from the ancient Latin word "mercatoris" meaning "a wholesale dealer in merchandise." In addition this name commemorates the Flemish-Belgian geographer Gerhard Mercator, 1512-1594, who introduced the world map known as "Mercator's Projection," spreading out the globe on a flat surface for easy study by navigators, geographers and students.

MISS RULE: Kindly analyze FORTNER—E.F., L.F., Long Beach.

FORTNER designated "castle gate-keeper" in 14th century Germany. The Fortner shield is black, centered with a silver swan holding an eel in its beak.

THE OLD COWHANDS GO TO EUROPE

It's 'Giddy-Ap' in Tiber Gulch

By Harvey Matofsky

Rome on the range finds Gordon Scott and Franco Nero in a shoot-'em-up scene from "The Tramplers," a big-time western being filmed in Europe.

THE European Western, usually referred to as the "Eastern Western," is coming of age. For the first time, major American stars have been called to Europe to make a Hollywood-style Western epic aimed directly at U. S. audiences.

The picture is called "The Tramplers" and it's a long gallop from that first tentative European cowboy picture, "The Treasure of Silver Lake," the pioneer work in the "Eastern Western genre, produced only a few years ago.

"The Tramplers," now being filmed in Italy, stars Western veteran Joseph Cotten ("Duel in the Sun,") Gordon Scott (a one-time Tarzan and hero of countless sword-and-sandal pictures) and James Mitchum, the look-alike son of Robert who has already appeared in 15 films. The cast also includes Italian and French actors.

Look-alike son of Robert, Jim Mitchum has made grade in films—only 23, he has 15 film credits.

Producer-director Albert Band, who began as assistant to John Huston, feels the movie could well start a trend toward the making of big and costly Western in Europe. Though the film is budgeted at nearly $1 million, Band says it would cost half again as much in the States. A full-size Texas town has been constructed at the Elios Studios outside Rome; 10,000 cattle are being used for a mammoth cattle drive. Authentic horses, saddles, guns and other Western gear have been used. Band says he is stressing authenticity in the picture to the point of importing real Colt .45's from the U. S. For the cattle drive he is moving the entire troupe to nearby Yugoslavia. "There aren't that many cows in Italy," he explained.

BEHIND THE huge experiment is a very familiar figure—Joseph E. Levine, president of Embassy Pictures. Levine began as a distributor with the "Hercules" type pictures which were once the backbone of the Italian film industry. Since the enormous success last year of an Italian Western called "For a Fistful of Dollars," the costume epics have almost completely vanished and have been replaced by cowboy films. Levine, feeling it was time for a blockbuster that would be acceptable to American Western fans, arranged production of "The Tramplers" for worldwide distribution by his Embassy Pictures.

Band has had the difficulties to be expected in such a highly international undertaking. The movie is being shot in English, and he had to hire a dialogue coach to teach his non-American actors "Texas lingo." Italian promp men stocked the saloon with Scotch and cognac the first day of shooting and filming was delayed while more authentic bottles of "red-eye" were found.

But for the most part a real Western atmosphere has been created.

In "The Tramplers" Cotten portrays an iron-willed Texas cattle baron who refuses to accept the defeat of the South in the Civil War. He organizes his own private army and declares north Texas off limits to Yankees. His only opposition comes from Scott and Mitchum, as the two youngest of his five sons. The conflict eventually breaks out into open warfare in which most of the family is wiped out as brother coldbloodedly shoots down brother. The story is based on a novel by Will Cook called "Guns of North Texas."

Gun collector and now Hercules with a holster, Scott gives starlet Muriel Franklin a riflery lesson. Scott has traded spear and sandals for saddles.

He Chased and Caught a Rainbow

In 1953, David Tallichet had an idea. At the close of 1965, his atmospheric restaurants had grossed him nearly $8 million.

—Glenn Otis Photo

With a hard-headed business approach and a mind as many-phased in imagination as a rainbow has colors, David Tallichet has created a restaurant empire that is still in the growing stage. Photos here show him (top left) with Yankee Whaler chef Wolfgang Goschel (top right) with Millie Vardo, Ports o' Call hostess, and (above) in the cockpit of his bi-wing Stearman airplane.

By JACK O. BALDWIN

ON A TWO-LANE country road 12 miles outside a midwestern small town is a unique restaurant built of splintery railroad ties and weathered trestle timbers. It does a fantastic business.

When David Tallichet saw it he got an idea!

That was back in 1952.

At the close of 1965 his idea grossed nearly $8 million.

Tallichet (rhymes with gourmet) got the idea to create a restaurant, or rather a string of restaurants, serve good food and surround the diners with plenty of atmosphere.

In 1958, while serving as manager of the Lafayette Hotel in Long Beach, the young man with an idea (he was then 35) created the harbor area's first atmospheric restaurant—"The Reef." It follows a Polynesian theme.

THE IMAGINATIVE youthful restaurateur chose a most unlikely location for his first venture. Scoffers said he was "nuts."

He picked a corner of a man-made pier created with dredgings from the ocean bottom in Long Beach Harbor. The filled surface was dotted with broken mussel shells and dried starfish.

Against a backdrop of portable oil drilling rigs, smoking ships' funnels and dockside gantry cranes, Tallichet chose a spot with a picture-window outlook on the growing Long Beach skyline across the white-capped waters of the bay.

In the eight years to follow the sight of Tallichet hustling among the docks and piers of the waterfront would become a common sight—as common as the scene of hundreds of seagulls sunning themselves on the rocks abounding the "Reef."

TODAY AT 43, the energy-filled executive is the president of a corporation (10 times), a husband (once), and a father (thrice). He is tall, slender, handsome and wears shirts with French cuffs bound by modest links. His hair is the shade of salt and pepper mixed in a single shaker—a fleck of gray here and there is a testimonial to worries encountered in creating nine highly successful eating houses.

His slow speech, his habit of lingering on his A's is a clue to his Texas-born heritage. His father "was a fine old gentleman" who traveled throughout Texas as a wholesale food salesman. His mother helped the family finances by teaching piano in their Dallas home. Young Dave helped by contributing money earned as a newspaper carrier boy.

After resigning as the Lafayette's manager in 1959 and three years after the successful opening of the "Reef," Tallichet again brought more atmosphere to the harbor area. This time he chose a most unlikely spot on the San Pedro waterfront. He picked a water's edge location not far from the harbor's rough and tough skid row and opened the "Ports o' Call" restaurant.

LAVISH IN ITS South Sea Island decor, the "Ports o' Call" has been attracting thousands of atmosphere-hungry, meal-hungry diners ever since.

In 1963, still sticking to his idea that people love atmosphere, Tallichet created the unique and picturesque "Ports o' Call Village" adjacent to the waterfront restaurant.

A year later he departed from the South Sea Island theme, turned toward Cape Cod country and came up with the New England styled "Yankee Whaler" restaurant. It, too, is located on the waterfront of the San Pedro main entrance channel.

A year ago Tallichet opened his fourth restaurant in the Los Angeles Harbor—the "Bay of Naples." The establishment is deeply steeped in Italian atmosphere.

BUSY AS HE WAS building atmospheric restaurants the promoter found time to get into the advertising business—towing banners with an airplane.

During WW II, Tallichet was a B17 pilot completing 21 missions over Europe. Today the ex-captain owns and flies his own open cockpit bi-wing Stearman.

"I wished I had more time to fly. Somehow there just doesn't seem to be enough time," bemoans the former Eighth Air Force pilot.

And little wonder.

While the young man with an idea was busy opening five harbor area restaurants he was busy elsewhere, too.

In 1962, he opened the "Castaway" in Burbank, the "Pieces of Eight" in Marina del Rey, and the "Castaway" in Jack London Square in Oakland.

IN THE YEAR just ended he opened two other atmosphere-loaded restaurants: The "Castaway" in San Mateo, and following a Spanish motif, the "Gate of Spain" in Santa Monica.

On the drawing boards are plans for "at least four more."

One will be located in Milwaukee and another high in the hills in Oakland overlooking the San Francisco Bay.

The designer-developer has plans for a Spanish-theme restaurant with banquet facilities for 1,000 to be built at the Los Angeles International Airport. An earphone at each table in the lounge will allow customers to eavesdrop on plane-to-tower conversations.

In Long Beach, Tallichet is awaiting the erection of two more stories to the International Tower—latest cloud scraper on the waterfront skyline.

On top of the 36-story structure Tallichet intends to build a fashionable revolving restaurant similar to that placed atop the Space Needle at Seattle. He expects to complete it by midsummer of '66.

THE HUSTLING executive has some other ideas for the future.

"While patrons may enjoy going to a restaurant with atmosphere they are not likely to come back unless the food is good," contends Tallichet.

"We intend to borrow a leaf from the notebook of other industries. We are going to go into the R&D—Research and Development—of food preparation."

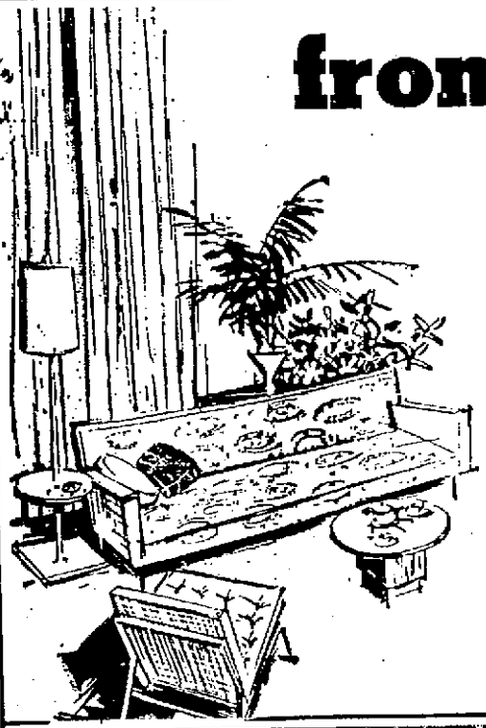
"For instance, what is the best possible way to prepare a good steak? Should it be aged? Marinated? Salted? Unsalted?" he asks. "Should it be seared? Cooked fast or cooked slow?"

PLANNED BY Tallichet and his crew of forward-looking aides is a test kitchen as scientifically controlled as a hospital laboratory. To be investigated are such techniques as how best to bake a potato, how thick to slice a tomato, how long to simmer split-pea soup, and how best to toss a salad—if indeed it should be tossed in the first place.

Tallichet believes in rewarding those for a job well done. He gives them an interest in a restaurant.

To a dream Dave Tallichet added many long hours and a great deal of hard work. He harbors a yearning for the future.

"SOME DAY I'd like to pack my razor, toss in an extra shirt and when you newspaper guys head out for Saigon, Timbuktu, or wherever you go, I'd like to tag along for the fun of it."



Perhaps in Tallichet's "secret dream" is to be found the explanation of why he selected some of the exotic themes around which to build his romantic hideaways.

Running an $8 million-a-year business leaves little time to travel to far-away places—so he has brought them close to home to eliminate the travel time.

For instance, places like "The Bay of Naples," "The Gate of Spain," and other "Ports o' Call."

The man with the dream has succeeded at chasing rainbows where others have failed. He caught one!

Where Bells Toll

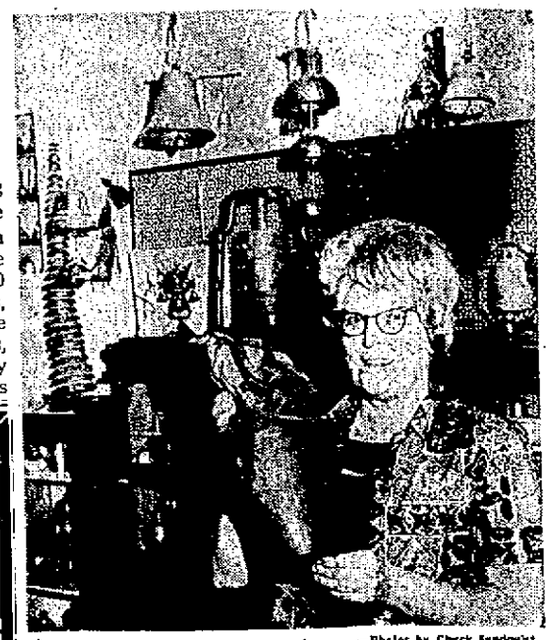
By Helen L. Gillum

IF MR. AND MRS. Fred Baldwin of Bellflower wanted to become professional bell ringers, they probably wouldn't have much trouble accomplishing that desire. This is because their home at 9627 E. Palm Ave. literally "rings to the rafters" with more than 850 bells of all kinds. The bells, both old and new, came from at least 40 countries, and were created in many shapes and sizes of various materials for countless different purposes.

Tiny wind bells that originated in Japan ring melodiously when moved.

With so many bells displayed in antique cabinets and shadow boxes, on display tables and suspended on ropes, cords and frameworks, it is difficult to choose a favorite. But Mrs. Baldwin "starts the bells to ringing" by pointing out a set of three very old tiny Japanese wind bells. "These little bells were our first purchase, about 15 years ago," she says. "From then on, when we went on trips of any kind, instead of buying the usual souvenirs, we just bought bells!" Bells have also come from far and near from friends and relatives who think of the Baldwins in their travels.

ONE BELL in the collection quite different from the sweet-toned wind bells is a huge, cumbersome copper cowbell from Leige, France. It is a rare item, 18 inches high, with heavy leather strap and animal bone for a clapper, which does make a satisfactory, if somewhat dull, sound when rung.



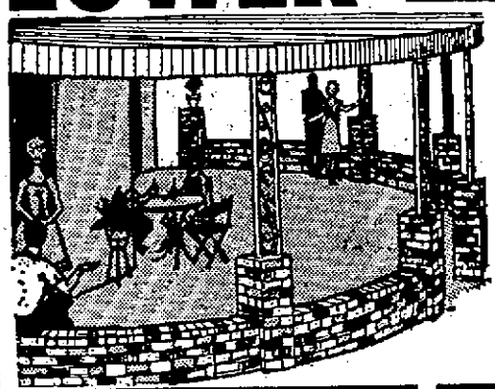
Mrs. Baldwin especially likes elephant bells. She has many of these melodious little bells that for centuries have been draped about the necks, ankles and foreheads of elephants in India on special occasions.

A SOLID CAST brass bell came from the shrine at Lourdes, and a 5-inch brass bell, mounted with acorns and once gold-plated, is from Portugal. Mrs. Baldwin cherishes a 1908 chapel bell from a church in her home town in North Dakota. A commemorative El Camino Real bell, dated 1769-1915, is of historical importance.

Oriental bells include a small two-faced "monkey-god" bell from Burma and a very old Chinese prayer bell, 6 inches high. An 8-inch high Buddhist monk's prayer bell is outstanding with a slender inlaid hardwood handle and a delicately carved lotus blossom on top.

Old Americana is represented by a solid brass doorbell from the late 1800s, mounted on a polished wooden frame. A five-place caster set, 12 inches high, is topped with a "maid's bell." A little three-inch "crinoline lady" table bell from Belgium, whose tiny feet and legs serve as a clapper, is very old. There are also clay "death bells" from Mexico.

As interesting as any item in the complete assortment are several sets of bronze bells which Baldwin created from old bronze water pipes and tuned in harmonious sequence.



—Photos by Chuck Swadowist

Mrs. Fred Baldwin poses with some of 850 bells she and her husband have collected.

MISS RULE: Please explain KLAUSEGGER.—P.R., Long Beach.

KLAUSEGGER began in the Middle Ages in Germany as a dialectical location term for the site of the ancestral home. "Klaus-Egger" was descriptive of "Hermitage-acreage," as well as "Acreage of Nikolaus."

MISS RULE: Kindly inform us on WHITEBREAD. —R.W., Bellflower.

WHITEBREAD of England began in the 13th century as "Wyte-bred," referring to the forefather's skill in baking "white bread" for his fellow villagers. Among ancestors was William Wytebred, recorded in 1273. The Whitebread shield has a black chevron between three red deer heads on a silver background.

MISS RULE: Please give the origin of SOWA.—S.S., Long Beach.

SOWA is a Slavic surname from Poland. Usage of Sowa came from its meaning, "Owl," referring to a vigilant and wise progenitor nicknamed for this silent, watchful bird. In addition, Sowa was adopted from a shop sign for a place trademarked with a pictured sign of an owl.

MISS RULE: Please inform us on ROWLEY, RAWLEY.—P.R., Garden Grove; J.R., Anaheim.

ROWLEY had its inception in old England as "Roelea," delineating the family home at a "roe-deer meadow." RAWLEY began as "Ruh-lea" descriptive of "rough, wild meadow." The Rowley shield is silver, decorated with three gold stars on a diagonal red stripe. For Rawley the shield is red, crossed by a diagonal stripe former of silver diamonds.

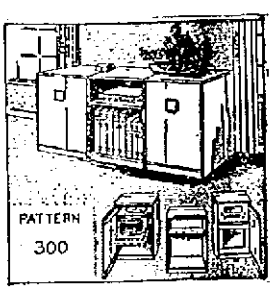
MISS RULE: What have you on WINNE.—M.W., Bellflower.

WINNE traces in medieval Germany to the term "Wini," typifying the ancestor as "friend and protector."

MISS RULE: Please give geneology on WILL, WILLIS, WILKIE.—E.W., Long Beach; M.D., Garden Grove; A.W., Lakewood.

WILL, derived from the English warrior name William, means "Resolute protector." WILLIS and WILKIE were similar nickname forms. For Willis the shield is silver, decorated with a black chevron between three red stars; for Wilkie the background is silver, emblazoned with three red pineapples and three silver stag heads on a black chevron.

MISS RULE: Kindly inform us on MERCATORIS. —C.M., Downey



MERCATORIS can be Italian, derived from the ancient Latin word "mercatoris" meaning "a wholesale dealer in merchandise." In addition this name commemorates the Flemish-Belgian geographer Gerhard Mercator, 1512-1594, who introduced the world map known as "Mercator's Projection," spreading out the globe on a flat surface for easy study by navigators, geographers and students.

MISS RULE: Kindly analyze FORTNER—E.F., L.F., Long Beach.

FORTNER designated "castle gate-keeper" in 14th century Germany. The Fortner shield is black, centered with a silver swan holding an eel in its beak.

Long Beach in the early 20th century

A Great Place for Tom Sawyers

By ROBERTA NICHOLS

LONG BEACH was a great place to grow up in during those years when the world was taking its first tentative steps into the 20th century. The small beach town had everything necessary to produce a couple of latter-day Tom Sawyers. And it did, Edward (Snow) Buckwalter and A. Victor (Vic) Davies.

They don't remember exactly where they met. But it could have been on the beach, with the 6-year-olds circling one another warily, deciding whether to fight, go adventuring together or do both. It was the beginning of a long friendship. Now, some 60 years later, they live side by side in neat bungalows in a neighborhood that was mostly small ranches at the beginning of the century.

Vic was born near the present city hall and never lived more than a few blocks away until his father, the first city marshal and tax collector, bought a large lot at Ninth Street and Pine Avenue—the better to feed a hungry family. There were chickens, a cow and a goat. The goat ended on the dinner table after munching its way down a clothesline full of Mrs. Davies' fine laces. She was British, and the laces were treasures from the homeland. Only she was able to attack the roast goat with relish. Everyone else wept.

A eucalyptus grove covered an area roughly between Tenth and Anaheim Streets (the city limits) and from Pacific Avenue on several blocks east. Coyotes came out to make forays against the chickens, and Vic remembers that his dad killed one at Tenth Street and Pine Avenue.

An event which always pulled kids out of the schoolroom like a magnet was the periodic sight of some 5,000 sheep being driven down Anaheim from Palos Verdes Hills to Fred Bixby's Rancho Los Alamitos. The late Richard Bixby, grandson of Jotham Bixby, remembered helping with the drives. If a pretty girl was watching, the teen-ager might cut an animal out of the herd and run it down Pine Avenue amid whooping and yelling.

As for Vic Davies, his real base of operations was the west beach, with its swimming, sailing, body surfing, clamming.

"You didn't need surfboards to ride the breakers," he says. "I've seen times when a good body surfer could pick up a breaker a quarter-mile out and ride it to the sand."

It was as if the beach had been created for boys with little spending money but much energy. Their bathhouse was behind any large sand dune. When they were hungry, there were the cactus apples that covered the dunes. They needed only to be rolled in straw or a gunny sack to break off the stickers.

The beach helped to reinforce Buckwalter's nickname of "Snow." He was tow headed, with skin so fair that he blistered unless he kept clothed until the moment before plunging into the surf. It was inconvenient, but not the end of the world for a small boy with sturdy legs, curiosity and an unbelievable appetite. His world extended from Dead Man's Island on the west (with a stop-over at a lobster boiling plant near Brighton Beach to scoop up and chew on lobster tidbits when no one was watching) to Alamitos Bay on the east and on to "ole" Fred Bixby's ranch with its convenient apple orchard and watermelon patch. The northern boundary was just beyond the violet and wildflower carpeted far side of Signal Hill. On the section now known as Reservoir Hill, boys tobogganed on tin cans down the slope of the dried mustard and weeds. To the north were berry farms and more watermelons. In between was great country for hunting.

There wasn't an inch of the country that Snow hadn't investigated on foot since that February in 1900 when his father got off the train at Broadway near the east corner of the park with two boys in tow. The 4-year-old was Snow. They stayed several days at the Darby House, which occupied the site of the present Edison Building on Long Beach Boulevard, until the elder Buckwalter decided that a booming town of 2,252 could support another house painter. When Mrs. Buckwalter and the baby arrived from the East, the boys were suffering from severe sunburns and "the old man really got it" for his negligence.

Buckwalter built a house at Esperanza Avenue and First Street, one of the first east of California Avenue. They moved several times but never into the city. The city extended its boundaries to them.

Every day was an adventure in those days of the house on Esperanza. From California east the bluffs rose higher and were filled with holes in which swallows built nests. The boys climbed the bluff using the holes for foot and hand holds and gathered eggs for their collections. During the precarious descent, they held the eggs in their mouths.

Devil's Gate was farther east, where Belmont Pier is. A sand spit extended out a way and terminated in a mound of earth that looked like an old-fashioned chocolate drop. At low tide the boys could walk around it. At high tide they sometimes tried to swim a horse and buggy around it. Often the buggy turned over and somebody heard from his "old man."

There were small beach clams that the boys shoveled into a colander, rinsed and peddled for 10 cents a quart. And the pismo clams! Vic says the clam beds were ruined by people who came in with plows and turned up the clams. "Remember those people gathering them by the gunny sack full?" he asked Snow recently.

Sheepishly: "Yah. I followed the plow." At the age of 5 Snow did follow the plow, piling up clams in return for enough to take home to his mother for a chowder.

When Snow was big enough to shoulder a shotgun, the Bixby and Alamitos Gun Clubs claimed much of his time. The dividing line was Stearns Street, a safe "no man's land" to which he could retreat when pursued by a gamekeeper from either club. With ducks thick as flies it seemed ridiculous that the club members got so upset, he recalls. But perhaps the greatest thrill came when Snow became the personal cottontail-purveyor to Jim Jeffries, the retired world's champion heavyweight boxer.

Jeffries lived in Los Angeles and came to the Alamitos Gun Club on weekends. The gamekeeper picked up club members at the Pacific Electric station on Anaheim Street at Obispo Avnue in what was then called Zafferia and took them in a tallyho to the clubhouse south of Atherton Street.

"On Saturday around 1908," Snow relates, "I was sitting under a eucalyptus tree by the road, tired out from covering four or five miles and lugging 14 rabbits. Along came these fellows in the tallyho and one of them asked would I sell some rabbits. I said 'sure' and he took six. Two for a quarter. Why, with shotgun shells

He Chased and Caught a Rainbow

In 1953, David Tallichet had an idea. At the close of 1965, his atmospheric restaurants had grossed him nearly $8 million.

By JACK O. BALDWIN

ON A TWO-LANE country road 12 miles outside a midwestern small town is a unique restaurant built of splintery railroad ties and weathered trestle timbers. It does a fantastic business.

When David Tallichet saw it he got an idea!

That was back in 1952.

At the close of 1965 his idea grossed nearly $8 million.

Tallichet (rhymes with gourmet) got the idea to create a restaurant, or rather a string of restaurants, serve good food and surround the diners with plenty of atmosphere.

In 1958, while serving as manager of the Lafayette Hotel in Long Beach, the young man with an idea (he was then 35) created the harbor area's first atmospheric restaurant—"The Reef." It follows a Polynesian theme.

THE IMAGINATIVE youthful restaurateur chose a most unlikely location for his first venture. Scoffers said he was "nuts."

He picked a corner of a man-made pier created with dredgings from the ocean bottom in Long Beach Harbor. The filled surface was dotted with broken mussel shells and dried starfish.

Against a backdrop of portable oil drilling rigs, smoking ships' funnels and dockside gantry cranes, Tallichet chose a spot with a picture-window outlook on the growing Long Beach skyline across the white-capped waters of the bay.

In the eight years to follow the sight of Tallichet hustling among the docks and piers of the waterfront would become a common sight—as common as the scene of hundreds of seagulls sunning themselves on the rocks abounding the "Reef."

TODAY AT 43, the energy-filled executive is the president of a corporation (10 times), a husband (once), and a father (thrice). He is tall, slender, handsome and wears shirts with French cuffs bound by modest links. His hair is the shade of salt and pepper mixed in a single shaker—a fleck of gray here and there is a testimonial to worries encountered in creating nine highly successful eating houses.

His slow speech, his habit of lingering on his A's is a clue to his Texas-born heritage. His father "was a fine old gentleman" who traveled throughout Texas as a wholesale food salesman. His mother helped the family finances by teaching piano in their Dallas home. Young Dave helped by contributing money earned as a newspaper carrier boy.

After resigning as the Lafayette's manager in 1959 and three years after the successful opening of the "Reef," Tallichet again brought more atmosphere to the harbor area. This time he chose a most unlikely spot on the San Pedro waterfront. He picked a water's edge location not far from the harbor's rough and tough skid row and opened the "Ports o' Call" restaurant.

LAVISH IN ITS South Sea Island decor, the "Ports o' Call" has been attracting thousands of atmosphere-hungry, meal-hungry diners ever since.

In 1963, still sticking to his idea that people love atmosphere, Tallichet created the unique and picturesque "Ports o' Call Village" adjacent to the waterfront restaurant.

A year later he departed from the South Sea Island theme, turned toward Cape Cod country and came up with the New England styled "Yankee Whaler" restaurant. It, too, is located on the waterfront of the San Pedro main entrance channel.

A year ago Tallichet opened his fourth restaurant in the Los Angeles Harbor—the "Bay of Naples." The establishment is deeply steeped in Italian atmosphere.

BUSY AS HE WAS building atmospheric restaurants the promoter found time to get into the advertising business—towing banners with an airplane.

During WW II, Tallichet was a B17 pilot completing 21 missions over Europe. Today the ex-captain owns and flies his own open cockpit bi-wing Stearman.

"I wished I had more time to fly. Somehow there just doesn't seem to be enough time," bemoans the former Eighth Air Force pilot.

And little wonder.

While the young man with an idea was busy opening five harbor area restaurants he was busy elsewhere, too.

In 1962, he opened the "Castaway" in Burbank, the "Pieces of Eight" in Marina del Rey, and the "Castaway" in Jack London Square in Oakland.

IN THE YEAR just ended he opened two other atmosphere-loaded restaurants: The "Castaway" in San Mateo, and following a Spanish motif, the "Gate of Spain" in Santa Monica.

On the drawing boards are plans for "at least four more."

One will be located in Milwaukee and another high in the hills in Oakland overlooking the San Francisco Bay.

The designer-developer has plans for a Spanish-theme restaurant with banquet facilities for 1,000 to be built at the Los Angeles International Airport. An earphone at each table in the lounge will allow customers to eavesdrop on plane-to-tower conversations.

In Long Beach, Tallichet is awaiting the erection of two more stories to the International Tower—latest cloud scraper on the waterfront skyline.

On top of the 36-story structure Tallichet intends to build a fashionable revolving restaurant similar to that placed atop the Space Needle at Seattle. He expects to complete it by midsummer of '66.

THE HUSTLING executive has some other ideas for the future.

"While patrons may enjoy going to a restaurant with atmosphere they are not likely to come back unless the food is good," contends Tallichet.

"We intend to borrow a leaf from the notebook of other industries. We are going to go into the R&D—Research and Development—of food preparation."

"For instance, what is the best possible way to prepare a good steak? Should it be aged? Marinated? Salted? Unsalted?" he asks. "Should it be seared? Cooked fast or cooked slow?"

PLANNED BY Tallichet and his crew of forward-looking aides is a test kitchen as scientifically controlled as a hospital laboratory. To be investigated are such techniques as how best to bake a potato, how thick to slice a tomato, how long to simmer split-pea soup, and how best to toss a salad—if indeed it should be tossed in the first place.

—Glenn Otto Photo

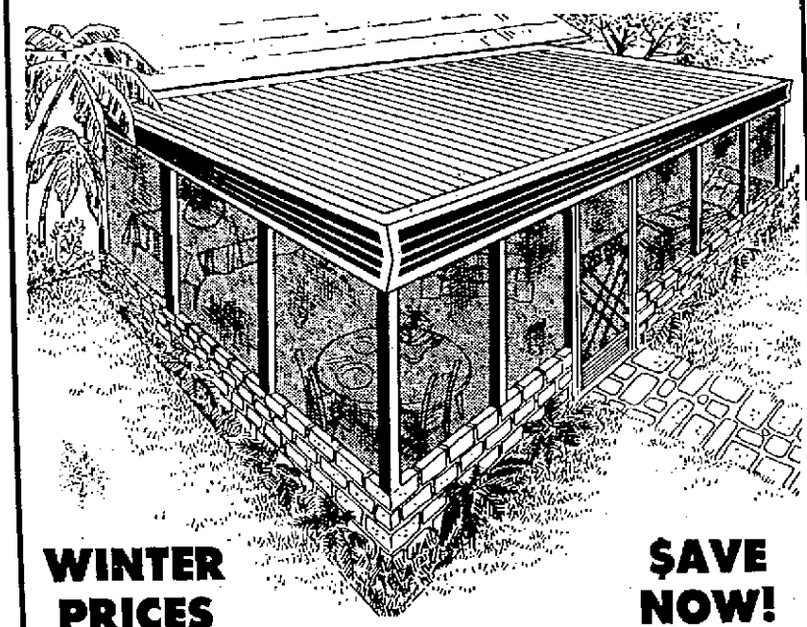
With a hard-headed business approach and a mind as many-phased in imagination as a rainbow has colors, David Tallichet has created a restaurant empire that is still in the growing stage. Photos here show him (top left) with Yankee Whaler chef Wolfgang Goschel (top right) with Millie Vardo, Ports o' Call hostess, and (above) in the cockpit of his bi-wing Stearman airplane.

Tallichet believes in rewarding those for a job well done. He gives them an interest in a restaurant.

To a dream Dave Tallichet added many long hours and a great deal of hard work. He harbors a yearning for the future.

"SOME DAY I'd like to pack my razor, toss in an extra shirt and when you newspaper guys head out for Saigon, Timbuktu, or wherever you go, I'd like to tag along for the fun of it."

Perhaps in Tallichet's "secret dream" is to be found the explanation of why he selected some of the exotic themes around which to build his romantic hideaways.



Running an $8 million-a-year business leaves little time to travel to far-away places—so he has brought them close to home to eliminate the travel time.

For instance, places like "The Bay of Naples," "The Gate of Spain," and other "Ports o' Call."

The man with the dream has succeeded at chasing rainbows where others have failed. He caught one!

BACKSTAGE WITH FRED WARING

Magician With Music

By Tony Buttitta

"THE MAGIC Music of Fred Waring," the big musical show coming to Long Beach Municipal Auditorium on Thursday evening, was four months in the making. Starring the famed Pennsylvanians, it was conceived and produced by Waring at his home base, Shawnee - on - Delaware, in the Pocono Mountains of his native state.

The backstage period of preparing a Waring musical is from early summer till fall when the company of 40 sets out on its national tour. It includes all preliminary phases of the show from tryouts of new material, auditions of talent, to the designing of drops and costumes, planning the intricate lighting and sound effects, and the choreographing of a smooth running presentation.

"I start by selecting the show's musical content, which is, after all, the backbone of our production," says Waring. "I choose the music, be it old favorites, chorales, folksongs, pop tunes, or the latest novelty ditties that we find exciting and entertaining to our audiences. By summer's end, we've so much material, the job's to choose the best and arrange it into a balanced show."

TALENTED youngsters audition and then perform with seasoned Pennsylvanians during the summer at Shawnee Inn, a 600-acre resort that caters to visitors who enjoy a blend of golf and musical entertainment. In the famous Cartoon Room at the Inn, where the tables are decorated by the nation's top cartoonists who annually meet there, these performers try out their material before a live audience, with Waring as commentator and off-beat master of ceremonies.

Then Waring retires to his office and goes over the talent and material. After choosing what he will feature in the show, he weaves it into a musical sequence that combines the pace, variety and contrast of both elements.

Now that the talent and material are set, the Pennsylvanians move into the Waring Choral Workshop which has developed thousands of singers and directors since its inception. The group undergoes intensive rehearsals throughout September; first the musicians, soloists, and singers separately; later together they rehearse the overall production.

FINAL REHEARSALS include quick-change drills in portable dressing rooms, which are out of sight behind the bandstand. With the elaborate costume changes that occur in the production numbers, many Pennsylvanians have less than two minutes to slip from a sports dress into a ballroom gown. These changes take place while a soloist has the spotlight on the stage.

Two large vehicles arrive at Shawnee early in October to take the big show and the Pennsylvanians over thousands of miles during the eight-month tour. A van is packed with the music library, instruments, lighting and sound equipment, costumes, dressing rooms, and other props. A passenger bus takes aboard Fred Waring and the Pennsylvanians, as a horn is blown to announce another national tour of this renowned musical organization is on its way.

Despite this meticulous preparation Waring refuses to announce his program before show time. He insists that doing so inhibits the spontaneity of his presentation which he likes to keep tuned to the taste of his individual audiences. It's the audience that decides what goes into an evening's entertainment. Yet his show always begins with strains of "Sleepy," his theme song for almost a half century, and closes with the audience joining in to sing "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Where Bells Toll

By Helen L. Gillum

IF MR. AND MRS. Fred Baldwin of Bellflower wanted to become professional bell ringers, they probably wouldn't have much trouble accomplishing that desire. This is because their home at 9627 E. Palm Ave. literally "rings to the rafters" with more than 850 bells of all kinds. The bells, both old and new, came from at least 40 countries, and were created in many shapes and sizes of various materials for countless different purposes.

Tiny wind bells that originated in Japan ring melodiously when moved.

With so many bells displayed in antique cabinets and shadow boxes, on display tables and suspended on ropes, cords and frameworks, it is difficult to choose a favorite. But Mrs. Baldwin "starts the bells to ringing" by pointing out a set of three very old tiny Japanese wind bells. "These little bells were our first purchase, about 15 years ago," she says. "From then on, when we went on trips of any kind, instead of buying the usual souvenirs, we just bought bells!" Bells have also come from far and near from friends and relatives who think of the Baldwins in their travels.

ONE BELL in the collection quite different from the sweet-toned wind bells is a huge, cumbersome copper cowbell from Leige, France. It is a rare item, 18 inches high, with heavy leather strap and animal bone for a clapper, which does make a satisfactory, if somewhat dull, sound when rung.

Mrs. Baldwin especially likes elephant bells. She has many of these melodious little bells that for centuries have been draped about the necks, ankles and foreheads of elephants in India on special occasions.

A SOLID CAST brass bell came from the shrine at Lourdes, and a 5-inch brass bell, mounted with acorns and once gold-plated, is from Portugal. Mrs. Baldwin cherishes a 1908 chapel bell from a church in her home town in North Dakota. A commemorative El Camino Real bell, dated 1769-1915, is of historical importance.

Oriental bells include a small two-faced "monkey-god" bell from Burma and a very old Chinese prayer bell, 5 inches high. An 8-inch high Buddhist monk's prayer bell is outstanding with a slender inlaid hardwood handle and a delicately carved lotus blossom on top.

Old Americana is represented by a solid brass doorbell from the late 1800s, mounted on a polished wooden frame. A five-place caster set, 12 inches high, is topped with a "maid's bell." A little three-inch "crinoline lady" table bell from Belgium, whose tiny feet and legs serve as a clapper, is very old. There are also clay "death bells" from Mexico.

As interesting as any item in the complete assortment are several sets of bronze bells which Baldwin created from old bronze water pipes and tuned in harmonious sequence.

First Ladies of the 18th and 19th centuries set the social pattern for a new nation.

By OLIVE BREED

Abigail Smith Adams patterned White House social life after that of Martha Washington.

Sarah Childress Polk was the first college-trained wife to preside over the White House.

Eliza McArdle Johnson—teen marriage to the White House.

Lucy Webb Hayes—a college graduate and a WCTU worker.

Abigail Powers Fillmore—taught presidential husband.

RECALLING First Ladies, the 18th century has exclusive claim to only one, Martha Washington, who drew from her own aristocratic background and her knowledge of European court life to set the social pattern for a new nation.

The first Executive Mansion in New York was a brick structure, three stories high and five windows wide. Offices were on the first floor, living quarters on the second, and rooms for servants and secretaries on the third, according to one history. Martha found this house too small, and within the year they moved to a larger one, rental $1,000 per annum. In December 1790, the capital was transferred to Philadelphia, where the Robert Morris home, largest in the city, was turned over to them.

Martha established her weekly social pattern with, first, a Tuesday afternoon reception for men, when ambassadors, friends, officials, strangers might pay their respects to the President. Washington in formal dress, sword, white gloves and all, did not offer his hand, and guests were not invited to sit.

Weekly formal dinners were served at 4 p. m. Thursday, on the instant, and at 9 p. m. Martha met her responsibility for keeping hours by rising to say, "The General always retires at 9," and there was nothing for guests to do but go.

THE WEEK was climaxed with Martha's own Friday night reception.

Including Agibail Adams, who as First Lady saw the 19th century in, and Ida McKinley, who as First Lady saw it out, that century saw but 17 presidential wives in the White House, although there were 23 Presidents. Four were widowers, one a bachelor, and one wife never reached Washington.

Abigail Smith Adams, second First Lady, was the first White House mistress, the only one to be wife of one President and the mother of another. Educated beyond her time, she was brilliant, interested in government, felt she should have the vote and slaves should be freed. She admired Martha Washington, and patterned the White House entertaining after Martha's, tried in every way to carry on as they were begun.

Martha Wayles Jefferson died many years before, and Thomas Jefferson was the first White House widower. Vice President Aaron Burr was also a widower, and the wife of the Secretary of State, Dolley Madison, and Jefferson's daughters acted as hostesses.

DOLLEY MADISON'S image is one of charm, fashion, endless party giving, even in the face of war and other disaster. "When things are worst," she said, "is when people most need a few happy moments." During the War of 1812, especially in the burning of the White House in 1814, she showed great courage. She was last to leave the building, and rescued the most valuable records and documents. On the lighter side, she started the custom of Easter egg rolling on the grounds.

For the first time since its burning in 1814, Eliza Kortwright Monroe and President Monroe opened the rebuilt White House to the public New Year's Day 1818, from noon to 3 p. m., with diplomats and other foreign representatives formally received a half hour earlier.

Only White House mistress to be daughter-in-law of one President and wife of another, Louisa Catherine Adams had not seen America until four years after her marriage to John Quincy Adams. Her father had represented the new nation in England and France during her entire life before that.

Rachel Donelson Jackson died six weeks before the inauguration of Andrew Jackson as the second widower President. Her niece, Emily Donelson, was official hostess.

MARTIN VAN BUREN, third widower President, had been minister to England, and his four sons were said to be favorites of Queen Victoria. The oldest son, Abraham, married Angelica Singleton, cousin of Dolley Madison, and the White House had a hostess.

Anna Symmes Harrison, wife of one and grandmother of another President, did not reach the White House during the one month of Gen. Harrison's term.

Letitia Tyler, first invalid White House mistress, was the first to die there. Before the end of his term, President Tyler was first to marry while in office, to Julia Gardiner, 30 years his junior, a great beauty and hero worshiper of the President. Among others, she originated the custom of announcing the Chief Executive with "Hail to the Chief," played by the Marine Band.

Sarah Childress Polk, first college-trained White House mistress, was the only one to become confidential secretary to a President. She banished liquor, cards and dancing at all social functions.

Margaret Smith Taylor, an invalid, remained upstairs while her daughter, Betty Bliss, acted as hostess during Zachary Taylor's 16 months as President. She did not live through the four years for which he had been elected.

ABIGAIL POWERS Fillmore was the teacher in whose school room Millard Fillmore's total formal instruction took place. As First Lady, she found no books in the White House, and established the library that has grown through the years, favoring many writers of that day who visited there. The Fillmores scandalized the kitchen help by installing the first cookstove. The first bath tub was another improvement.

Jane Appleton Pierce, in mourning for her 11-year-old son, delegated hostess duties to her aunt, Abby Means. Theirs was the third consecutive administration to forbid serving liquor.

James Buchanan, a bachelor President, had his niece, Harriet Lane, as hostess. Her tact in the growing tension between North and South was notable, beginning her receptions with "Dixie" and ending with "Yankee Doodle" played by the Marine Band. That was a minor touch, but in line with her ability to keep both sides placated.

Mary Todd Lincoln is one of the better known First Ladies, probably because she faced more intolerable pressure and tragedy than others. With all the pressure and weariness, it was necessary to meet and entertain military and other important people, and she gave many receptions for them.

A TEACHER at age 16, Eliza McArdle began helping Andrew Johnson, a young tailor supporting his mother, with his learning to read. A year later there was a teenage marriage, certainly one of the success stories of history. As Andrew worked at his trade, Eliza read to him newspapers, speeches, history, and Andrew began the rise to his election as vice president. Eliza was 58 and an invalid when they reached the White House, but her daughter, Martha Patterson, undertook to put the neglected mansion in a shiny, orderly condition. She was a remarkable housekeeper and hostess, the only one to cover the rugs with muslin for the crowded receptions.

Long Beach in the early 20th century

Devil's Gate (top photo), where Belmont Pier now stands, was a familiar spot to two Long Beach long-time residents, Snow Buckwalter (left above) and Vic Davies. They remain fast friends and neighbors and enjoy recalling Tom Sawyer life in early Long Beach. At left (top) Davies as a school boy and Buckwalter as a tow-headed new boy in town.

By ROBERTA NICHOLS

LONG BEACH was a great place to grow up in during those years when the world was taking its first tentative steps into the 20th century. The small beach town had everything necessary to produce a couple of latter-day Tom Sawyers. And it did, Edward (Snow) Buckwalter and A. Victor (Vic) Davies.

They don't remember exactly where they met. But it could have been on the beach, with the 6-year-olds circling one another warily, deciding whether to fight, go adventuring together or do both. It was the beginning of a long friendship. Now, some 60 years later, they live side by side in neat bungalows in a neighborhood that was mostly small ranches at the beginning of the century.

Vic was born near the present city hall and never lived more than a few blocks away until his father, the first city marshal and tax collector, bought a large lot at Ninth Street and Pine Avenue—the better to feed a hungry family. There were chickens, a cow and a goat. The goat ended on the dinner table after munching its way down a clothesline full of Mrs. Davies' fine laces. She was British, and the laces were treasures from the homeland. Only she was able to attack the roast goat with relish. Everyone else wept.

A eucalyptus grove covered an area roughly between Tenth and Anaheim Streets (the city limits) and from Pacific Avenue on several blocks east. Coyotes came out to make forays against the chickens, and Vic remembers that his dad killed one at Tenth Street and Pine Avenue.

An event which always pulled kids out of the schoolroom like a magnet was the periodic sight of some 5,000 sheep being driven down Anaheim from Palos Verdes Hills to Fred Bixby's Rancho Los Alamitos. The late Richard Bixby, grandson of Jotham Bixby, remembered helping with the drives. If a pretty girl was watching, the teen-ager might cut an animal out of the herd and run it down Pine Avenue amid whooping and yelling.

As for Vic Davies, his real base of operations was the west beach, with its swimming, sailing, body surfing, clamming.

"You didn't need surfboards to ride the breakers," he says. "I've seen times when a good body surfer could pick up a breaker a quarter-mile out and ride it to the sand."

It was as if the beach had been created for boys with little spending money but much energy. Their bathhouse was behind any large sand dune. When they were hungry, there were the cactus apples that covered the dunes. They needed only to be rolled in straw or a gunny sack to break off the stickers.

The beach helped to reinforce Buckwalter's nickname of "Snow." He was tow headed, with skin so fair that he blistered unless he kept clothed until the moment before plunging into the surf. It was inconvenient, but not the end of the world for a small boy with sturdy legs, curiosity and an unbelievable appetite. His world extended from Dead Man's Island on the west (with a stop-over at a lobster boiling plant near Brighton Beach to scoop up and chew on lobster tidbits when no one was watching) to Alamitos Bay on the east and on to "ole" Fred Bixby's ranch with its convenient apple orchard and watermelon patch. The northern boundary was just beyond the violet and wildflower carpeted far side of Signal Hill. On the section now known as Reservoir Hill, boys tobogganed on tin cans down the slope of the dried mustard and weeds. To the north were berry farms and more watermelons. In between was great country for hunting.

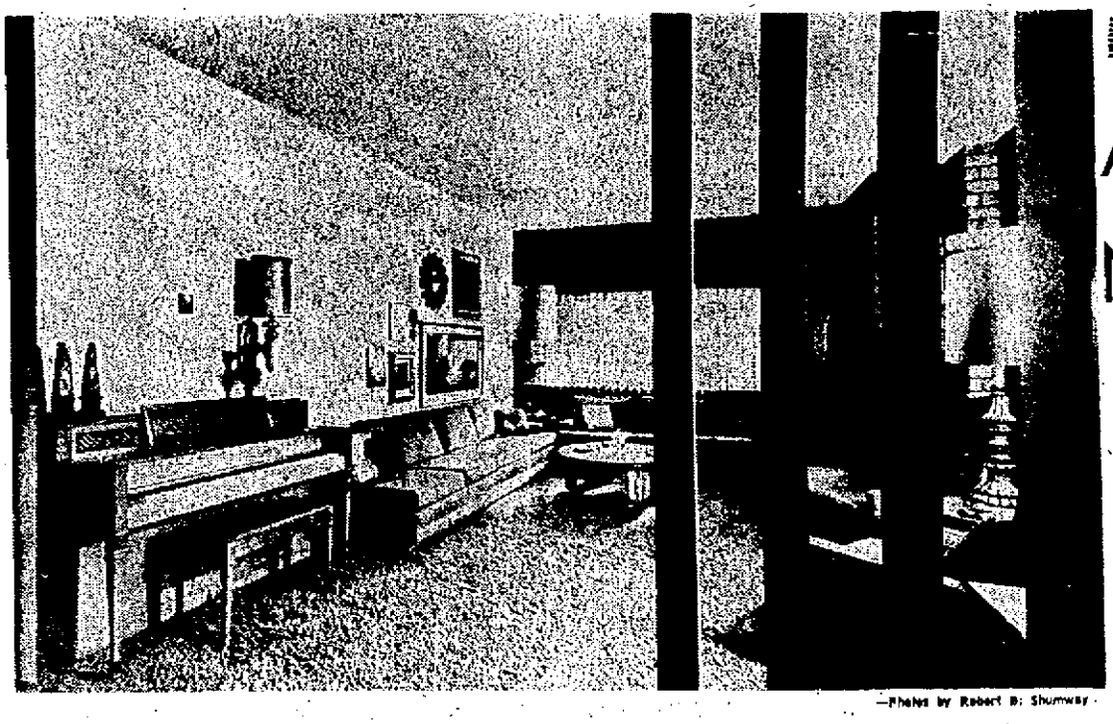
There wasn't an inch of the country that Snow hadn't investigated on foot since that February in 1900 when his father got off the train at Broadway near the east corner of the park with two boys in tow. The 4-year-old was Snow. They stayed several days at the Darby House, which occupied the site of the present Edison Building on Long Beach Boulevard, until the elder Buckwalter decided that a booming town of 2,252 could support another house painter. When Mrs. Buckwalter and the baby arrived from the East, the boys were suffering from severe sunburns and "the old man really got it" for his negligence.

Buckwalter built a house at Esperanza Avenue and First Street, one of the first east of California Avenue. They moved several times but never into the city. The city extended its boundaries to them.

Every day was an adventure in those days of the house on Esperanza. From California east the bluffs rose higher and were filled with holes in which swallows built nests. The boys climbed the bluff using the holes for foot and hand holds and gathered eggs for their collections. During the precarious descent, they held the eggs in their mouths.

Devil's Gate was farther east, where Belmont Pier is. A sand spit extended out a way and terminated in a mound of earth that looked like an old-fashioned chocolate drop. At low tide the boys could walk around it. At high tide they sometimes tried to swim a horse and buggy around it. Often the buggy turned over and somebody heard from his "old man."

There were small beach clams that the boys shoveled into a colander, rinsed and peddled for 10 cents a quart. And the pismo clams! Vic says the clam beds were ruined by people who came in with plows and turned up the clams. "Remember those people gathering them by the gunny sack full?" he asked Snow recently.



Sheepishly: "Yah. I followed the plow." At the age of 5 Snow did follow the plow, piling up clams in return for enough to take home to his mother for a chowder.

When Snow was big enough to shoulder a shotgun, the Bixby and Alamitos Gun Clubs claimed much of his time. The dividing line was Stearns Street, a safe "no man's land" to which he could retreat when pursued by a gamekeeper from either club. With ducks thick as flies it seemed ridiculous that the club members got so upset, he recalls. But perhaps the greatest thrill came when Snow became the personal cottontail-purveyor to Jim Jeffries, the retired world's champion heavyweight boxer.

Jeffries lived in Los Angeles and came to the Alamitos Gun Club on weekends. The gamekeeper picked up club members at the Pacific Electric station on Anaheim Street at Obispo Avnue in what was then called Zafferia and took them in a tallyho to the clubhouse south of Atherton Street.

"On Saturday around 1908," Snow relates, "I was sitting under a eucalyptus tree by the road, tired out from covering four or five miles and lugging 14 rabbits. Along came these fellows in the tallyho and one of them asked would I sell some rabbits. I said 'sure' and he took six. Two for a quarter. Why, with shotgun shells

BACKSTAGE WITH FRED WARING

Magician With Music

By Tony Buttitta

"THE MAGIC Music of Fred Waring," the big musical show coming to Long Beach Municipal Auditorium on Thursday evening, was four months in the making. Starring the famed Pennsylvanians, it was conceived and produced by Waring at his home base, Shawnee - on - Delaware, in the Pocono Mountains of his native state.

The backstage period of preparing a Waring musical is from early summer till fall when the company of 40 sets out on its national tour. It includes all preliminary phases of the show from tryouts of new material, auditions of talent, to the designing of drops and costumes, planning the intricate lighting and sound effects, and the choreographing of a smooth running presentation.

"I start by selecting the show's musical content, which is, after all, the backbone of our production," says Waring. "I choose the music, be it old favorites, chorales, folksongs, pop tunes, or the latest novelty ditties that we find exciting and entertaining to our audiences. By summer's end, we've so much material, the job's to choose the best and arrange it into a balanced show."

TALENTED youngsters audition and then perform with seasoned Pennsylvanians during the summer at Shawnee Inn, a 600-acre resort that caters to visitors who enjoy a blend of golf and musical entertainment. In the famous Cartoon Room at the Inn, where the tables are decorated by the nation's top cartoonists who annually meet there, these performers try out their material before a live audience, with Waring as commentator and off-beat master of ceremonies.

Then Waring retires to his office and goes over the talent and material. After choosing what he will feature in the show, he weaves it into a musical sequence that combines the pace, variety and contrast of both elements.

Now that the talent and material are set, the Pennsylvanians move into the Waring Choral Workshop which has developed thousands of singers and directors since its inception. The group undergoes intensive rehearsals throughout September; first the musicians, soloists, and singers separately; later together they rehearse the overall production.

FINAL REHEARSALS include quick-change drills in portable dressing rooms, which are out of sight behind the bandstand. With the elaborate costume changes that occur in the production numbers, many Pennsylvanians have less than two minutes to slip from a sports dress into a ballroom gown. These changes take place while a soloist has the spotlight on the stage.

Two large vehicles arrive at Shawnee early in October to take the big show and the Pennsylvanians over thousands of miles during the eight-month tour. A van is packed with the music library, instruments, lighting and sound equipment, costumes, dressing rooms, and other props. A passenger bus takes aboard Fred Waring and the Pennsylvanians, as a horn is blown to announce another national tour of this renowned musical organization is on its way.

Despite this meticulous preparation Waring refuses to announce his program before show time. He insists that doing so inhibits the spontaneity of his presentation which he likes to keep tuned to the taste of his individual audiences. It's the audience that decides what goes into an evening's entertainment. Yet his show always begins with strains of "Sleepy," his theme song for almost a half century, and closes with the audience joining in to sing "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

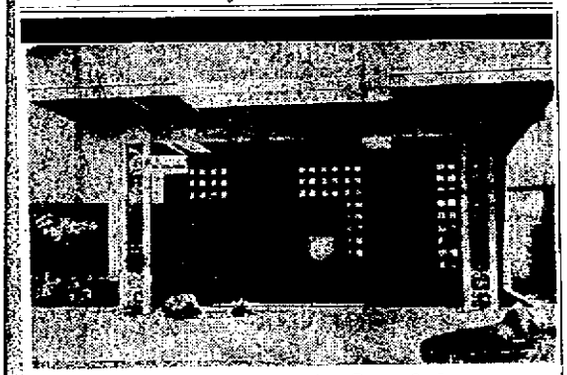
Changes of note in this already excellent house included a new entrance hall and living room. A view of the exterior is shown at left. Autumn colors are predominant in the family room that was first a living room.

Right, another view of converted living room.

battens stained a soft shade of grey-green, combined with firewall and chimney of adobe colored rough brick. Leaded glass windows give a close effect of the Art Nouveau period. Interesting contemporary styling is combined with touches of the twenties. The interior decorating was executed by designer Byron Waller.



HIGHLY POLISHED black slate lends drama to the new entrance hall. The wallpaper is a hand printed design of blue, gilt and dull green on a background of bronze. The effect is extremely rich.

Carpeting in the living room is olive green in luxurious wool turf. Matching sectional sofas are in a rough textured turquoise fabric. Two high-back chairs were custom designed by Waller. They are covered in a very heavily woven material of blue, green, violet and bronze. The rear wall of the room is completely draped in a loosely woven fabric of blue, green, olive and bronze. The leaded windows admit coloring of amber, champagne and green glass. A galley wall has a collection of modern paintings, an antique mirror from Spain, prints and orlginal oils. The Moorish hanging lamp at the hearth is gold and antique silver finish.

WOOD FINISHES on most of the furniture is medium dark provincial. The family room is painted amber-yellow. Carpeting in this room is a gold cut pile texture. Draperies are linen weave, the same color as the walls. The sofa is brass-colored wool. One chair is covered in a bright floral print of linen in shades of orange, yellow and green. The lounge chair and ottoman are done in a heavy fabric stripe of brown, gold and orange.

The dining room is carpeted the same as the family room. The dining room group is made of pickle fruit wood.

First Ladies of the 18th and 19th centuries set the social pattern for a new nation.

By OLIVE BREED

Abigail Smith Adams patterned White House social life after that of Martha Washington.

Sarah Childress Polk was the first college-trained wife to preside over the White House.

Eliza McArdle Johnson—teen marriage to the White House.

Lucy Webb Hayes—a college graduate and a WCTU worker.

Abigail Powers Fillmore—taught presidential husband.

RECALLING First Ladies, the 18th century has exclusive claim to only one, Martha Washington, who drew from her own aristocratic background and her knowledge of European court life to set the social pattern for a new nation.

The first Executive Mansion in New York was a brick structure, three stories high and five windows wide. Offices were on the first floor, living quarters on the second, and rooms for servants and secretaries on the third, according to one history. Martha found this house too small, and within the year they moved to a larger one, rental $1,000 per annum. In December 1790, the capital was transferred to Philadelphia, where the Robert Morris home, largest in the city, was turned over to them.

Martha established her weekly social pattern with, first, a Tuesday afternoon reception for men, when ambassadors, friends, officials, strangers might pay their respects to the President. Washington in formal dress, sword, white gloves and all, did not offer his hand, and guests were not invited to sit.

Weekly formal dinners were served at 4 p. m. Thursday, on the instant, and at 9 p. m. Martha met her responsibility for keeping hours by rising to say, "The General always retires at 9," and there was nothing for guests to do but go.

THE WEEK was climaxed with Martha's own Friday night reception.

Including Agibail Adams, who as First Lady saw the 19th century in, and Ida McKinley, who as First Lady saw it out, that century saw but 17 presidential wives in the White House, although there were 23 Presidents. Four were widowers, one a bachelor, and one wife never reached Washington.

Abigail Smith Adams, second First Lady, was the first White House mistress, the only one to be wife of one President and the mother of another. Educated beyond her time, she was brilliant, interested in government, felt she should have the vote and slaves should be freed. She admired Martha Washington, and patterned the White House entertaining after Martha's, tried in every way to carry on as they were begun.

Martha Wayles Jefferson died many years before, and Thomas Jefferson was the first White House widower. Vice President Aaron Burr was also a widower, and the wife of the Secretary of State, Dolley Madison, and Jefferson's daughters acted as hostesses.

DOLLEY MADISON'S image is one of charm, fashion, endless party giving, even in the face of war and other disaster. "When things are worst," she said, "is when people most need a few happy moments." During the War of 1812, especially in the burning of the White House in 1814, she showed great courage. She was last to leave the building, and rescued the most valuable records and documents. On the lighter side, she started the custom of Easter egg rolling on the grounds.

For the first time since its burning in 1814, Eliza Kortwright Monroe and President Monroe opened the rebuilt White House to the public New Year's Day 1818, from noon to 3 p. m., with diplomats and other foreign representatives formally received a half hour earlier.

Only White House mistress to be daughter-in-law of one President and wife of another, Louisa Catherine Adams had not seen America until four years after her marriage to John Quincy Adams. Her father had represented the new nation in England and France during her entire life before that.

Rachel Donelson Jackson died six weeks before the inauguration of Andrew Jackson as the second widower President. Her niece, Emily Donelson, was official hostess.

MARTIN VAN BUREN, third widower President, had been minister to England, and his four sons were said to be favorites of Queen Victoria. The oldest son, Abraham, married Angelica Singleton, cousin of Dolley Madison, and the White House had a hostess.

Anna Symmes Harrison, wife of one and grandmother of another President, did not reach the White House during the one month of Gen. Harrison's term.

Letitia Tyler, first invalid White House mistress, was the first to die there. Before the end of his term, President Tyler was first to marry while in office, to Julia Gardiner, 30 years his junior, a great beauty and hero worshiper of the President. Among others, she originated the custom of announcing the Chief Executive with "Hail to the Chief," played by the Marine Band.

Sarah Childress Polk, first college-trained White House mistress, was the only one to become confidential secretary to a President. She banished liquor, cards and dancing at all social functions.

Margaret Smith Taylor, an invalid, remained upstairs while her daughter, Betty Bliss, acted as hostess during Zachary Taylor's 16 months as President. She did not live through the four years for which he had been elected.

ABIGAIL POWERS Fillmore was the teacher in whose school room Millard Fillmore's total formal instruction took place. As First Lady, she found no books in the White House, and established the library that has grown through the years, favoring many writers of that day who visited there. The Fillmores scandalized the kitchen help by installing the first cookstove. The first bath tub was another improvement.

Jane Appleton Pierce, in mourning for her 11-year-old son, delegated hostess duties to her aunt, Abby Means. Theirs was the third consecutive administration to forbid serving liquor.

James Buchanan, a bachelor President, had his niece, Harriet Lane, as hostess. Her tact in the growing tension between North and South was notable, beginning her receptions with "Dixie" and ending with "Yankee Doodle" played by the Marine Band. That was a minor touch, but in line with her ability to keep both sides placated.

Mary Todd Lincoln is one of the better known First Ladies, probably because she faced more intolerable pressure and tragedy than others. With all the pressure and weariness, it was necessary to meet and entertain military and other important people, and she gave many receptions for them.

A TEACHER at age 16, Eliza McArdle began helping Andrew Johnson, a young tailor supporting his mother, with his learning to read. A year later there was a teenage marriage, certainly one of the success stories of history. As Andrew worked at his trade, Eliza read to him newspapers, speeches, history, and Andrew began the rise to his election as vice president. Eliza was 58 and an invalid when they reached the White House, but her daughter, Martha Patterson, undertook to put the neglected mansion in a shiny, orderly condition. She was a remarkable housekeeper and hostess, the only one to cover the rugs with muslin for the crowded receptions.

Salad in Grapefruit Bowls

By Mildred K. Flanary
Southland Magazine Home Economics Editor

THREE of America's favorite golden fruits—apples, oranges and grapefruit—have a marvelous affinity for each other, coloring scores of healthful and appetizing dishes for all menus. Golden Fruit Platter and Salads in Grapefruit Bowls are interesting examples. You have a choice of salads, too—chicken, shrimp, Waldorf and grapefruit salad. Following are some recipes:

Golden Fruit Platter

*Florida oranges sliced
Washington Golden Delicious apple wedges
*Florida grapefruit sections
Arrange fruit on platter.

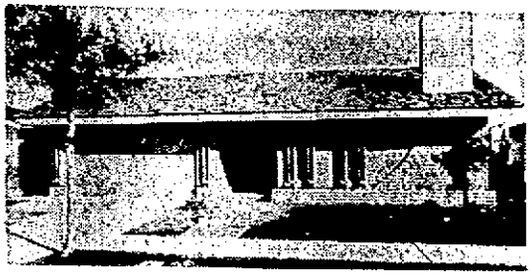
* To peel and section Florida oranges and grapefruit, cut slice from top, then cut off peel in strips from top to bottom, cutting deep enough to remove white membrane, then cut slice from bottom. Or cut off peel 'round and 'round, spiral fashion. Go over fruit again, removing any remaining white membrane. Cut along side of each dividing membrane from outside to middle of core. Remove section by section, over bowl to retain juice from fruit. Or slice peeled oranges crosswise ¼-inch thick.

Grapefruit Bowls

To prepare grapefruit bowls, cut fruit in half and remove core. Cut around each section, loosening fruit from membrane. Remove grapefruit sections and reserve. Remove membrane. Line grapefruit halves with greens; spoon in salad. Top with desired dressing.

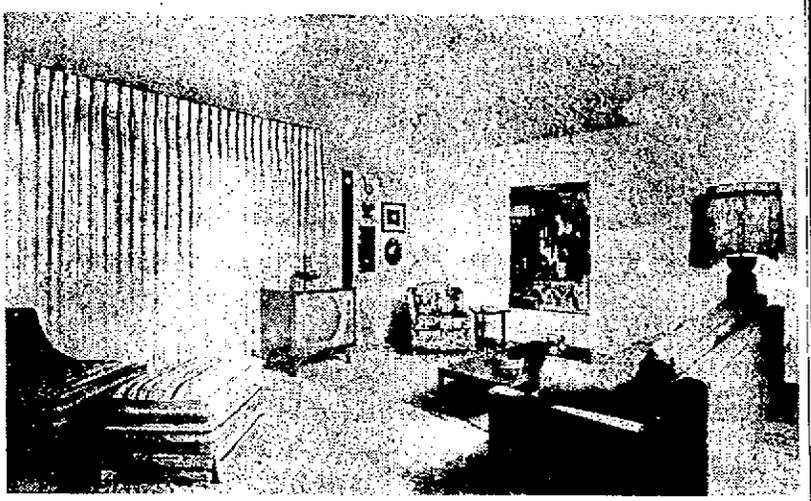
Chicken: Prepare 2 grapefruit according to directions. Combine grapefruit sections with 1½ cups chopped chicken, ½ cup diced Washington Golden Delicious apple, 6 each raw mushrooms and ripe olives, sliced. Fill grapefruit halves.

Yield: 4 servings.



Shrimp: Prepare 2 grapefruit according to directions: Combine grapefruit sections with 1 pound cooked, shelled and deveined shrimp, ¼ cup chopped celery and 1 can (5 ounces) water chestnuts, sliced. Fill grapefruit halves.

Yield: 4 servings.



Waldorf: Prepare 2 grapefruit according to directions. Combine grapefruit sections with ½ cup finely chopped Washington Golden Delicious apple, ½ cup each chopped walnuts and celery. Fill grapefruit halves.

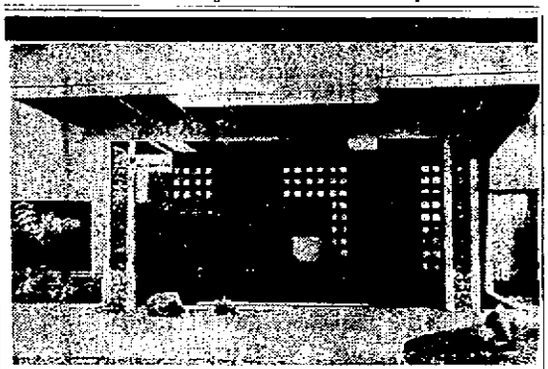
Yield: 4 servings.

Grapefruit Salad Bowl: Prepare one grapefruit according to directions. Reservo grapefruit sections for other use. Arrange radish roses, scallions, carrot sticks, celery sticks, turnip wedges, pepper slices and cucumber sticks in grapefruit bowls.

Changes of note in this already excellent house included a new entrance hall and living room. A view of the exterior is shown at left. Autumn colors are predominant in the family room that was first a living room.

Right, another view of converted living room.

battens stained a soft shade of grey-green, combined with firewall and chimney of adobe colored rough brick. Leaded glass windows give a close effect of the Art Nouveau period. Interesting contemporary styling is combined with touches of the twenties. The interior decorating was executed by designer Byron Waller.



HIGHLY POLISHED black slate lends drama to the new entrance hall. The wallpaper is a hand printed design of blue, gilt and dull green on a background of bronze. The effect is extremely rich.

Carpeting in the living room is olive green in luxurious wool turf. Matching sectional sofas are in a rough textured turquoise fabric.

Two high-back chairs were custom designed by Waller. They are covered in a very heavily woven material of blue, green, violet and bronze. The rear wall of the room is completely draped in a lonsely woven fabric of blue, green, olive and bronze. The leaded windows admit coloring of amber, champagne and green glass. A galley wall has a collection of modern paintings, an antique mirror from Spain, prints and original oils. The Moorish hanging lamp at the hearth is gold and antique silver finish.

WOOD FINISHES on most of the furniture is medium dark provincial. The family room is painted amber-yellow. Carpeting in this room is a gold cut pile texture. Draperies are linen weave, the same color as the walls. The sofa is brass-colored wool. One chair is covered in a bright floral print of linen in shades of orange, yellow and green. The lounge chair and ottoman are done in a heavy fabric stripe of brown, gold and orange.

The dining room is carpeted the same as the family room. The dining room group is made of pickled fruit wood.

Recipe of the Week

TEMPTING for breakfast are the many confections, bakery style or home made, that moderns enjoy with their starting cup of coffee, and such is this week's $5 prize recipe submitted by Mrs. James Bissenas, 1508 Grand Ave., Long Beach 90804. The recipe:

St. James Coffee Cake

3 cups sifted flour	2 cups buttermilk
2 cups white sugar	1 cup raisins
½ tsp. ground cloves	1 tsp. baking soda
½ tsp. nutmeg	1 cup of chopped nuts
¾ cup cooking oil	2 tblsp. brown sugar

Sift the dry ingredients then blend in the oil. Mix until crumbly like pie dough. Take out a half cup and set aside. To the remainder, add the buttermilk, raisins, baking soda and chopped nuts. Mix and pour into 12x15 inch pan. Add the brown sugar to the half cup of reserved mix and sprinkle over the top of coffee cake. Bake for 1 hour in 350 degree oven. No frosting needed for this cake.

What's your favorite recipe? For each recipe published in this space, Southland will pay $5. Men are urged to submit their recipe along with the ladies. Send yours, with name and address to Recipe Contest Editor, Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90801.

Seasonal Corner

By Ruth C. Ikerman

ONE OF the homes which it is the most fun to visit in our neighborhood has a special corner devoted to the happy seasonal touch. It is just a corner adjoining both kitchen and dining alcove which is given over to emphasizing something of the current season, often selected from the homework of the children.

Whenever I go into this house it is a pleasure to walk over to this seasonal corner and see what is there, for often I have been unaware of more than the daily routine. The children, however, have remembered that it is getting close to the time when the Easter bunny will be coming, and they have a basket ready for his colored eggs.

IT MAY BE the hot summer time and they have been a little bored and hot, so what have they done with the seasonal corner? They have created a cool picture of the ocean by using blue and green crayons on a piece of white construction paper. Once I found a picture of an iceberg, and a big sign "Ha, ha, ha," which gave me a chuckle which relaxed the feeling of heat from the weather outside.

By having a seasonal corner instantly available, any member of the family has a place to display what he has made, or what he has found of general interest. So a by-product of the project is the creating of a thoughtful awareness of other people, and the desire to add to their daily happiness.

THIS PLAN is not limited to those with young children. Recently I went to call on a patient in a home for the aged, with all its crowded paraphernalia. Yet she had found space at the entrance to her room for a tiny table on which she had placed a fan. Before it was a miniature blue bowl in which was one bright pink plastic flower. That little bit of beauty magically transformed her room, and made me feel more peaceful as I went in to visit for a while.

The happy seasonal touch is a trick known to many countries, where there are wayside shrines with flowers and fruit befitting the season. Any of us can take time to arrange in some convenient spot something which shows the beauty of the current season and makes us more aware of the interesting objects available in whatever is our daily routine.

New Obesity Data

By Ben Zinser

Southland Magazine Medical-Science Writer

ONLY A relatively small number of newborn infants who are heavier than average become obese.

At birth, the weights of girl babies who are obese by adolescence are no different than those of non-obese adolescent girls, new research shows.

But by the age of 1 year, girls subsequently obese have gained weight more rapidly and are heavier, according to two Washington, D. C., doctors reporting in Journal of Pediatrics.

Available evidence suggests a predisposition in certain families for juvenile obesity.

A STUDY of University of Michigan professors shows that the more uric acid in the blood, the greater the amount of drive, achievement and leadership.

Uric acid is a nitrogenous waste product of the body's metabolism.

The same high levels of uric acid which stimulate performance also help cause the painful inflammation of gout.

Thus the new study lends support to another hypothesis: a tendency to gout is a tendency to the executive suite.

The report is in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

A LARGE proportion of dental disease could be prevented if people ate only at meal times and stuck to foods which require a lot of chewing.

So says an editorial in British Medical Journal.

"Our modern diet tends to be overcooked, soft and sticky," the editorial states. One observer says it appears as if today's diet were designed for a nation with ill-fitting dentures.

Much disease of the gums can be prevented if persons eat foods which require chewing, the editorial says. Such foods would include fresh fruits and vegetables.

DAPSONE, a drug ordinarily prescribed for leprosy patients, is being tested as a malaria protection agent among U. S. soldiers in Viet Nam. Dapsone is said to have protected patients against a malaria strain that has been resisting chloroquine and primaquine.

A NEW antibiotic often is effective in the treatment of uncomplicated cases of acute gallbladder inflammation.

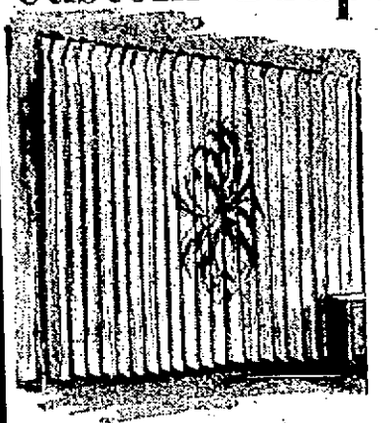
The agent is rifamycin diethylamide, tradenamed Rifamide.

Dr. Bryan C. Stratford of Melbourne, Australia, says that results have been "very good" so far.

Symptoms subside within 24 to 48 hours, he reports in Medical Journal of Australia.

ACCIDENTS involving use of power mowers appear to be on the increase, health authorities report.

Recently in Colorado, 70 persons were injured seriously enough in lawn-mower accidents to require hospitalization.



Carelessness was blamed for every accident. Many of the victims hadn't even read the operating manual before they started using a new mower, it was found.

Nineteen of the victims suffered amputation of toes or fingers. One lost part of a foot.

THE LEPROSY of Old Testament times is definitely not the same as today's Hansen's Disease, says Dr. George L. Fite, Chicago, a consultant to the AMA Journal.

The book of Leviticus, he says, gives sufficient information to show clearly that the Biblical disease was a mixture of things, curable apparently within a short time and one that involved walls of houses and clothing.

Salad in Grapefruit Bowls

By Mildred K. Flanary

Southland Algalise Home Economics Editor

THREE of America's favorite golden fruits—apples, oranges and grapefruit—have a marvelous affinity for each other, coloring scores of healthful and appetizing dishes for all menus. Golden Fruit Platter and Salads in Grapefruit Bowls are interesting examples. You have a choice of salads, too—chicken, shrimp, Waldorf and grapefruit salad. Following are some recipes:

Golden Fruit Platter

*Florida oranges sliced
Washington Golden Delicious apple wedges
*Florida grapefruit sections
Arrange fruit on platter.

* To peel and section Florida oranges and grapefruit, cut slice from top, then cut off peel in strips from top to bottom, cutting deep enough to remove white membrane, then cut slice from bottom. Or cut off peel 'round and 'round, spiral fashion. Go over fruit again, removing any remaining white membrane. Cut along side of each dividing membrane from outside to middle of core. Remove section by section, over bowl to retain juice from fruit. Or slice peeled oranges crosswise ¼-inch thick.

Grapefruit Bowls

To prepare grapefruit bowls, cut fruit in half and remove core. Cut around each section, loosening fruit from membrane. Remove grapefruit sections and reserve. Remove membrane. Line grapefruit halves with greens; spoon in salad. Top with desired dressing.

Chicken: Prepare 2 grapefruit according to directions. Combine grapefruit sections with 1½ cups chopped chicken, ½ cup diced Washington Golden Delicious apple, 6 each raw mushrooms and ripe olives, sliced. Fill grapefruit halves.

Yield: 4 servings.

Shrimp: Prepare 2 grapefruit according to directions: Combine grapefruit sections with 1 pound cooked, shelled and deveined shrimp, ¼ cup chopped celery and 1 can (5 ounces) water chestnuts, sliced. Fill grapefruit halves.

Yield: 4 servings.

Waldorf: Prepare 2 grapefruit according to directions. Combine grapefruit sections with ½ cup finely chopped Washington Golden Delicious apple, ½ cup each chopped walnuts and celery. Fill grapefruit halves.

Yield: 4 servings.

Grapefruit Salad Bowl: Prepare one grapefruit according to directions. Reserve grapefruit sections for other use. Arrange radish roses, scallions, carrot sticks, celery sticks, turnip wedges, pepper slices and cucumber sticks in grapefruit bowls.

COIN ROUNDUP

Lecture Series

MONEY OF the different ages and countless cultures will be the general theme of a series of four lectures sponsored by Long Beach City College in Boyd High School auditorium, 8th Street and Locust Avenue, Long Beach, starting at 7:30 p. m. Thursday.

Title of the lecture series, which will be headed up by Charles M. Johnson, 3521 Vista St., a widely known Southern California numismatist, will be "Introduction to Numismatics." The educational course is believed to be the first of its kind to be conducted in Southern California and is designed for those who want to know more about the exciting story of money, its origin, development, history, lessons and problems from the viewpoint of the numismatist. Special attention will be given to United States coins and paper money.

LECTURE HOURS will be from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. and succeeding sessions will be March 17, 24 and 31.

Johnson is a member of the board of governors of the American Numismatic Association. He will give the opening lecture on "The Story of Money." He will be followed by Joel L. Malter, a teacher and professional numismatist, who will discuss during the second lecture the money of ancient Greece, Rome and the Bible.

The third lecture on "World Coinage in Relation to History and Art" will be delivered by William D. Craig, author of the forthcoming book, "Coins of the World," to be released this spring by Whitman Publishing Co.

Cyrus H. Phillips, a lifelong numismatist, associated with the public relations department of the Bank of America, will close the series with a lecture on the "Historical Background of United States Coins and Paper Money."

ALL OF THE lectures will be illustrated by projected pictures and specimens of money actually used in the past in ancient Greece, Rome, Egypt, Byzantum and present-day countries of the world and the United States. Each lecture will be followed by a discussion period.

Some of the subjects to be covered are: numismatics, its meaning and purposes; moneyless cultures; lessons from coins in history, art, archeology and religion; use of gold and silver and other metals for money; significant U. S. coins and paper money from Colonial Days to present; monetary mistakes, experimentation, depreciation, debasement and inflation as recorded by coins and paper money and numismatic literature, museums and organizations.

"THIS IS THE first series of lectures to be devoted entirely to numismatics and to be sponsored by an educational institution at the college level in Southern California," Johnson said. "It recognizes the growing public interest in the scientific study of coins, paper money and other media of exchange in relation to history, economics, art, archeology and other humanistic disciplines. It is fitting that Long Beach City College with its central location and easy accessibility to the many collectors and students of numismatics in the Long Beach-Los Angeles area should undertake this significant initial effort."

The lectures are open to the public without charge or advance registration.

Shadow Box for Jewels

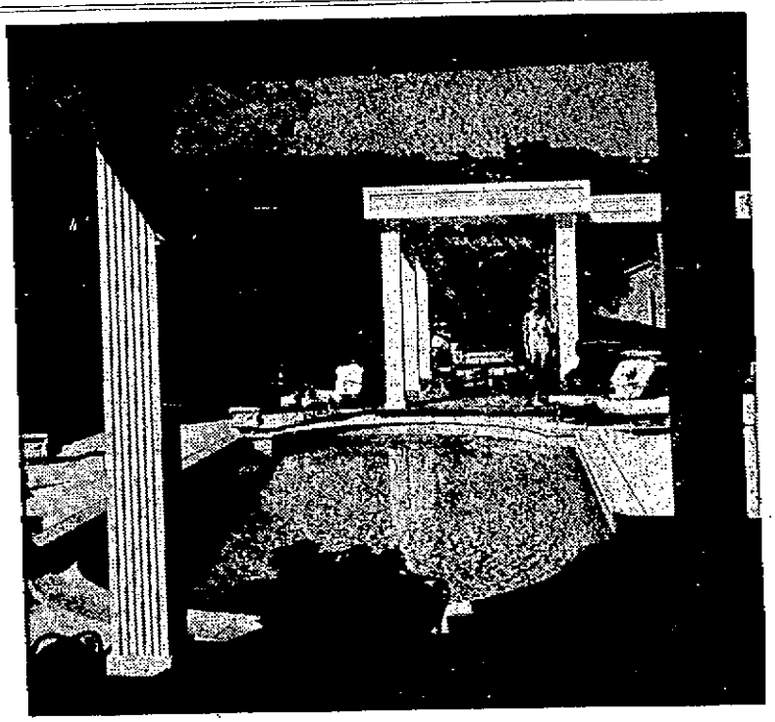
In the manner of a shadow box, this container for necklaces and costume jewelry is found very handy by Nina Roman of NBC's "Morningstar" program.

By Steve Ellingson

THERE'S something about jewelry that makes any woman want to look her charming and attractive best. Of all accessories, nothing can create such a stunning effect as jewelry, when worn with taste and restraint.

If the queen of your domain doesn't have a regal place to keep her regal jewels, you can easily build one. The shadow-box jewel cabinet—see illustration—is both elegant and practical. A large mirror on the door makes for easy primping. On the back side of the door is a padded cushion for all jewels which have the pin-type fasteners. The back of the chest is velveteen covered pegboard, the jewels are hung on the smartly styled new plastic pegboard hooks. These may be arranged to fit your precise needs and what is more important, selection is always easy because the jewels are always visible. Isn't this more handy than fumbling through a box and untangling your necklaces? A slide-out shelf at the bottom takes care of all items not suitable for hanging. The cabinet is hung on the wall at just the right height for milady. You'll find the extra mirror handy on numerous occasions.

THIS SHADOW-BOX type of cabinet also makes a dandy medicine chest for use in your bath or bedroom. In this case you would add shelves and eliminate the fabric lining. It's easy to build when you use the full size pattern. All that's necessary is to trace the pattern parts on plywood, then saw them out and finally put the parts together. Inexpensive when you do it yourself.



To obtain the full size jewelry cabinet pattern No. 389, send $1 in currency, check or money order to Steve Ellingson, Southland Magazine Pattern Dept., Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif. 91409.

Get Tough

Sometimes gardeners get carried away when planting a new garden and set in too much material for the space available. Ten or fifteen years later, lack of restraint shows up in overcrowded shrubs and trees.

This is a time to call in an experienced nurseryman or landscape consultant, advises the California Association of Nurserymen. Usually a modest charge is made for the residence call, but it is well worth it, considering the time and money saved.

The idea is to preserve the more valuable and functional material and dispose of and replace the inferior or non-functioning trees and shrubs. At this point, the owner must take a somewhat severe attitude, otherwise the problem will recur in a more serious way in a few years. In other words, don't cheat on the expert advice!

BULLETIN: FIRST 10 MONTHS OF 1965 IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA*

Anthony builds more pools than the next fifteen single pool builders combined!

WHY ANTHONY?

We believe that much of the overwhelming preference for Anthony results from the recommendation of satisfied pool owners. Here are some of the reasons:

DEPENDABLE ACCESSORIES. At our 15 acre facility we manufacture our own top-quality line of pool parts and accessories. Our reputation for the dependability of our filters, heaters, water purifier, and pool cleaner—plus the assurance of service on all equipment from one source—is one of the big reasons many people recommend Anthony Pools.

FINANCIAL BACK-UP. The warranties of a builder or manufacturer depend on his ability to back them up. Ask any builder for his financial statement. Here is Anthony's current financial back-up: Cash, $1,265,567; Total net worth, $3,050,832.

IT'S EASY TO JOIN THE POOL OWNER SET. On ten-year financing, a complete pool can be yours for very low monthly payments. For example, a loan balance of $2000 runs only $26.67 a month. Is it any wonder so many young families are adding an Anthony pool to their way of life?

*Per most recent building permits reported by independent reporting service. Anthony also built more pools than all franchised pool builders combined!

New Obesity Data

By Ben Zinser

Southland Magazine Medical-Science Writer

ONLY A relatively small number of newborn infants who are heavier than average become obese.

At birth, the weights of girl babies who are obese by adolescence are no different than those of non-obese adolescent girls, new research shows.

But by the age of 1 year, girls subsequently obese have gained weight more rapidly and are heavier, according to two Washington, D. C., doctors reporting in Journal of Pediatrics.

Available evidence suggests a predisposition in certain families for juvenile obesity.

A STUDY of University of Michigan professors shows that the more uric acid in the blood, the greater the amount of drive, achievement and leadership.

Uric acid is a nitrogenous waste product of the body's metabolism.

The same high levels of uric acid which stimulate performance also help cause the painful inflammation of gout.

Thus the new study lends support to another hypothesis: a tendency to gout is a tendency to the executive suite.

The report is in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

A LARGE proportion of dental disease could be prevented if people ate only at meal times and stuck to foods which require a lot of chewing.

So says an editorial in British Medical Journal.

"Our modern diet tends to be overcooked, soft and sticky," the editorial states. One observer says it appears as if today's diet were designed for a nation with ill-fitting dentures.

Much disease of the gums can be prevented if persons eat foods which require chewing, the editorial says. Such foods would include fresh fruits and vegetables.

DAPSONE, a drug ordinarily prescribed for leprosy patients, is being tested as a malaria protection agent among U. S. soldiers in Viet Nam. Dapsone is said to have protected patients against a malaria strain that has been resisting chloroquine and primaquine.

A NEW antibiotic often is effective in the treatment of uncomplicated cases of acute gallbladder inflammation.

The agent is rifamycin diethylamide, tradenamed Rifamide.

Dr. Bryan C. Stratford of Melbourne, Australia, says that results have been "very good" so far.

Symptoms subside within 24 to 48 hours, he reports in Medical Journal of Australia.

ACCIDENTS involving use of power mowers appear to be on the increase, health authorities report.

Recently in Colorado, 70 persons were injured seriously enough in lawn-mower accidents to require hospitalization.

Carelessness was blamed for every accident. Many of the victims hadn't even read the operating manual before they started using a new mower, it was found.

Nineteen of the victims suffered amputation of toes or fingers. One lost part of a foot.

THE LEPROSY of Old Testament times is definitely not the same as today's Hansen's Disease, says Dr. George L. Fite, Chicago, a consultant to the AMA Journal.

The book of Leviticus, he says, gives sufficient information to show clearly that the Biblical disease was a mixture of things, curable apparently within a short time and one that involved walls of houses and clothing.

THE other day on the way to work I bumped into an old flame. Almost literally. I was driving on the other side of the road when I saw her standing near the intersection and the car was way across the center line before my heart stopped skipping. I noticed a few unfamiliar wrinkles, but she still had the bright eyes I used to know and those delightful curves in all the right places.

It was my old red Isetta, one of the last of those little egg-shaped autos that were imported by the dozen a few years ago. It was parked on the dirt shoulder of the shortcut I often take into Long Beach and I knew it was mine at a glance because it's the only 1958 single-seat Isetta in the world with a trunk.

They don't build that model any more. When they did, the only space for luggage was a tiny deck behind the seat. It was deep enough to carry my portable typewriter and camera gear, but there was no way to conceal anything with the windows all around. I solved the problem by building a plywood enclosure on the deck. After I upholstered it with the original deck carpeting, it was as secret a compartment as you could install in a car with all the privacy of a soap bubble. Only another Isetta owner could know for sure.

—Drawing by ERWIN DeGROOT

. . . An old flame of mine . . .

I DROVE the little bug for more than a year, making hay on the mileage allowance and cheating parking meters by squeezing in behind American compacts. Pound for pound, it was the greatest car I ever owned. It was also the most personal. When I closed the door, it wasn't just the windshield that wrapped around me. It was risky on the freeway, but there was a certain fascination in looking out at the reflection of your face in the spinning hub caps of cars alongside.

Besides, the Isetta was a convertible, my one and only fling at sporting life on the open road. By opening the sunroof half way, I could scoop up a hurricane which not only provided instant air conditioning but also vacuumed the floor.

That afternoon when I took the shortcut home, the red Isetta was still parked there and I stopped to look her over. She had the same old appeal, with the front-opening door that permitted driving up under the eaves and stepping out without getting wet when it was raining. But there on the dusty shoulder of the road, the Isetta obviously was suffering from malaffection. The license plates were missing, the radio antenna I had installed was broken and someone had sawed a hole in the secret luggage compartment. The car looked abandoned.

A PRINTED PAPER license number pasted in the rear window was just beginning to fade, indicating my Isetta recently had changed hands again, but there was no identification on the transfer papers stuck to the inside of the windshield. With a pang of remorse, I remembered selling the car in 1960 to a hard-bargaining police officer who lived out on the east side of Long Beach and I wondered who, if anybody, owned it now.

As usual when I really need one, I couldn't find a pencil to jot down the temporary license number and made a mental note to come back the next day. I could hardly wait to get there in the morning. When I did, the red Isetta was gone. I haven't seen it since.

Somewhere close in the Southland, somebody's got a great little car. One of these days maybe I'll find out who it is and how they're getting along together. I sure hope so. I think I'm in love again.

Lecture Series

MONEY OF the different ages and countless cultures will be the general theme of a series of four lectures sponsored by Long Beach City College in Boyd High School auditorium, 8th Street and Locust Avenue, Long Beach, starting at 7:30 p. m. Thursday.

Title of the lecture series, which will be headed up by Charles M. Johnson, 3521 Vista St., a widely known Southern California numismatist, will be "Introduction to Numismatics." The educational course is believed to be the first of its kind to be conducted in Southern California and is designed for those who want to know more about the exciting story of money, its origin, development, history, lessons and problems from the viewpoint of the numismatist. Special attention will be given to United States coins and paper money.

LECTURE HOURS will be from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. and succeeding sessions will be March 17, 24 and 31.

Johnson is a member of the board of governors of the American Numismatic Association. He will give the opening lecture on "The Story of Money." He will be followed by Joel L. Malter, a teacher and professional numismatist, who will discuss during the second lecture the money of ancient Greece, Rome and the Bible.

The third lecture on "World Coinage in Relation to History and Art" will be delivered by William D. Craig, author of the forthcoming book, "Coins of the World," to be released this spring by Whitman Publishing Co.

Cyrus H. Phillips, a lifelong numismatist, associated with the public relations department of the Bank of America, will close the series with a lecture on the "Historical Background of United States Coins and Paper Money."

ALL OF THE lectures will be illustrated by projected pictures and specimens of money actually used in the past in ancient Greece, Rome, Egypt, Byzantum and present-day countries of the world and the United States. Each lecture will be followed by a discussion period.

Some of the subjects to be covered are: numismatics, its meaning and purposes; moneyless cultures; lessons from coins in history, art, archeology and religion; use of gold and silver and other metals for money; significant U. S. coins and paper money from Colonial Days to present; monetary mistakes, experimentation, depreciation, debasement and inflation as recorded by coins and paper money and numismatic literature, museums and organizations.

"THIS IS THE first series of lectures to be devoted entirely to numismatics and to be sponsored by an educational institution at the college level in Southern California," Johnson said. "It recognizes the growing public interest in the scientific study of coins, paper money and other media of exchange in relation to history, economics, art, archeology and other humanistic disciplines. It is fitting that Long Beach City College with its central location and easy accessibility to the many collectors and students of numismatics in the Long Beach-Los Angeles area should undertake this significant initial effort."

The lectures are open to the public without charge or advance registration.

Science for You

By Bob Brown

PROBLEM: An air car.

NEEDED: An old long-playing record, a thread spool, a candle, a large rubber balloon, and a smooth surface.

DO THIS: Whittle one end of the spool down so the balloon can be slipped over it. Attach the other end of the spool to the center of the record with candle wax. The holes should match each other.

Inflate the balloon, slip its mouth over the spool, place the record on the smooth surface, release the balloon, and the record will glide with very little friction over the surface.

HERE'S WHY: When the record rests on the surface it tends to remain there because of the friction created when the surfaces move against each other. The air stream from the balloon puts a thin layer of air between the surfaces, eliminating most of the friction.

A collection of the "Science For You" experiments is in book form under the name "Science Circus." It is on sale in book stores.

Q. When was the Pledge of Allegiance first used? — D.M.

A. The Pledge of Allegiance was first given on October 21, 1892 at the dedication of the World's Fair Grounds in Chicago.

Q. I know that people going up (or coming down) in planes chew gum because swallowing helps to equalize air pressure on the eardrums —but how does it do this? —T.N.

A. A small tube, called the eustachian tube, leads from the inner ear to the mouth, where its opening is ordinary covered by mucous membrane. At each swallow, this opening is momentarily uncovered as muscles lift the palate. Through the tube, air is exchanged between inner ear and mouth, and pressure le[illegible]ed out (equalized).

Q. Are jousting tournaments held in the United States?—El.

A. With some modifications, this knightly sport is still popular among horsemen in such states as Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania, North Carolina, and West Virginia. Modern tournaments include much if the pageantry of medieval days, but modern knights no longer try to unhorse or kill each other. Instead, they attempt to spear with their lances tiny metal rings suspended on strings. . . . . .

PET PARADE

Little Multiplier

By Eleanor Avery Price

FOR A dollar or two, you can get so many pets you won't know what to do! All it takes is a pair, male and female, of hamsters. In a matter of days, there will be a dozen or more scurrying little bear-like animals. In another month, your pets may number 30 or 40. And if you don't separate the male and female babies by age four weeks, you may as well move out and let the hamsters have your house.

Since a hamster doesn't mind a solitary life, it works out well if you get just one, or give each one its own individual pen, bird cage, or crude box with wire top. Be certain the pet can't nose out, and don't rely on twined wire, hook, or other easy-to-open catch. This smart creature will find a way out, if possible.

KEEP THE pen clean. White excelsior or clean white shavings, never sawdust or newspaper, should be used on the bottom of the home. In this, the pet will hoard food. This habit makes it possible for you to take a weekend off, knowing the hamster won't starve. Of course, at clean-up time, remove any stale food. Be sure he always has water, however. You can buy a hamster waterer at your pet shop.

The hamster likes rabbit pellets, poultry pellets, dog food, the dry cat foods, stale bread, nuts, cereal, fruits and peelings, raw carrot and leafy greens. He may pack his pouch so he can nibble around the clock.

Someone has said there are no such pets as two hamsters—the creatures multiply so rapidly.

A hamster has no odor, seldom causes allergy, has no fleas and other parasites. He may nip if fingers are thrust through his cage or the nest he makes in the flooring. But he easily becomes quite tame and will ride on a child's shoulder if clipped with a tiny harness. He should be handled frequently to tame him. Pick him up by first removing his bedding and let him see your hand coming toward him. Get your hand over him quietly and grasp him from above. Don't hold him for long periods, and always give him a tidbit when you put him back in his cage.

DON'T ATTEMPT to pick up the very small hamster, as he easily slips free. An older hamster may bite, so don't pick him up until he is accustomed to your petting him gently when he is eating. Soon he will walk over your hand. He will learn to feel secure if the hand is moved slowly and gently.

Of interest to dog fanciers next Sunday, Motoc Obedience Club will have a match at Upland Memorial Park; basset hounds will stage a fun trial in San Gabriel Canyon, Azusa Avenue, north of Foothill Boulevard; pulik will be judged in a match at Griffith Park, Crystal Springs area.

A Great Place for Tom Sawyers

only 35 cents a box, I was in the money.

"Later I discovered the fellow was Jeffries. Man, did he like cottontails! I got to waiting for him every Saturday. He always bought."

A favorite spot of Snow's was the swampy land below Rancho Los Alamitos. Here vegetation grew rank in the black peat soil—willows, wild blackberries, tules. Cattle had forced tunnels through the thicket. Overhead you couldn't see daylight. This was the home of innumerable birds, the skunk that you treated with respect, a few badgers, and on the outer edges, cottontails. In the stream were catfish like you see or taste once in a lifetime.

Sometimes the boys didn't make it home by nightfall and slept in Bixby's barn. Fred Bixby only cautioned, "No smoking, boys."

Somehow it never entered Snow's mind that his parents would worry any more than it did Vic's the day he and an older brother took two friends out in their 16-foot dory. Someone mentioned Catalina and they were off. It was 9 in the morning. There was a good off-shore breeze. Came evening and four weary boys rode in on the rocky beach at Avalon Harbor and began stowing their sail. An official greeted them with, "Only Banning Company boats can land here."

Fortunately a well-dressed gentleman stepped out of the gathering crowd and asked, "You kids really sailed this thing from Long Beach? Do your folks know where you are?"

"We hadn't even thought of our folks," Vic says. "Here it was nearly night. There was no telephone or telegraph service between Avalon and Long Beach."

The gentleman, who seemed to have some authority, made arrangements for the boys to stay overnight. He fed them and got them a room. After breakfast next morning he saw that they had checked and filled their water breaker. Then he read the riot act. "He hoped our parents would whip us for the worry we were causing them. And they did, too, after they'd called off the Coast Guard search."

The Good Samaritan's name? Vic admits that he forgot to ask.

Looking back on some of their escapades, Vic and Snow suffer occasional pangs of remorse at their thoughtlessness. "We were too busy, I guess," Vic says. "There was just too much to see and do in one childhood if you lived in early-day Long Beach."

Snow agrees. "It was a great place to grow up in. And Vic and I had the best of it."

Me and My Egg

By Herb Shannon

—Drawing by ERWIN DeGROOT

. . . An old flame of mine . . .

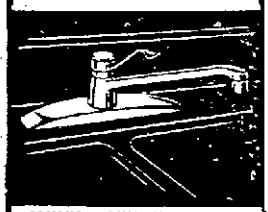
THE other day on the way to work I bumped into an old flame. Almost literally. I was driving on the other side of the road when I saw her standing near the intersection and the car was way across the center line before my heart stopped skipping. I noticed a few unfamiliar wrinkles, but she still had the bright eyes I used to know and those delightful curves in all the right places.

It was my old red Isetta, one of the last of those little egg-shaped autos that were imported by the dozen a few years ago. It was parked on the dirt shoulder of the shortcut I often take into Long Beach and I knew it was mine at a glance because it's the only 1958 single-seat Isetta in the world with a trunk.

They don't build that model any more. When they did, the only space for luggage was a tiny deck behind the seat. It was deep enough to carry my portable typewriter and camera gear, but there was no way to conceal anything with the windows all around. I solved the problem by building a plywood enclosure on the deck. After I upholstered it with the original deck carpeting, it was as secret a compartment as you could install in a car with all the privacy of a soap bubble. Only another Isetta owner could know for sure.

I DROVE the little bug for more than a year, making hay on the mileage allowance and cheating parking meters by squeezing in behind American compacts. Pound for pound, it was the greatest car I ever owned. It was also the most personal. When I closed the door, it wasn't just the windshield that wrapped around me. It was risky on the freeway, but there was a certain fascination in looking out at the reflection of your face in the spinning hub caps of cars alongside.

Besides, the Isetta was a convertible, my one and only fling at sporting life on the open road. By opening the sunroof half-way, I could scoop up a hurricane which not only provided instant air conditioning but also vacuumed the floor.



That afternoon when I took the shortcut home, the red Isetta was still parked there and I stopped to look her over. She had the same old appeal, with the front-opening door that permitted driving up under the eaves and stepping out without getting wet when it was raining. But there on the dusty shoulder of the road, the Isetta obviously was suffering from malaffection. The license plates were missing, the radio antenna I had installed was broken and someone had sawed a hole in the secret luggage compartment. The car looked abandoned.

A PRINTED PAPER license number pasted in the rear window was just beginning to fade, indicating my Isetta recently had changed hands again, but there was no identification on the transfer papers stuck to the inside of the windshield. With a pang of remorse, I remembered selling the car in 1960 to a hard-bargaining police officer who lived out on the east side of Long Beach and I wondered who, if anybody, owned it now.

As usual when I really need one, I couldn't find a pencil to jot down the temporary license number and made a mental note to come back the next day. I could hardly wait to get there in the morning. When I did, the red Isetta was gone. I haven't seen it since.

Somewhere close in the Southland, somebody's got a great little car. One of these days maybe I'll find out who it is and how they're getting along together. I sure hope so. I think I'm in love again.

Tale of Woman Trail-Blazer

By Vera Williams

WHEN MARTIN Johnson of Independence, Kan., signed on as a cook with Jack London on a tour of the South Seas on London's 47-foot vessel, the Snark, in 1909, no one suspected he would win world acclaim as an explorer. When he married Osa Leighty of Chanute, Kan., in 1910, none dreamed that the Kansas beauty would be the first white woman to reach the then unexplored headwaters of the Kinabatanga river and the first to enter the territory of the Tenggara headhunters!

Ironically, after years of flying his own plane over uncharted jungle territory, Martin Johnson was killed in an airplane accident Jan. 13, 1937, near San Fernando. Osa died in New York Jan. 7, 1953.

More than a decade after Osa's death her personal possessions were opened to place their contents in the Martin & Osa Johnson Safari Museum in Chanute, Kan. An unpublished account of the last journey of the husband and wife team to Borneo was unearthed.

Entitled "LAST ADVENTURE," the book, edited by Pascal James Imeparto, M.D., of Ozone Park, an honorary director of the Safari Museum, has been published by William Morrow & Co. ($4.50).

Osa Johnson, author of "I Married Adventure" and "Bride in the Solomons," wrote in her introduction to "Last Adventure": "The entire story in this book is true. It is truly the missing chapter in the life of Martin Johnson and myself that has never been in book form before now." Photographs, she said, were taken in North Borneo by her husband and herself.

"Our expeditions were fraught with many dangers from the diseases, dangerous game and primitive headhunters that lurked in the dark recesses of a hostile and unknown environment," she added.

Stay-at-home travelers will get many vicarious thrills from the pages of Osa Johnson's entertaining farewell volume.

TO COUNTLESS men who knew her famous palace of pleasure in San Francisco, Sally Stanford still is the Empress of 1144 Pine Street and America's No. 1 madam. Now she has written her memoirs "LADY OF THE HOUSE" (Putnam's, $4.95).

"I didn't set out to be a madame," Sally writes, "any more than Arthur Michael Ramsey—when he was a kid—figured on becoming archbishop of Canterbury. Things just sort of developed for both of us, I guess."

She recounts her three marriages, two educational years in the Salem, Ore., penitentiary ("a gal may learn more at Vassar but I doubt it"); a stint as Tenderloin madame; proprietess of the elegant Pine Street establishment; more recently Valhalla restaurant proprietor and politician.

She is full of opinions: sex (she is for it), capital punishment (against it), newspapermen (for and against), fame (yes) and fortune (absolutely!).

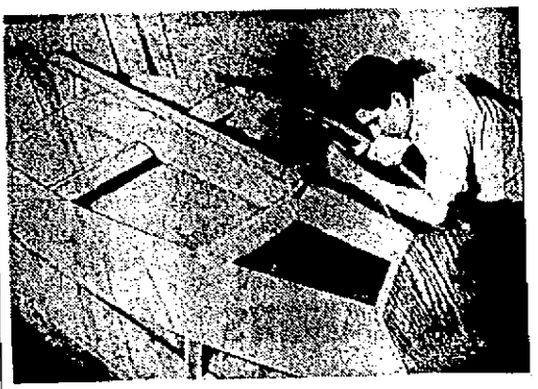
"THE MISSILE CRISIS" by Elie Abel, NBC's correspondent in London and Washington, D.C., (Lippincott, $4.95) sets down day by day, hour by hour, the development, climax and denouement of the Cuban missile crisis: those 13 tense days in October 1962 when young President Kennedy of the United States played nuclear poker with Nikita Khrushchev and won.

"How close we came to Armageddon," Abel says, "I did not fully realize until I started researching this book."

Abel's book amounts to the anatomy of a crisis, an analysis of how a major decision is reached. Historians describe and evaluate great events by hindsight. The men summoned by President Kennedy when the Cuban crisis broke had only incomplete information and prayerful guesswork with which to make a decision that would affect the rest of the world and could destroy it.

COMES NOW the Western to end Westerns: "THE BALLAD OF DINGUS MAGEE, Being the Immortal True Saga of the Most Notorious and Desperate Bad Man of the Olden Days, His Ruination of Poor Helpless Females, His Blood-Shedding & Cetera" by David Markson (Bobbs-Merrill, $4). It includes what the tongue-in-cheek author claims is the only reliable account of a heroic gun battle with Sheriff C. L. Hoke Birdsill in Yerkey's Hole, N.M., in 1884, a spirited account of a bordello burning and quite a bit about characters named Big Blouse Belle Nops, Anna Hot Water, and Horseface Agnes.

GRIZZLY ADAMS and his best friend, Ben Franklin, taking a paseo in the Sierra Nevada of California in the 1850s, and taken from "THE LEGEND OF GRIZZLY ADAMS" by Richard Dillon (Coward-McCann, $5).



AFTER 20 YEARS of running a secretarial service, Elma M. Williams bought a cottage and 40 acres in a wild part of Wales and started writing. She also began acquiring animals and one day she awakened to realize that the animals were the best subjects for her writing. She put them together into "VALLEY OF ANIMALS," a best seller in England and now printed in America (Day, $4.50).

The individuals with whom the author shares her home and her life are hens, cocks, dogs, cats, cobs (a Welsh kind of horse), goats and sheep. She doesn't oversentimentalize — she doesn't say they are better than or as good as people. She does say they are engrossing companions. A happy book.

HOW MANY successful men admit to selfishness as one of the secrets of their success? Nicholas Darvas does. In fact, Darvas, author of the international best seller, "How I Made $2,000,000 in the Stock Market," says that a man has little chance of becoming a success unless he is selfish.

In "THE ANATOMY OF SUCCESS" (Bobbs - Merrill, $5) he presents his theory of succes, the key to which is the Power of Positive Selfishness. It all goes back to Leo Durocher's observation: "Nice guys don't win ball games."

Science for You

By Bob Brown

PROBLEM: An air car.

NEEDED: An old long-playing record, a thread spool, a candle, a large rubber balloon, and a smooth surface.

DO THIS: Whittle one end of the spool down so the balloon can be slipped over it. Attach the other end of the spool to the center of the record with candle wax. The holes should match each other.

Inflate the balloon, slip its mouth over the spool, place the record on the smooth surface, release the balloon, and the record will glide with very little friction over the surface.

HERE'S WHY: When the record rests on the surface it tends to remain there because of the friction created when the surfaces move against each other. The air stream from the balloon puts a thin layer of air between the surfaces, eliminating most of the friction.

A collection of the "Science For You" experiments is in book form under the name "Science Circus." It is on sale in book stores.

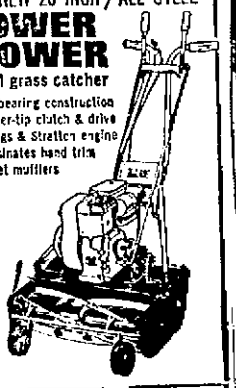
Q. When was the Pledge of Allegiance first used? — D.M.

A. The Pledge of Allegiance was first given on October 21, 1892 at the dedication of the World's Fair Grounds in Chicago.

Q. I know that people going up (or coming down) in planes chew gum because swallowing helps to equalize air pressure on the eardrums —but how does it do this? —T.N.



A. A small tube, called the eustachian tube, leads from the inner ear to the mouth, where its opening is ordinary covered by mucous membrane. At each swallow, this opening is momentarily uncovered as muscles lift the palate. Through the tube, air is exchanged between inner ear and mouth, and pressure leveled out (equalized).

Q. Are jousting tournaments held in the United States?—El.

A. With some modifications, this knightly sport is still popular among horsemen in such states as Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania, North Carolina, and West Virginia. Modern tournaments include much if the pageantry of medieval days, but modern knights no longer try to unhorse or kill each other. Instead, they attempt to spear with their lances tiny metal rings suspended on strings.

Lily With a Time Schedule

By Joe Littlefield

Natal, Fortnight Lily, Butterfly Lily, call it as you will, it's consistent, regular bloomer.

YOU MAY not find Moraea iridiodes "Natal or Fortnight Lily" listed in many nurseries. Landscape architects and landscape contractors frequently use them in their "minimum landscape" plantings, which is an indication these iris-like plants don't need to be babied or fussed with in order to grow well in your garden.

This evergreen, tuberous rooted perennial plant with erect sword-like foliage to two feet or taller, blossoms regularly almost the year around, usually about two week intervals. The flowers are white with spots of yellow at the heart of the blooms, and are considered somewhat iris-like in shape. One tall spike flowers for many days, because the blossoms don't all bloom at once.

This moraea will grow in half shade and half sun, or full sun, is a neat trim plant, may be used in tropical effect plantings, with conifers such as junipers, in perennial or annual flower beds as anchor plants for year round permanent effect, in front of low picture windows, as informal hedge plants bordering a driveway or a walk, bordering a patio, also as specimen container plants. Now, you can see why this is such a desirable plant for various landscape uses.

CHAMAELAUCIUM, "geraldton wax plant" should be pruned back at time flowers are cut for table decoration. As you cut the blooms, or cut back faded blossoms, decide where you think that particular branch should be cut, then ruthlessly do so. The needle-like foliage of this shrub is set close together, hence you don't have to be careful to cut above a node, or a side branch. Just cut where you think it helps to shape it, and you've done an expert pruning job.

Leptospermum "tea plants," too, are pruned the same way as the geraldton wax plants.

In the case of most shrubs whether evergreen or deciduous, we prune the plants as we cut the flowers for decoration, or we prune them when they have about finished blooming.

Some folk hesitate to prune camellia shrubs when they become overgrown, because they think they'll ruin the bush! We have pruned several of our own, and even cut inch-diameter branches. The larger cuts are painted over with a pruning compound to prevent dampness and dry weather from affecting the cut stubs.

WE APPLIED the same pruning principles we just explained to you. The only exception is, do not prune reticulata camellias till they have grown to maturity. (Incidentally, Mark Anthony, superintendent of Descanso Gardens in La Canada, has noticed that reticulata camellias grow happier where they get more sun rather than all shade.)

Plant more gladiolus for early summer crops of gorgeous blooms. By all means be sure to plant dahlias for summer and fall color for beautiful showy flowers, whether you favor the pompoms, in-betweens, or the huge varieties.

Work shovelful of manure or of planter much in each hole with half cup of bone meal, but be sure to mix it with the soil. Put several inches of plain soil on the prepared soil and soak down well. several weeks later set out the dahlia root. Your local nurserymen may have already the dahlia roots.

So's Y'r Old Man!

was considered great sport to upset these small buildings on Halloween. Well, we thought this was oldhat, so we refined the gag. We just moved them BACK four feet!

We used to make money selling junk to junkmen who came around with horses and wagons. We would divide our forces. While part of the crowd would lure the unsuspecting merchant up to the shack where we had our junk stored, the rest of the crowd would take stuff off his wagon and secrete it for sale to another merchant the next week!

In small towns, there always was a bandstand in the park. In the town where I lived, Haycock's Municipal Band used to give a concert every Thursday night. Our crowd used to badger these stalwart musicians by exploding firecrackers under their chairs and sucking on lemons in full view of the horn players. And every once in a while a balloon full of water would be hurled into the bell of the bass horn.

IT WASN'T JUST the kids who misbehaved in the "good old days," either.

I recall that every Christmas, in front of the Volunteer Fire Department, we would have a community Christmas tree. All the youngsters in town would assemble there the night before Christmas, and at a given signal, the lights would come on the tree. Everyone would go "ooh" and "aah" and then Santa would appear on the balcony and start distributing little gifts to the assembled kids.

Well, this one year, Santa's "Ho-Ho-Ho" began to get a bit fuzzy. Then it became garbled, and finally the jolly old gent toppled right off his dais, out cold.

A closer examination revealed that he had a bottle of "mountain dew" inside his voluminous Santa suit, and, as a protection against the cold, he had a tube running from the bottle up inside his tunic, under his beard and into his mouth. Guess it got just a little too cold for Santa!

So don't get all riled up, young people, when Dad starts telling you about the "good old days." Just remember what Ol' Ted has told you and indulge the old boy a bit.

You and I know that when people start talking about the "good old days," it means just one thing — they're getting old!

LIFE PARADE

Little Multiplier

By Eleanor Avery Price

Someone has said there are no such pets as two hamsters—the creatures multiply so rapidly.

FOR A dollar or two, you can get so many pets you won't know what to do! All it takes is a pair, male and female, of hamsters. In a matter of days, there will be a dozen or more scurrying little bear-like animals. In another month, your pets may number 30 or 40. And if you don't separate the male and female babies by age four weeks, you may as well move out and let the hamsters have your house.

Since a hamster doesn't mind a solitary life, it works out well if you get just one, or give each one its own individual pen, bird cage, or crude box with wire top. Be certain the pet can't nose out, and don't rely on twined wire, hook, or other easy-to-open catch. This smart creature will find a way out, if possible.

KEEP THE pen clean. White excelsior or clean white shavings, never sawdust or newspaper, should be used on the bottom of the home. In this, the pet will hoard food. This habit makes it possible for you to take a weekend off, knowing the hamster won't starve. Of course, at clean-up time, remove any stale food. Be sure he always has water, however. You can buy a hamster waterer at your pet shop.

The hamster likes rabbit pellets, poultry pellets, dog food, the dry cat foods, stale bread, nuts cereal, fruits and peelings, raw carrot and leafy greens. He may pack his pouch so he can nibble around the clock.

A hamster has no odor, seldom causes allergy, has no fleas and other parasites. He may nip if fingers are thrust through his cage or the nest he makes in the flooring. But he easily becomes quite tame and will ride on a child's shoulder if clipped with a tiny harness. He should be handled frequently to tame him. Pick him up by first removing his bedding and let him see your hand coming toward him. Get your hand over him quietly and grasp him from above. Don't hold him for long periods, and always give him a tidbit when you put him back in his cage.

DON'T ATTEMPT to pick up the very small hamster, as he easily slips free. An older hamster may bite, so don't pick him up until he is accustomed to your petting him gently when he is eating. Soon he will walk over your hand. He will learn to feel secure if the hand is moved slowly and gently.

Of interest to dog fanciers next Sunday, Motoc Obedience Club will have a match at Upland Memorial Park; basset hounds will stage a fun trial in San Gabriel Canyon, Azusa Avenue, north of Foothill Boulevard; pulik will be judged in a match at Griffith Park, Crystal Springs area.

A Great Place for Tom Sawyers

only 35 cents a box, I was in the money.

"Later I discovered the fellow was Jeffries. Man, did he like cottontails! I got to waiting for him every Saturday. He always bought."

A favorite spot of Snow's was the swampy land below Rancho Los Alamitos. Here vegetation grew rank in the black peat soil—willows, wild blackberries, tules. Cattle had forced tunnels through the thicket. Overhead you couldn't see daylight. This was the home of innumerable birds, the skunk that you treated with respect, a few badgers, and on the outer edges, cottontails. In the stream were catfish like you see or taste once in a lifetime.

Sometimes the boys didn't make it home by nightfall and slept in Bixby's barn. Fred Bixby only cautioned, "No smoking, boys."

Somehow it never entered Snow's mind that his parents would worry any more than it did Vic's the day he and an older brother took two friends out in their 16-foot dory. Someone mentioned Catalina and they were off. It was 9 in the morning. There was a good off-shore breeze. Came evening and four weary boys rode in on the rocky beach at Avalon Harbor and began stowing their sail. An official greeted them with, "Only Banning Company boats can land here."

Fortunately a well-dressed gentleman stepped out of the gathering crowd and asked, "You kids really sailed this thing from Long Beach? Do your folks know where you are?"

"We hadn't even thought of our folks," Vic says. "Here it was nearly night. There was no telephone or telegraph service between Avalon and Long Beach."

The gentleman, who seemed to have some authority, made arrangements for the boys to stay overnight. He fed them and got them a room. After breakfast next morning he saw that they had checked and filled their water breaker. Then he read the riot act. "He hoped our parents would whip us for the worry we were causing them. And they did, too, after they'd called off the Coast Guard search."

The Good Samaritan's name? Vic admits that he forgot to ask.

Looking back on some of their escapades, Vic and Snow suffer occasional pangs of remorse at their thoughtlessness. "We were too busy, I guess," Vic says. "There was just too much to see and do in one childhood if you lived in early-day Long Beach."

Snow agrees. "It was a great place to grow up in. And Vic and I had the best of it."

Shakespeare Said It;
Gardeners Know:

What's in a Name?

By Prof. Harold G. Black

DAISY
Alludes to day's eye or opening of bloom by day.

MANY a reader of these pages will know that the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D.C., was named for James Smithson, a British scientist, who left $5,500,000 to the United States in 1829 for the "increase and diffusion of knowledge among men," just as will any Rhodes scholar know that the famous Bodleian Library at Oxford University took its name from Sir Thomas Bodley, who rebuilt an older library that had been almost totally destroyed, and added to it his own valuable collection of books and manuscripts. Thus preserved for posterity are the names of Smithson and Bodley.

Many other names have been somewhat similarly preserved and perpetuated

BEGONIA
Michel Begon contributed his name to this flower.

but in a quite different medium, that is, in the names given to flowers and shrubs and plants of various kinds. The dahlia, gaillardia, gloxinia, and lobelia, for example, are all named for botanists: A. Dahl (Swedish), Gaillard de Marentonneau (French), B. P. Gloxin (German), and Matthias de Lobel (Flemish).

LIKEWISE the word begonal has in it the name of Michel Begon, governor of Santo Domingo; bougainvillea, that of Antoine de Bougainville, a French fighter in the American Revolutionary War; camellia, that of G. J. Kemel or Camelli (Italian form), a Jesuit; poinsettia, that of Joel R. Poinsett of South Carolina; weigelia, that of a Swedish physician named C. E. Weigel; and zinnia, that of J. G. Zinn, a professor of medicine in Gottingen. In the word forsythia is seen the name of William Forsyth, credited with bringing that ornamental shrub from China.

I once challenged a high-school class in English to spell the name of one of our commonest flowers. Several students quickly volunteered, but all failed! I then explained to them that the spelling was simple if only they would remember that the flower was named for Leonhard Fuchs, a German botanist. Thereafter they could all spell fuchsia right—the first time!

The origin of the names of of many of our well known flowers is worth examining—and remembering. Etymologists like to point out, for example, that the agapanthus is literally a love-flower (Gr. agape, love; anthos, flower). Calendula—this name goes back into Roman history, to the Roman calends, that is, the first day of the month, when that plant was supposed to begin blossoming. The Greek word akantha, meaning thorn, gives us the name acanthus. The peony derives its name from Paion, the Greek god of healing.

IN THE WORD coreopsis is an allusion to the appearance of the seed (Gr. koris, bug; opsis, appearance). Narcissus comes straight out of Greek mythology, wherein is told the tragic story of the handsome youth with whom Echo had vainly fallen in love. To preserve his memory after his death a purple flower, surrounded by white leaves, miraculously sprang up.

The word asphodel comes from the Greek asphodelos by way of the Latin. Strangely enough, daffodil has the same Greek origin but suffered considerable change in spelling as it passed through Latin and old French to the Dutch form de affodil. Cosmos (order, harmony, world) is an unchanged Greek word, just as laburnum is the flower's original Latin name.

Though the names of most flowers are of Greek ancestry, many are derived from the language of Virgil. The diminutive form of the Latin word rana (frog), for example, gives us ranunculus, meaning tadpole. Pansy stems from the Latin infinitive pensare, to think, through the French pensee, meaning thought. In the play of Hamlet, it will be recalled, the demented Ophelia says, "There is pansies; that's for thoughts." In primrose is seen the Latin primus, meaning first. The name cineraria suggest the ash-

DAHLIA
Bears name of A. Dahl, a Swedish botanist of note.

colored down easily visible on that plant's leaves (L. cinis, ashes).

DAISY—Shasta or otherwise — is Anglo-Saxon in derivation (daeges eage, day's eye), because the openinng of its petals came with the break of day. Caladium has an Asiatic origin, kaladi being the Malay name of the plant. Lilac has a long history, traceable through the French, Spanish, and Arabian languages but coming originally from the Persian nilak, meaning bluish. The word tulip is of Turkish descent (Turk. tulbend, a turban).

If one knows that dendron is Greek for tree, that rhodon means rose, and philein to love, one will readily understand the meaning of rhododendron and philodendron. Azalea is from the Greek azaleos, meaning dry, an allusion to the dry ground in which it was supposed to grow best. Marigold has in it the name of the Virgin Mary plus gold, and in German appears as Goldblume.

Canterbury bells are so called because the flowers grow in profusion around Canterbury, England. Gladiolus is the diminutive form of the Latin gladius (meaning both a sword and a sword lily) because of the shape of its leaves. Phlox is the name the Greeks gave to that flower because of its flame color (Gr. phlegein, to burn). The heliotrope is so called because it turns toward the sun (Gr. helios, sun; trope, a turning).

CHRYSANTHEMUM means golden flower (Gr. chrysos, gold; anthemon, flower). The aster (Gr. aster, star) has a starlike appearance. Hibiscus is the Latin word for the marshmallow, a plant having soft, downy leaves. Jonquil (L. juncus, a rush or reed) comes through the Spanish and then the French jonquille.

Penstemon (Gr. pente, five); stamon, stamen) suggests its five stamens, usually one more than in kindred plants. The pelargonium is so named from the resemblance of its beaked capsules to a stork's bill; and the geranium (Gr. geranion, crane's bill) for a similar reason—in reference to the long projecting beak in its seed capsules. The word anemone, spelled the same way in Greek, comes from anemos, wind.

Perhaps these brief explanations of the origin of the names of many flowers and shrubs which are more or less familiar across the country will stimulate the etymologically inclined reader to pursue the subject still further.

AZALEA
Name derived from Greek allusion to dry ground.

CAMELLIA
Recalls G. J. Kemel, or Camelli (Italian form).

GAILLARDIA
Named for Gaillard de Marentonneau, botanist.

Tale of Woman Trail-Blazer

GRIZZLY ADAMS and his best friend, Ben Franklin, taking a paseo in the Sierra Nevada of California in the 1850s, and taken from "THE LEGEND OF GRIZZLY ADAMS" by Richard Dillon (Coward-McCann, $5).

By Vera Williams

WHEN MARTIN Johnson of Independence, Kan., signed on as a cook with Jack London on a tour of the South Seas on London's 47-foot vessel, the Snark, in 1909, no one suspected he would win world acclaim as an explorer. When he married Osa Leighty of Chanute, Kan., in 1910, none dreamed that the Kansas beauty would be the first white woman to reach the then unexplored headwaters of the Kinabatanga river and the first to enter the territory of the Tenggara headhunters!

Ironically, after years of flying his own plane over uncharted jungle territory, Martin Johnson was killed in an airplane accident Jan. 13, 1937, near San Fernando. Osa died in New York Jan. 7, 1953.

More than a decade after Osa's death her personal possessions were opened to place their contents in the Martin & Osa Johnson Safari Museum in Chanute, Kan. An unpublished account of the last journey of the husband and wife team to Borneo was unearthed.

Entitled "LAST ADVENTURE," the book, edited by Pascal James Imeparto, M.D., of Ozone Park, an honorary director of the Safari Museum, has been published by William Morrow & Co. ($4.50).

Osa Johnson, author of "I Married Adventure" and "Bride in the Solomons," wrote in her introduction to "Last Adventure": "The entire story in this book is true. It is truly the missing chapter in the life of Martin Johnson and myself that has never been in book form before now." Photographs, she said, were taken in North Borneo by her husband and herself.

"Our expeditions were fraught with many dangers from the diseases, dangerous game and primitive headhunters that lurked in the dark recesses of a hostile and unknown environment," she added.

Stay-at-home travelers will get many vicarious thrills from the pages of Osa Johnson's entertaining farewell volume.

TO COUNTLESS men who knew her famous palace of pleasure in San Francisco, Sally Stanford still is the Empress of 1144 Pine Street and America's No. 1 madam. Now she has written her memoirs "LADY OF THE HOUSE" (Putnam's, $4.95).

"I didn't set out to be a madame," Sally writes, "any more than Arthur Michael Ramsey—when he was a kid—figured on becoming archbishop of Canterbury. Things just sort of developed for both of us, I guess."

She recounts her three marriages, two educational years in the Salem, Ore., penitentiary ("a gal may learn more at Vassar but I doubt it"); a stint as Tender-loin madame; proprietess of the elegant Pine Street establishment; more recently Valhalla restaurant proprietor and politician.

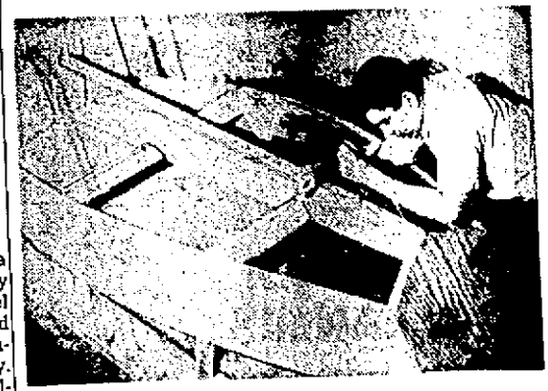
She is full of opinions: sex (she is for it), capital punishment (against it), newspapermen (for and against), fame (yes) and fortune (absolutely!).

"THE MISSILE CRISIS" by Elie Abel, NBC's correspondent in London and Washington, D.C., (Lippincott, $4.95) sets down day by day, hour by hour, the development, climax and denouement of the Cuban missile crisis: those 13 tense days in October 1962 when young President Kennedy of the United States played nuclear poker with Nikita Khrushchev and won.

"How close we came to Armageddon," Abel says, "I did not fully realize until I started researching this book."

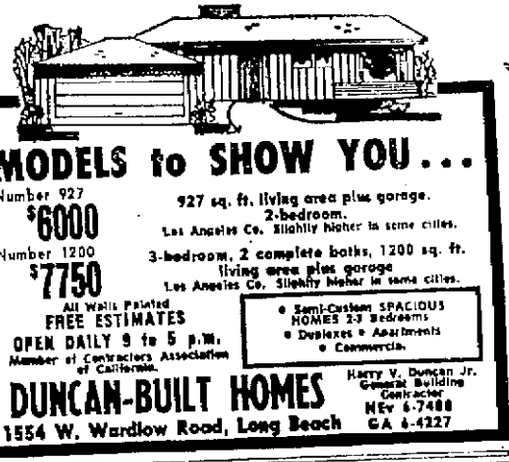
Abel's book amounts to the anatomy of a crisis, an analysis of how a major decision is reached. Historians describe and evaluate great events by hindsight. The men summoned by President Kennedy when the Cuban crisis broke had only incomplete information and prayerful guesswork with which to make a decision that would affect the rest of the world and could destroy it.

COMES NOW the Western to end Westerns: "THE BALLAD OF DINGUS MAGEE, Being the Immortal True Saga of the Most Notorious and Desperate Bad Man of the Olden Days, His Ruination of Poor Helpless Females, His Blood-Shedding & Cetera" by David Markson (Bobbs-Merrill, $4). It includes what the tongue-in-cheek author claims is the only reliable account of a heroic gun battle with Sheriff C. L. Hoke Birdsill in Yerkey's Hole, N.M., in 1884, a spirited account of a bordello burning and quite a bit about characters named Big Blouse Belle Nops, Anna Hot Water, and Horseface Agnes.



AFTER 20 YEARS of running a secretarial service, Elma M. Williams bought a cottage and 40 acres in a wild part of Wales and started writing. She also began acquiring animals and one day, she awakened to realize that the animals were the best subjects for her writing. She put them together into "VALLEY OF ANIMALS," a best seller in England and now printed in America (Day, $4.50).

The individuals with whom the author shares her home and her life are hens, cocks, dogs, cats, cobs (a Welsh kind of horse), goats and sheep. She doesn't oversentimentalize — she doesn't say they are better than or as good as people. She does say they are engrossing companions. A happy book.



HOW MANY successful men admit to selfishness as one of the secrets of their success? Nicholas Darvas does. In fact, Darvas, author of the international best seller, "How I Made $2,000,000 in the Stock Market," says that a man has little chance of becoming a success unless he is selfish.

In "THE ANATOMY OF SUCCESS" (Bobbs - Merrill, $5) he presents his theory of succes, the key to which is the Power of Positive Selfishness. It all goes back to Leo Durocher's observation: "Nice guys don't win ball games."

Science Throws a CURV

Called CURV, this strange device is a Navy unit for recovering expensive military hardware from the ocean floor off the Southern California coast.

By Walter Finch

SCIENTISTS have thrown the U.S. Navy a CURV that is saving the government millions of dollars.

This CURV stands for Cable Controlled Underwater Research Vehicle, a maze of wires, tubes, lights and cables developed at the Pasadena Laboratory of the U.S. Naval Ordnance Station.

Recently put into operation, CURV is used to recover expensive research ordnance including dummy missiles from the ocean floor.

NOT ONLY does the device provide big savings by recovering such expensive ordnance as torpedoes for re-use, it also provides the experts with a chance to study test hardware for possible weakness in design or construction.

Unmanned, CURV is comprised of a tubular aluminum frame four feet high, four feet wide and 11 feet long, upon which are mounted four ballast tanks, three propulsion motors (port, starboard and vertical) with screws, a hydraulic system, acoustic instrumentation, TV camera, mercury vapor lights, deep-sea camera, recovery claw and recovery buoy.

WEIGHING one ton, it presently operates to 1,000 feet, but the depth will be doubled soon by modifications.

CURV is tended by a Navy tug that carries the control console from which the five-man CURV crew directs, controls and monitors recovery operations.

After the general location of a "target" recovery is determined, CURV is put into the water, searches out the "target" and recovers it on its own.

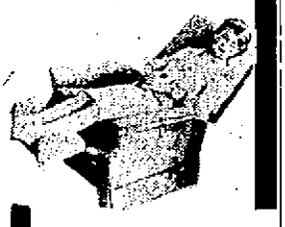
teas, announced to the public through the morning papers, and parties for judges, diplomats, congressmen became fashionable. Then came the woman reporter who wrote up the costumes, and the new era was on. The last dinner given by the Grants was for incoming President Rutherford Hayes, and the usual 20 courses, with six liqueur glasses at each plate, must have surprised the temperance Hayeses.

Lucy Webb Hayes, college graduate and WCTU worker, served no liquor or wine; she began the custom of signaling the end of a reception with "Home Sweet Home"; brought the egg rolling at Easter to the White House lawn, and was the first White House mistress to visit the West Coast during their administration.

SCHOLARLY Lucretia Garfield had ambitions to make the White House a literary center, but was cut short from anything social when President Garfield died of an assassin's bullet Sept. 19, 1881.

Ellen Herndon Arthur had died the previous year, and President Arthur was the fourth widower President of the 19th century. Mary McElroy, his sister, was hostess.

Grover Cleveland, second bachelor President, also had his sister, Rose, as hostess. She was a teacher, writer and lecturer, and only too happy when Frances Folsom became the first bride married to a President in the White House itself.



Caroline Scott Harrison, one of the most gifted First Ladies, did much toward saving the better collections of china, etc., in permanent collections. When electric lights were installed, she persuaded one of the helpers, Ike Hoover, to stay on, which he did for 42 years. Mrs. Harrison was the second White House mistress to die there.

Ida Saxon McKinley, an invalid, was in the White House Dec. 12, 1900, at the beginning of the Centennial Fete to commemorate its first hundred years. One hundred years before, Abigail Adams had declared, "It is twice as big as our meeting house . . . built for ages to come."

Better Pansies

Pansies are bigger and better this year, so don't miss out on the sturdy F1 hybrids. You may find they are rather scarce, but keep looking for them. Quick to produce a big show, these husky, giant-flowered plants possess remarkable vigor and keep blooming freely even after the weather gets warm. Pansies need plenty of moisture and deeply enriched soil to do their beautiful best, so don't skimp on organic matter when you're preparing their beds. Give them half shade in warm areas. Boost them along with the fertilizer your C.A.N. nurseryman recommends.

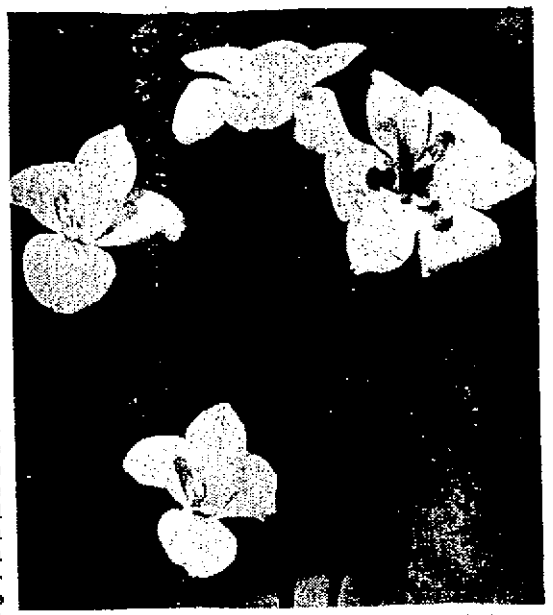
Lily With a Time Schedule

By Joe Littlefield



YOU MAY not find Moraea iridiodes "Natal or Fortnight Lily" listed in many nurseries. Landscape architects and landscape contractors frequently use them in their "minimum landscape" plantings, which is an indication these iris-like plants don't need to be babied or fussed with in order to grow well in your garden.

This evergreen, tuberous rooted perennial plant with erect sword-like foliage to two feet or taller, blossoms regularly almost the year around, usually about two week intervals. The flowers are white with spots of yellow at the heart of the blooms, and are considered somewhat iris-like in shape. One tall spike flowers for many days, because the blossoms don't all bloom at once.

This moraea will grow in half shade and half sun, or full sun, is a neat trim plant, may be used in tropical effect plantings, with conifers such as junipers, in perennial or annual flower beds as anchor plants for year round permanent effect, in front of low picture windows, as informal hedge plants bordering a driveway or a walk, bordering a patio, also as specimen container plants. Now, you can see why this is such a desirable plant for various landscape uses.

CHAMAELAUCIUM, "geraldton wax plant" should be pruned back at time flowers are cut for table decoration. As you cut the blooms, or cut back faded blossoms, decide where you think that particular branch should be cut, then ruthlessly do so. The needle-like foliage of this shrub is set close together, hence you don't have to be careful to cut above a node, or a side branch. Just cut where you think it helps to shape it, and you've done an expert pruning job.

Leptospermum "tea plants," too, are pruned the same way as the geraldton wax plants.

Natal, Fortnight Lily, Butterfly Lily, call it as you will, it's consistent, regular bloomer.

In the case of most shrubs whether evergreen or deciduous, we prune the plants as we cut the flowers for decoration, or we prune them when they have about finished blooming.

Some folk hesitate to prune camellia shrubs when they become overgrown, because they think they'll ruin the bush! We have pruned several of our own, and even cut inch-diameter branches. The larger cuts are painted over with a pruning compound to prevent dampness and dry weather from affecting the cut stubs.

WE APPLIED the same pruning principles we just explained to you. The only exception is, do not prune reticulata camellias till they have grown to maturity. (Incidentally, Mark Anthony, superintendent of Descanso Gardens in La Canada, has noticed that reticulata camellias grow happier where they get more sun rather than all shade.)

Plant more gladiolus for early summer crops of gorgeous blooms. By all means be sure to plant dahlias for summer and fall color for beautiful showy flowers, whether you favor the pompoms, in-betweens, or the huge varieties.

Work shovelful of manure or of planter much in each hole with half cup of bone meal, but be sure to mix it with the soil. Put several inches of plain soil on the prepared soil and soak down well. several weeks later set out the dahlia root. Your local nurserymen may have already the dahlia roots.

So's Y'r Old Man!

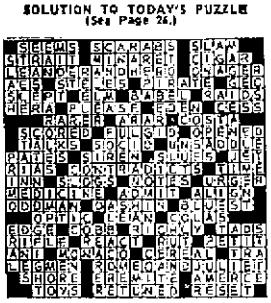
was considered great sport to upset these small buildings on Halloween. Well, we thought this was oldhat, so we refined the gag. We just moved them BACK four feet!

We used to make money selling junk to junkmen who came around with horses and wagons. We would divide our forces. While part of the crowd would lure the unsuspecting merchant up to the shack where we had our junk stored, the rest of the crowd would take stuff off his wagon and secrete it for sale to another merchant the next week!

In small towns, there always was a bandstand in the park. In the town where I lived, Haycock's Municipal Band used to give a concert every Thursday night. Our crowd used to badger these stalwart musicians by exploding firecrackers under their chairs and sucking on lemons in full view of the horn players. And every once in a while a balloon full of water would be hurled into the bell of the bass horn.

IT WASN'T JUST the kids who misbehaved in the "good old days," either.

I recall that every Christmas, in front of the Volunteer Fire Department, we would have a community Christmas tree. All the youngsters in town would assemble there the night before Christmas, and at a given signal, the lights would come on the tree. Everyone would go "ooh" and "aah" and then Santa would appear on the balcony and start distributing little gifts to the assembled kids.



Well, this one year, Santa's "Ho-Ho-Ho" began to get a bit fuzzy. Then it became garbled, and finally the jolly old gent toppled right off his dais, out cold.

A closer examination revealed that he had a bottle of "mountain dew" inside his voluminous Santa suit, and, as a protection against the cold, he had a tube running from the bottle up inside his tunic, under his beard and into his mouth. Guess it got just a little too cold for Santa!

So don't get all riled up, young people, when Dad starts telling you about the "good old days." Just remember what Ol' Ted has told you and indulge the old boy a bit.

You and I know that when people start talking about the "good old days," it means just one thing — they're getting old!

"THEY ARE the work of a most unusual man . . ."

With these words, Nolbert Moreno, host at Moreno's Restaurante, 3490 Long Beach Blvd., pays tribute to the artist who created 10 unique museum pieces which are displayed in the lobby of this distinguished Mexican dining establishment. The restaurant reopened recently after being closed nearly a month following a $25,000 fire in the lounge and dining room.

The art objects, fastened to a wall, are small, beautifully executed replicas of ancient Mayan and Aztec figures. Included are a Mezcala man, dating from 300 B.C.; a 16th century dwarf king and carved pictographs representing three Aztec glyphs. The replicas were produced by the late J. Hubert Mulvey, a Long Beach man who was a friend of Moreno for more than 30 years. Mulvey's life was a remarkable, exciting combination of criminal investigation and art. For two decades he was a top special agent with the attorney general's office, doing exhaustive detective work on numerous major crimes. Among the cases he helped investigate were the Krishna Venta religious cult explosion near Chatsworth in 1858 (which killed 10 cultists) and the Overell yacht blast at Newport Beach in 1947.

Mulvey was also an active amateur archaeologist, sculptor and painter. During vacation trips to Mexico, he explored the ruins of Mayan and Aztec temples, sketching countless objects of their art and culture. Returning home, he reproduced his sketches in molds, making casts like those exhibited at Moreno's.

The restaurant, beautifully modern, offers Mexican-American cuisine created from recipes which have been in the Moreno family for generations. Featured are enchiladas served in a variety of ways, seared steaks with delectable Mexican sauces, sea foods and such traditional American fare as a steak-lobster combination. Dinner prices are from $2.50 to $4.75.

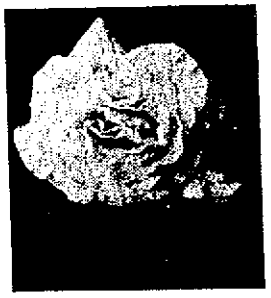
Shakespeare Said It;
Gardeners Know:

What's in a Name?



By Prof. Harold G. Black

DAISY
Alludes to day's eye or opening of bloom by day.

MANY a reader of these pages will know that the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D.C., was named for James Smithson, a British scientist, who left $5,500,000 to the United States in 1829 for the "increase and diffusion of knowledge among men," just as will any Rhodes scholar know that the famous Bodleian Library at Oxford University took its name from Sir Thomas Bodley, who rebuilt an older library that had been almost totally destroyed, and added to it his own valuable collection of books and manuscripts. Thus preserved for posterity are the names of Smithson and Bodley.

Many other names have been somewhat similarly preserved and perpetuated

BEGONIA
Michel Begon contributed his name to this flower.

but in a quite different medium, that is, in the names given to flowers and shrubs and plants of various kinds. The dahlia, gaillardia, gloxinia, and lobelia, for example, are all named for botanists: A. Dahl (Swedish), Gaillard de Marentonneau (French), B. P. Gloxin (German), and Matthias de Lobel (Flemish).

LIKEWISE the word begonal has in it the name of Michel Begon, governor of Santo Domingo; bougainvillea, that of Antoine de Bougainville, a French fighter in the American Revolutionary War; camellia, that of G. J. Kemel or Camelli (Italian form), a Jesuit; poinsettia, that of Joel R. Poinsett of South Carolina; weigelia, that of a Swedish physician named C. E. Weigel; and zinnia, that of J. G. Zinn, a professor of medicine in Gottingen. In the word forsythia is seen the name of William Forsyth, credited with bringing that ornamental shrub from China.

I once challenged a high-school class in English to spell the name of one of our commonest flowers. Several students quickly volunteered, but all failed! I then explained to them that the spelling was simple if only they would remember that the flower was named for Leonhard Fuchs, a German botanist. Thereafter they could all spell fuchsia right —the first time!

The origin of the names of of many of our well known flowers is worth examining—and remembering. Etymologists like to point out, for example, that the agapanthus is literally a love-flower (Gr. agape, love; anthos, flower). Calendula—this name goes back into Roman history, to the Roman calends, that is, the first day of the month, when that plant was supposed to begin blossoming. The Greek word akantha, meaning thorn, gives us the name acanthus. The peony derives its name from Paion, the Greek god of healing.

IN THE WORD coreopsis is an allusion to the appearance of the seed (Gr. koris, bug; opsis, appearance). Narcissus comes straight out of Greek mythology, wherein is told the tragic story of the handsome youth with whom Echo had vainly fallen in love. To preserve his memory after his death a purple flower, surrounded by white leaves, miraculously sprang up.

The word asphodel comes from the Greek asphodelos by way of the Latin. Strangely enough, daffodil has the same Greek origin but suffered considerable change in spelling as it passed through Latin and old French to the Dutch form de affodil. Cosmos (order, harmony, world) is an unchanged Greek word, just as laburnum is the flower's original Latin name.

Though the names of most flowers are of Greek ancestry, many are derived from the language of Virgil. The diminutive form of the Latin word rana (frog), for example, gives us ranunculus, meaning tadpole. Pansy stems from the Latin infinitive pensare, to think, through the French pensee, meaning thought. In the play of Hamlet, it will be recalled, the demented Ophelia says, "There is pansies; that's for thoughts." In primrose is seen the Latin primus, meaning first. The name cineraria suggest the ash-colored down easily visible on that plant's leaves (L. cinis, ashes).

DAHLIA
Bears name of A. Dahl, a Swedish botanist of note.

DAISY — Shasta or otherwise — is Anglo-Saxon in derivation (daeges eage, day's eye), because the openinng of its petals came with the break of day. Caladium has an Asiatic origin, kaladi being the Malay name of the plant. Lilac has a long history, traceable through the French, Spanish, and Arabian languages but coming originally from the Persian nilak, meaning bluish. The word tulip is of Turkish descent (Turk. tulbend, a turban).

If one knows that dendron is Greek for tree, that rhodon means rose, and philein to love, one will readily understand the meaning of rhododendron and philodendron. Azalea is from the Greek azaleos, meaning dry, an allusion to the dry ground in which it was supposed to grow best. Marigold has in it the name of the Virgin Mary plus gold, and in German appears as Goldblume.

Canterbury bells are so called because the flowers grow in profusion around Canterbury, England. Gladiolus is the diminutive form of the Latin gladius (meaning both a sword and a sword lily) because of the shape of its leaves. Phlox is the name the Greeks gave to that flower because of its flame color (Gr. phlegein, to burn). The heliotrope is so called because it turns toward the sun (Gr. helios, sun; trope, a turning).

CHRYSANTHEMUM means golden flower (Gr. chrysos, gold; anthemon, flower). The aster (Gr. aster, star) has a starlike appearance. Hibiscus is the Latin word for the marshmallow, a plant having soft, downy leaves. Jonquil (L. juncus, a rush or reed) comes through the Spanish and then the French jonquille.

Penstemon (Gr. pente, five); stamon, stamen) suggests its five stamens, usually one more than in kindred plants. The pelargonium is so named from the resemblance of its beaked capsules to a stork's bill; and the geranium (Gr. geranion, crane's bill) for a similar reason—in reference to the long projecting beak in its seed capsules. The word anemone, spelled the same way in Greek, comes from anemos, wind.

Perhaps these brief explanations of the origin of the names of many flowers and shrubs which are more or less familiar across the country will stimulate the etymologically inclined reader to pursue the subject still further.

AZALEA
Name derived from Greek allusion to dry ground.

CAMELLIA
Recalls G. J. Kemel, or Camelli (Italian form).

GAILLARDIA
Named for Gaillard de Marentonneau, botanist.

Science Throws a CURV

Called CURV, this strange device is a Navy unit for recovering expensive military hardware from the ocean floor off the Southern California coast.

By Walter Finch

SCIENTISTS have thrown the U.S. Navy a CURV that is saving the government millions of dollars.

This CURV stands for Cable Controlled Underwater Research Vehicle, a maze of wires, tubes, lights and cables developed at the Pasadena Laboratory of the U.S. Naval Ordnance Station.

Recently put into operation, CURV is used to recover expensive research ordnance including dummy missiles from the ocean floor.

NOT ONLY does the device provide big savings by recovering such expensive ordnance as torpedoes for re-use, it also provides the experts with a chance to study test hardware for possible weakness in design or construction.

Unmanned, CURV is comprised of a tubular aluminum frame four feet high, four feet wide and 11 feet long, upon which are mounted four ballast tanks, three propulsion motors (port, starboard and vertical) with screws, a hydraulic system, acoustic instrumentation, TV camera, mercury vapor lights, deep-sea camera, recovery claw and recovery buoy.

WEIGHING one ton, it presently operates to 1,000 feet, but the depth will be doubled soon by modifications.

CURV is tended by a Navy tug that carries the control console from which the five-man CURV crew directs, controls and monitors recovery operations.

After the general location of a "target" recovery is determined, CURV is put into the water, searches out the "target" and recovers it on its own.

teas, announced to the public through the morning papers, and parties for judges, diplomats, congressmen became fashionable. Then came the woman reporter who wrote up the costumes, and the new era was on. The last dinner given by the Grants was for incoming President Rutherford Hayes, and the usual 20 courses, with six liqueur glasses at each plate, must have surprised the temperance Hayeses.

Lucy Webb Hayes, college graduate and WCTU worker, served no liquor or wine; she began the custom of signaling the end of a reception with "Home Sweet Home"; brought the egg rolling at Easter to the White House lawn, and was the first White House mistress to visit the West Coast during their administration.

SCHOLARLY Lucretia Garfield had ambitions to make the White House a literary center, but was cut short from anything social when President Garfield died of an assassin's bullet Sept. 19, 1881.

Ellen Herndon Arthur had died the previous year, and President Arthur was the fourth widower President of the 19th century. Mary McElroy, his sister, was hostess.

Grover Cleveland, second bachelor President, also had his sister, Rose, as hostess. She was a teacher, writer and lecturer, and only too happy when Frances Folsom became the first bride married to a President in the White House itself.

Caroline Scott Harrison, one of the most gifted First Ladies, did much toward saving the better collections of china, etc., in permanent collections. When electric lights were installed, she persuaded one of the helpers, Ike Hoover, to stay on, which he did for 42 years. Mrs. Harrison was the second White House mistress to die there.

Ida Saxon McKinley, an invalid, was in the White House Dec. 12, 1900, at the beginning of the Centennial Fete to commemorate its first hundred years. One hundred years before, Abigail Adams had declared, "It is twice as big as our meeting house . . . built for ages to come."

Better Pansies

Pansies are bigger and better this year, so don't miss out on the sturdy F1 hybrids. You may find they are rather scarce, but keep looking for them. Quick to produce a big show, these husky, giant-flowered plants possess remarkable vigor and keep blooming freely even after the weather gets warm. Pansies need plenty of moisture and deeply enriched soil to do their beautiful best, so don't skimp on organic matter when you're preparing their beds. Give them half shade in warm areas. Boost them along with the fertilizer your C.A.N. nurseryman recommends.

"THEY ARE the work of a most unusual man . . ."

With these words, Nolbert Moreno, host at Moreno's Restaurante, 3490 Long Beach Blvd., pays tribute to the artist who created 10 unique museum pieces which are displayed in the lobby of this distinguished Mexican dining establishment. The restaurant reopened recently after being closed nearly a month following a $25,000 fire in the lounge and dining room.

The art objects, fastened to a wall, are small, beautifully executed replicas of ancient Mayan and Aztec figures. Included are a Mezcala man, dating from 300 B.C.; a 16th century dwarf king and carved pictographs representing three Aztec glyphs. The replicas were produced by the late J. Hubert Mulvey, a Long Beach man who was a friend of Moreno for more than 30 years. Mulvey's life was a remarkable, exciting combination of criminal investigation and art. For two decades he was a top special agent with the attorney general's office, doing exhaustive detective work on numerous major crimes. Among the cases he helped investigate were the Krishna Venta religious cult explosion near Chatsworth in 1858 (which killed 10 cultists) and the Overell yacht blast at Newport Beach in 1947.

Mulvey was also an active amateur archaeologist, sculptor and painter. During vacation trips to Mexico, he explored the ruins of Mayan and Aztec temples, sketching countless objects of their art and culture. Returning home, he reproduced his sketches in molds, making casts like those exhibited at Moreno's.

The restaurant, beautifully modern, offers Mexican-American cuisine created from recipes which have been in the Moreno family for generations. Featured are enchiladas served in a variety of ways, seared steaks with delectable Mexican sauces, sea foods and such traditional American fare as a steak-lobster combination. Dinner prices are from $2.50 to $4.75.

Q. Is it true that a Chicago press agent named Julius Klein, who represents West Germany, owns Sen. Thomas Dodd of Connecticut lock, stock and barrel?—A. Johnson, Los Angeles, Calif.

A. No one owns Senator Dodd lock, stock, and barrel. The senator happens to be a most generous fellow who has performed some unusual favors for Julius Klein, details of which are now coming to light.

Q. How many times did Ernest Hemingway win the Pulitzer Prize? In what years? For what works?—I.M., Knoxville, Tenn.

A. Hemingway won the Pulitzer Prize in 1953 for The Old Man and the Sea, the Nobel Prize for Literature one year later.

Q. Did her parents christen her Lady Bird or was that name given to Mrs. Johnson by her husband?—Chas. W. Ferguson, Dallas, Tex.

A. She was christened Claudia Alta Taylor, acquired the name, Lady Bird, when Alice Tittle, her nursemaid, described her at the age of 2 as being "as purty as a lady bird."

Q. I am writing a paper on the late Somerset Maugham, and I cannot find out anywhere why he decided to leave England in 1928 and move to France. Can you help?—Dianne Blakely, Palos Verdes, Calif.

A. Maugham became attracted to Gerald Haxton, a young American who had been arrested in London on a charge of gross indecency. Later, Haxton was declared an undesirable alien and banned from England for life. It was then that Maugham bought the Villa Mauresque on Cap Ferrat where Haxton lived with him for years. Maugham's wife, Syrie, found out about the relationship very early in the game and of course divorced him. Haxton died during World War II after having spent 25 years with Maugham who wrote most guardedly of their relationship.

Q. Maurice Chevalier—did he collaborate with the Nazis during the German occupation of France?—Daniel Jensen, Springfield, Mo.

A. Chevalier lived in Vichy, France, for a period during the occupation. He sang for Nazi audiences in Paris and also in Germany for French prisoners of war in German war camps. He was later exonerated of any collaboration with the Germans during the occupation.

Q. I understand that various food manufacturers place the letter "K" on their labels so that Negroes will know it stands for Martin Luther King and will thereby purchase the products. Is that so?—J.L.R., Raceland, La.

A. The "K" stands for kosher, a word denoting the food has been prepared according to proper Jewish ritual.

Q. The real name, please, of Julie Andrews.—Kristi Gigliotti, Woodbury, N.Y.

A. Julia Wells.

Q. I would like to know the educational background of David Nelson, Rick Nelson, and Elvis Presley. I've heard that all three are graduates of U.C.L.A. Somehow I can't believe it's true.—J. Schneider, St. Louis, Mo.

A. David and Ricky Nelson were graduated from Hollywood High School, Presley from Humes High School in Memphis. None are college graduates.

Q. Please run the latest picture of Dolores Del Rio and tell the secret of her everlasting beauty. I understand she is really 75 years old but falls in love with teenaged boys so that her youth can be constantly reinforced.—S.E.P., San Antonio, Tex.

A. Dolores Del Rio is at least 60, certainly not more than 65. She attributes her beauty to rest and diet, not teenagers.

Q. How many honorary degrees does Bob Hope have and from where?—Ellen Hartman, Cleveland, Ohio.

A. Hope has six honorary degrees, one each from Pennsylvania Military College, Quincy College, University of Wyoming, Georgetown University, Monmouth College and Whittier College.

Q. When Jackie Kennedy was in Switzerland for skiing she sent her two children to school there. Which school?—Allen Henley, Boston, Mass.

A. The Marie Jose School in Gstaad.

Q. What has become of Yma Sumac, the singer?—J. E. Johns, Sioux Falls, S. Dak.

A. Miss Sumac suffered from adverse publicity following her divorce in 1957. She has since made a comeback, is now playing the nightclub circuit, also giving concerts.

Q. There is a famous quotation by Henry Ward Beecher about the strong and the weak. Can you print it or find it?—Olive Barker, Charlotte, N.C.

A. "It is trial that proves one thing weak and another strong. A house built on the sand is in fair weather just as good as if builded on rock."

Q. Please tell me what posts Joseph Kennedy held during Franklin D. Roosevelt's Presidential years.—G.R., Suffield, Conn.

A. Kennedy was chief of the Securities Exchange Commission in 1935. He was chairman of the Maritime Commission in 1937. Last, he served as U.S. ambassador to Great Britain.

Q. I've heard that Kate Smith has a deformed foot and leg which is why she wears such long dresses. Any truth?—E.T., Bath, Maine.

A. No.

Q. My friend and I have had a discussion about Robert Taylor. I say he is 5 feet 6 inches tall and 60 years old. She says he is 6 feet tall and 50. Who is right?—Dorothy Goss, Newark, N.J.

A. Taylor, 54, is 6 feet tall.

Q. Has Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, our man in Vietnam—has he been married more than once? If so, please name all his wives.—I.C.W., Staten Island, N.Y.

A. Since 1926 Lodge has been married to the former Emily Esther Sears of Boston.

Q. Why are the following shows being canceled by CBS: Jackie Gleason, Lucille Ball, Perry Mason and Dick Van Dyke?—Florence Epstein, New York, N.Y.

A. The stars are all tired, want to quit. CBS wants them to stay on.

Forget everything you know about sixes. Except economy.

That's exactly what our new overhead cam six did. Because Pontiac engineers moved the camshaft up over the valves, like the European road machines. And what comes out of its 230 cubic inches is going to make you think somebody forgot to charge you for two cylinders. But then you wheel it up to a gas pump, and you find out how much ground you're covering on a gallon. The 165-hp OHC 6 is the standard powerplant on every Tempest, Tempest Custom and Le Mans. (Along with many safety items like an outside mirror to help you make your driving safer.) And there's a special 4-BBL, 207-hp Sprint edition you can order, too: with a floorshifter, tighter suspension, special side striping and an exhaust note like a small thunderstorm. The new OHC 6 tigers are here in force. Come in and take one on at your Pontiac dealers!

Pontiac's new OHC 6 is here! GM

All the aspirin in the world can't do for your cold what one Contac® capsule can.

Aspirin is for the aches and pains that sometimes come with a cold. Two tablets every four hours should help.

But what does aspirin do for the sniffles, sneezes, and stuffy nose of a cold? Nothing.

That's why there's Contac. You take one every 12 hours and these symptoms are checked.

Just one Contac capsule has more than 600 tiny "time pills," set like clocks to work continuously all through the day or night. The good medicine in Contac gives you gentle, effective relief. No wonder Contac is today's leading medication for head colds.

So if your cold should bring aches and pains, aspirin is a good thing to take. But don't expect it to relieve your sniffles, sneezes, and stuffy nose. That's what you can expect—and get—from Contac. It's at your pharmacy.

HOW CASH IS KEEPING HOSPITAL COSTS LOW

by DONALD C. CARNER

Time-saving procedures save nurses labor, lets them

It looks as though the biggest wrinkle in hospital care—hospital cost—is being ironed out at last. A new program organized by CASH—Commission for Administrative Services in Hospitals—is making it possible to reduce costs and improve patient care at the same time.

How can service to the patient show improvement while costs drop? CASH's answer: by simplifying work procedures and by optimum utilization of manpower. One Southern California hospital, for example, saved $10,000 a year by sending water pitchers to a central kitchen for washing. Nurses' aides who previously had washed them at each station now have more time for patients. And another hospital saved $6000 annually by adopting a new form for laboratory diagnostic requests.

What does all this mean to Mr. Average American? Most important, the hard-pressed patient will see a leveling off in his hospital bills. Working people paying health insurance premiums can look forward to a diminishing payroll deduction climb. And the shortage of nurses may be partly resolved by placing them in positions that best utilize their professional skills.

VARIATIONS IN COST

The program began in 1952, when the first large Blue Cross industrial health and welfare fund came into existence in Southern California. From that time on, with hospital cost information collected by one organization responsible for paying hospital bills, the enormous discrepancies in hospital cost began to out. The fund discovered that some hospitals charged twice as much as others for what seemed to be identical procedures, such as appendectomies and tonsillectomies. Upon closer examination it was disclosed that most hospitals charging twice as much were small commercial institutions, often owned by "fast buck" promoters out to make a huge profit from a small investment.

Blue Cross president Charles Abbott invited leading hospital executives to help solve the problem. Several welfare funds threatened to open their own hospitals. Then in 1960 the Hospital Council of Southern California developed "The Guiding Principles for Hospital Care," which outlawed such ridiculous charges as 10¢ for a tongue depressor, 25¢ for an aspirin and $7 for a sitz bath. The result was a lowering of prices in some of the commercial hospitals between Santa Barbara and San Diego which had sprung up after World War II. A few commercial hospitals went bankrupt and changed ownership.

With this much success on record, informal discussions were held in 1961 to see what more could be accomplished. The idea developed that all hospitals could effectively reduce their costs if they pooled their resources and know-how, reducing costs and improving care by organized work simplification and work measurement programs.

CASH IS BORN

To test this concept, the Hospital Council and Blue Cross conducted seminars for administrators, doctors and trustees in 1962. At these seminars was born the idea of a central management consulting service for hospitals. Early in 1963, CASH came into existence.

By April more than 80 hospitals had agreed to pay monthly dues up to $100 to retain the management consulting firm of Booz, Allen & Hamilton to conduct a detailed study of nursing service. Thirty hospitals of varying size were selected for surveys to ascertain scope and level of nursing care. Nurses were asked to keep close track of all their daily activities. Patient care routines, evolved haphazardly through the years, were scrutinized. If a doctor or a patient had to wait while a nurse chased down an instrument, medication or bandage, every effort was made to prescribe a remedy for the lost time. Investigators asked why, if a patient has fully recovered and is ready to return home, must he be wheeled to the front door by a nursing employee? If he walks from the door, can he walk to the door?

To put some of the answers to these questions into practice, a new approach to nurse staffing was tried out on a pilot basis in 1964. Results were striking. Of the six hospitals in the program, five improved the quality of

Q. Is it true that a Chicago press agent named Julius Klein, who represents West Germany, owns Sen. Thomas Dodd of Connecticut lock, stock and barrel?—A. Johnson, Los Angeles, Calif.

A. No one owns Senator Dodd lock, stock, and barrel. The senator happens to be a most generous fellow who has performed some unusual favors for Julius Klein, details of which are now coming to light.

Q. How many times did Ernest Hemingway win the Pulitzer Prize? In what years? For what works? — I.M., Knoxville, Tenn.

A. Hemingway won the Pulitzer Prize in 1953 for The Old Man and the Sea, the Nobel Prize for Literature one year later.

Q. Did her parents christen her Lady Bird or was that name given to Mrs. Johnson by her husband? — Chas. W. Ferguson, Dallas, Tex.

A. She was christened Claudia Alta Taylor, acquired the name, Lady Bird, when Alice Tittle, her nursemaid, described her at the age of 2 as being "as purty as a lady bird."

Q. I am writing a paper on the late Somerset Maugham, and I cannot find out anywhere why he decided to leave England in 1928 and move to France. Can you help? — Dianne Blakely, Palos Verdes, Calif.

A. Maugham became attracted to Gerald Haxton, a young American who had been arrested in London on a charge of gross indecency. Later, Haxton was declared an undesirable alien and banned from England for life. It was then that Maugham bought the Villa Mauresque on Cap Ferrat where Haxton lived with him for years. Maugham's wife, Syrie, found out about the relationship very early in the game and of course divorced him. Haxton died during World War II after having spent 25 years with Maugham who wrote most guardedly of their relationship.

Q. Maurice Chevalier—did he collaborate with the Nazis during the German occupation of France?—Daniel Jensen, Springfield, Mo.

A. Chevalier lived in Vichy, France, for a period during the occupation. He sang for Nazi audiences in Paris and also in Germany for French prisoners of war in German war camps. He was later exonerated of any collaboration with the Germans during the occupation.

Q. I understand that various food manufacturers place the letter "K" on their labels so that Negroes will know it stands for Martin Luther King and will thereby purchase the products. Is that so?—J.L.R., Raceland, La.

A. The "K" stands for kosher, a word denoting the food has been prepared according to proper Jewish ritual.

Q. The real name, please, of Julie Andrews.—Kristi Gigliotti, Woodbury, N.Y.

A. Julia Wells.

Q. I would like to know the educational background of David Nelson, Rick Nelson, and Elvis Presley. I've heard that all three are graduates of U.C.L.A. Somehow I can't believe it's true.—J. Schneider, St. Louis, Mo.

A. David and Ricky Nelson were graduated from Hollywood High School, Presley from Humes High School in Memphis. None are college graduates.

Q. Please run the latest picture of Dolores Del Rio and tell the secret of her everlasting beauty. I understand she is really 75 years old but falls in love with teenaged boys so that her youth can be constantly reinforced. — S.E.P., San Antonio, Tex.

A. Dolores Del Rio is at least 60, certainly not more than 65. She attributes her beauty to rest and diet, not teenagers.

Q. How many honorary degrees does Bob Hope have and from where?—Ellen Hartman, Cleveland, Ohio.

A. Hope has six honorary degrees, one each from Pennsylvania Military College, Quincy College, University of Wyoming, Georgetown University, Monmouth College and Whittier College.

Q. When Jackie Kennedy was in Switzerland for skiing she sent her two children to school there. Which school?—Allen Henley, Boston, Mass.

A. The Marie Jose School in Gstaad.

Q. What has become of Yma Sumac, the singer?—J. E. Johns, Sioux Falls, S. Dak.

A. Miss Sumac suffered from adverse publicity following her divorce in 1957. She has since made a comeback, is now playing the nightclub circuit, also giving concerts.

Q. There is a famous quotation by Henry Ward Beecher about the strong and the weak. Can you print it or find it?—Olive Barker, Charlotte, N.C.

A. "It is trial that proves one thing weak and another strong. A house built on the sand is in fair weather just as good as if builded on rock."

Q. Please tell me what posts Joseph Kennedy held during Franklin D. Roosevelt's Presidential years.—G.R., Suffield, Conn.

A. Kennedy was chief of the Securities Exchange Commission in 1935. He was chairman of the Maritime Commission in 1937. Last, he served as U.S. ambassador to Great Britain.

Q. I've heard that Kate Smith has a deformed foot and leg which is why she wears such long dresses. Any truth?—E.T., Bath, Maine.

A. No.

Q. My friend and I have had a discussion about Robert Taylor. I say he is 5 feet 6 inches tall and 60 years old. She says he is 6 feet tall and 50. Who is right?—Dorothy Goss, Newark, N.J.

A. Taylor, 54, is 6 feet tall.

Q. Has Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, our man in Vietnam—has he been married more than once? If so, please name all his wives.—I.C.W., Staten Island, N.Y.

A. Since 1926 Lodge has been married to the former Emily Esther Sears of Boston.

Q. Why are the following shows being canceled by CBS: Jackie Gleason, Lucille Ball, Perry Mason and Dick Van Dyke?—Florence Epstein, New York, N.Y.

A. The stars are all tired, want to quit. CBS wants them to stay on.

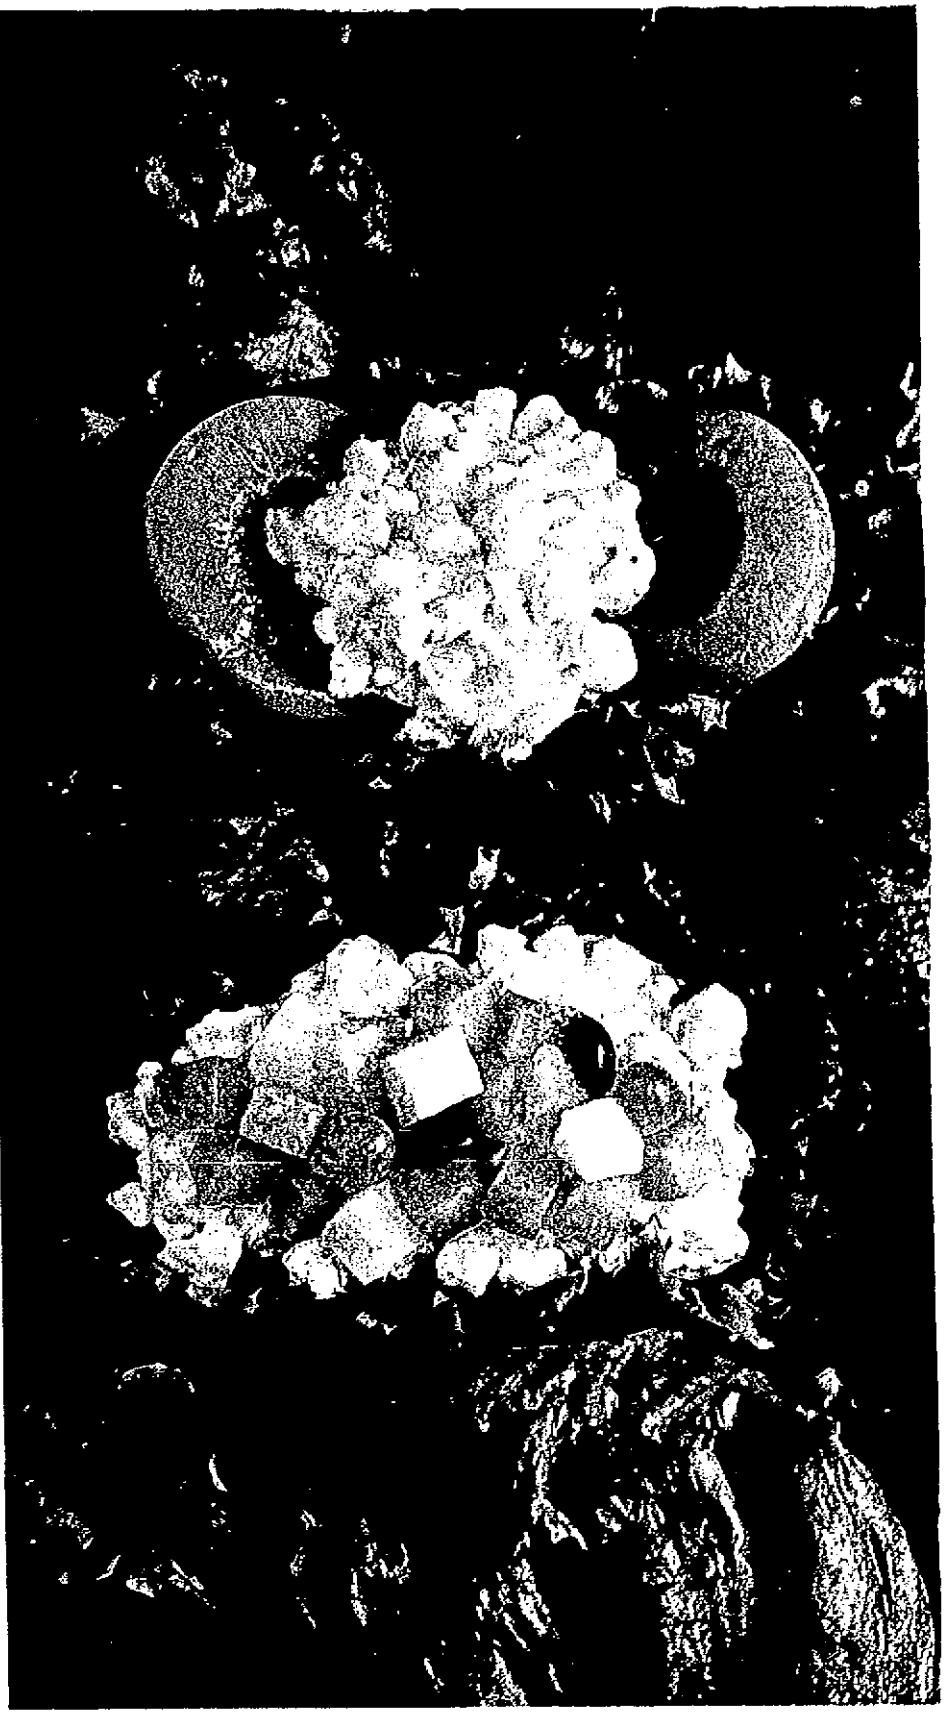
patient care and at the same time reduced payroll hours by as much as 30 per cent. By standardizing time requirements for each nursing procedure, rescheduling and reassignment of registered nurses to achieve peak efficiency and shifting of nonprofessional duties to lesser trained workers, CASH hospitals proved once and for all that it is possible to save the patient money and provide him top quality care.

So far, nursing services, housekeeping and business office functions have been affected. But other segments of hospital operation—X-ray, lab, maintenance, food service—are scheduled for similar study within the next 18 months. "If we have the same measure of success in these areas," says Bob Edgecumbe, executive vice-president of CASH, "I estimate $20 million annual savings in CASH hospitals."



An important corollary to the work measurement approach is that it has stimulated doctors, nurses and other hospital workers to think in terms of "work simplification." Can a particular task be done more efficiently or eliminated entirely? Can cost of materials be lowered? At Memorial Hospital, Long Beach, a portion of the savings made possible by higher employee productivity is deposited in an incentive trust held for retirement.

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS

So far CASH programs are underway in 136 Southern California health centers, and pilot plans now in operation point to a potential reduction of millions of dollars throughout the country. Within a two-year period one hospital saved over $100,000, thanks to CASH.

Although the program is still in its infancy, inquiries have been received from hospitals throughout the U.S. And the Kellogg Foundation has awarded $150,000 to enable CASH to extend its program within member hospitals and help other areas organize similar ones. This past January, 36 northern California hospitals joined CASH.

There is every reason to anticipate further benefits as costs are lowered throughout the country and as more hospitals follow the CASH pattern.

THE USA: NATION OF FRIGHTENED WOMEN

Police dogs, peepholes, pen-guns are no solution to the problem of crime

by LLOYD SHEARER

Shelby Grant walks with police dog in Los Angeles, most dangerous city for women in rapes per capita. One police official describes police dogs as "one of the best safety precautions that a girl can have."

There was a time not too long ago when women could walk safely after sundown on the city streets of this nation.

Lamentably for many women in many cities that time has passed. The streets and parks have been turned into jungles of fear where almost 50 per cent of the residents are afraid to walk alone at night. And with good reason.

In New York City, for example, at least two people are murdered each day, at least four women are raped, at least one major crime is committed every three minutes—half by drug addicts, more than 70 per cent by youths under 21.

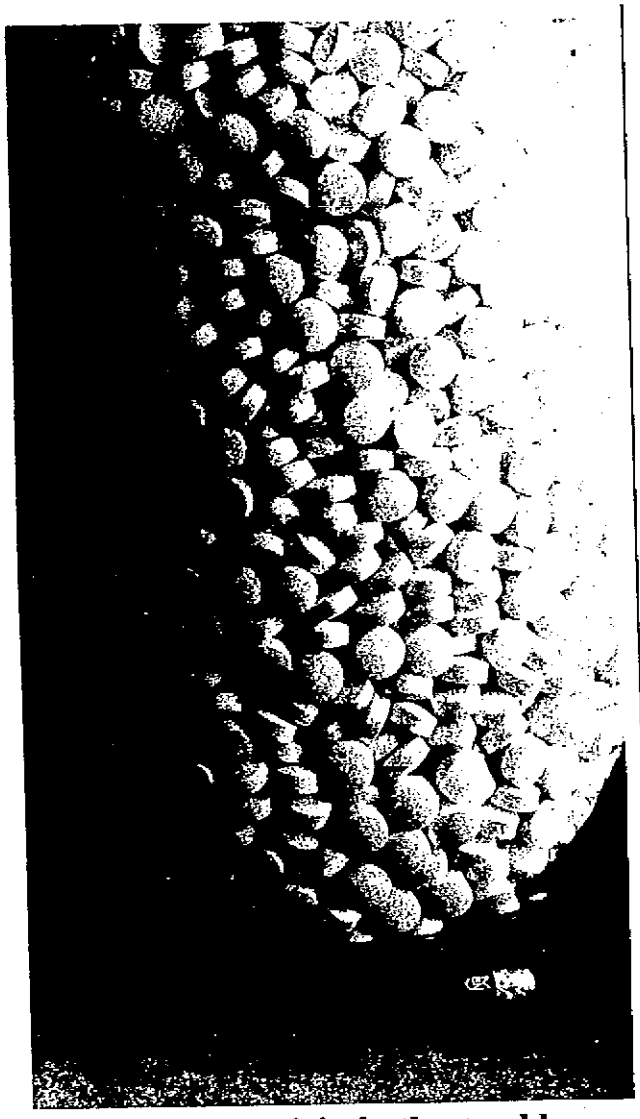
In other cities it is even worse.

The FBI Crime Report for 1964 lists an average of 56 forcible rapes per day or assaults with the same intention. Because most women are squeamish and fearful of reporting such crimes against themselves, these figures constitute only one-fifth of the true number of assault-rapes. It has been estimated that 105 women in every 100,000 can expect to become victims of sexual attacks.

A geographical breakdown of the 1964 statistics reveals the following cities to be the most dangerous for women in the number of rapes per capita:

(1) Los Angeles (including county)
(2) Kansas City (both in Missouri and Kansas)
(3) Savannah, Ga.
(4) Charleston, S.C.
(5) Denver, Colo.
(6) Stockton, Calif.
(7) Chicago and Atlantic City, N.J.
(8) Sacramento, Calif.
(9) Houston, Tex., and Detroit, Mich.
(10) Phoenix, Ariz.

Any day now, if it hasn't already, the FBI will release its latest crime report based on 1965 figures. Among other developments it will highlight the spread of crime to the suburbs, pointing up the problem that faces practically every woman—the mounting danger of her being insulted, attacked, mugged, molested and even murdered by criminals and sex deviates in communities, large and small.



It is frightening. It is outrageous. It is shocking. But it is nevertheless true that the wealthier the nation becomes—and the U.S. has never known such prosperity as it is enjoying today—the less safety it provides for its women.

NOT SAFE ANYWHERE

Where the American woman is concerned there is now little safety whether in old age or early youth, at home or in the streets, in broad daylight or dark night, alone or in crowds. She is attacked or murdered in elevators, in subways, at the beach, walking home after church, selling Girl Scout cookies. She is attacked in her own car, in brightly lit laundromats, outside thronged shopping centers, in luxurious suburban homes, in city skyscrapers and on city streets.

Here are a few examples that show how indiscriminately such tragedy strikes:

• The 38-year-old wife of a government official was walking her dogs in a Wash-

All the aspirin in the world can't do for your cold what one Contac® capsule can.

Aspirin is for the aches and pains that sometimes come with a cold. Two tablets every four hours should help.

But what does aspirin do for the sniffles, sneezes, and stuffy nose of a cold? Nothing.

That's why there's Contac. You take one every 12 hours and these symptoms are checked.

Just one Contac capsule has more than 600 tiny "time pills," set like clocks to work continuously all through the day or night. The good medicine in Contac gives you gentle, effective relief. No wonder Contac is today's leading medication for head colds.

So if your cold should bring aches and pains, aspirin is a good thing to take. But don't expect it to relieve your sniffles, sneezes, and stuffy nose. That's what you can expect—and get—from Contac. It's at your pharmacy.

HOW CASH IS KEEPING HOSPITAL COSTS LOW

by DONALD C. CARNER

Time-saving procedures save nurses labor, lets them

It looks as though the biggest wrinkle in hospital care—hospital cost—is being ironed out at last. A new program organized by CASH—Commission for Administrative Services in Hospitals—is making it possible to reduce costs and improve patient care at the same time.

How can service to the patient show improvement while costs drop? CASH's answer: by simplifying work procedures and by optimum utilization of manpower. One Southern California hospital, for example, saved $10,000 a year by sending water pitchers to a central kitchen for washing. Nurses' aides who previously had washed them at each station now have more time for patients. And another hospital saved $6000 annually by adopting a new form for laboratory diagnostic requests.

What does all this mean to Mr. Average American? Most important, the hard-pressed patient will see a leveling off in his hospital bills. Working people paying health insurance premiums can look forward to a diminishing payroll deduction climb. And the shortage of nurses may be partly resolved by placing them in positions that best utilize their professional skills.

VARIATIONS IN COST

The program began in 1952, when the first large Blue Cross industrial health and welfare fund came into existence in Southern California. From that time on, with hospital cost information collected by one organization responsible for paying hospital bills, the enormous discrepancies in hospital cost began to out. The fund discovered that some hospitals charged twice as much as others for what seemed to be identical procedures, such as appendectomies and tonsillectomies. Upon closer examination it was disclosed that most hospitals charging twice as much were small commercial institutions, often owned by "fast buck" promoters out to make a huge profit from a small investment.

Blue Cross president Charles Abbott invited leading hospital executives to help solve the problem. Several welfare funds threatened to open their own hospitals. Then in 1960 the Hospital Council of Southern California developed "The Guiding Principles for Hospital Care," which outlawed such ridiculous charges as 10¢ for a tongue depressor, 25¢ for an aspirin and $7 for a sitz bath. The result was a lowering of prices in some of the commercial hospitals between Santa Barbara and San Diego which had sprung up after World War II. A few commercial hospitals went bankrupt and changed ownership.

With this much success on record, informal discussions were held in 1961 to see what more could be accomplished. The idea developed that all hospitals could effectively reduce their costs if they pooled their resources and know-how, reducing costs and improving care by organized work simplification and work measurement programs.

CASH IS BORN

To test this concept, the Hospital Council and Blue Cross conducted seminars for administrators, doctors and trustees in 1962. At these seminars was born the idea of a central management consulting service for hospitals. Early in 1963, CASH came into existence.

By April more than 80 hospitals had agreed to pay monthly dues up to $100 to retain the management consulting firm of Booz, Allen & Hamilton to conduct a detailed study of nursing service. Thirty hospitals of varying size were selected for surveys to ascertain scope and level of nursing care. Nurses were asked to keep close track of all their daily activities. Patient care routines, evolved haphazardly through the years, were scrutinized. If a doctor or a patient had to wait while a nurse chased down an instrument, medication or bandage, every effort was made to prescribe a remedy for the lost time. Investigators asked why, if a patient has fully recovered and is ready to return home, must he be wheeled to the front door by a nursing employee? If he walks from the door, can he walk to the door?

To put some of the answers to these questions into practice, a new approach to nurse staffing was tried out on a pilot basis in 1964. Results were striking. Of the six hospitals in the program, five improved the quality of ington, D.C., park. She was attacked by four youths. One held the dogs while the other three raped her.

• A 30-year-old mother of two children was struck on the head with a baseball bat in a St. Louis parking lot. Her two attackers, one 16, the other 17, dragged her into a backyard and raped her. She died.

• A 15-year-old girl en route to a Junior Achievement meeting boarded a bus in a Milwaukee suburb. A male passenger seized her, cut her throat with a razor. She died.

• A 40-year-old secretary was assaulted on a stairway of the State Department building in Washington. Guards were late in responding to her cries for help because they were busy investigating an attempted purse-snatching.

• A Las Vegas waitress, driven into the desert in her own car, was raped three times, then beaten up.

• A Brooklyn secretary, returning to her office after lunch, was knifed and her purse snatched in a crowded subway underpass.

These crimes were committed away from the homes of the victims. How about the long-trumpeted sanctity and the inviolable safety of the American home? Seven females, attributed to the Boston strangler, were all at home when they met their brutal deaths. Each lived in a multiple dwelling in a respectable neighborhood. In every case the murderer gained access without any visible sign of forced entry. In no case did another tenant notice anything suspicious, this at a time when almost the entire city lived in almost hysterical anxiety and strong suspicion of strangers.

These cases of crimes on women can be multiplied a thousandfold. What are their causes? In some measure the rise in metropolitan crime is due to the exodus of white people from the cities and to the ingress of Negroes and Puerto Ricans. Unskilled through lack of education, unhealthy in mind and body through lack of care, eliminated by prejudice from the mainstream of life, deprived of job opportunities, anchored economically to slum areas, seething in frustration and rebellion, robbed of hope and dreams—these minorities fight, mug, rob, rape, assault, kill to survive in a horror world they never made.

Others, mostly white, convicted of serious sex crimes, are jailed time after time, although practically every penology expert in America agrees that imprisonment per se is the least effective cure ever devised for sexual offenses. The stupidity of a society, negligent in the proper treatment of its sex criminals, is another major cause in the rising crime file.

What can be done? What is being done to protect the American woman? Law enforcement is at an all-time high. Never before have we had so many police officers to protect the lives of our women. But in cities, muggings, purse-snatchings, assaults have become so frequent that police can do little more than plead with people to become law-abiding. Officials contend justifiably enough that crimes such as rape and assault are beyond the perimeter of preventive police patrols, that the criminal can be dealt with only after he has perpetrated his foul deed.

And yet there is an important aspect of the overall problem which law enforcement agencies are ill-equipped to understand. In most cases their personnel do not know how to deal with the sex criminal once he's been caught.

As Gladys Denny Shultz points out in her well-documented book, How Many More Victims?, studies prove conclusively that the sex criminal, the woman-attacker, is a seriously sick person. Of 102 sex offenders in Sing Sing prison, it was found that all were undersexed rather than oversexed.

SEX DEFICIENCY

This sex deficiency is highly dangerous, because often the man can only be aroused by particular types of women or special situations. Since these circumstances are relatively infrequent they assume a heightened importance. The sick man must seek immediate gratification whatever the consequences. The explosion of violence by a frustrated personality results many times in a senseless, brutal, spur-of-the-moment crime from which no woman can be safe and against which the police obviously cannot protect.

This problem is often intensified by drugs or alcohol. A member of the narcotics division of the Chicago police estimates that 7000 drug addicts in his city commit 60 per cent of the crimes. New York City which has the largest drug addict population in America, approximately 60,000, discovers 10,000 new addicts a year. When "high" or in need of "a fix," a drug addict will do anything. And so will the true alcoholic. Half the rapists in another study group triggered themselves to sex violence via drink.

It is in treating these apprehended criminals that present methods are inadequate, ineffective and virtually useless. Sex crime in America is actually fostered by unenlightened legal processes.

Instead of recognizing the special nature of sex sickness and placing the offender under psychiatric or medical treatment until he can be cured if possible (more than one-half in the Sing Sing group were considered incurable even by the best-known treatment available today), intensive legal battles are fought to prove that the criminal is sane because he may have conceived or calculated his crime or attempted to conceal it.

When judged sane instead of sick, the sex offender is sentenced under due process. In a matter of time he is released uncured into the community where he is most likely to commit the same offense again and again until once more he's caught and imprisoned as part of the same vicious cycle.

Although it's been said that murder and rape incur the lowest repeater rate of all crimes, that in itself is no guarantee that the rapist will not repeat his attack if left free. Mrs. Shultz, herself the intended target of a rape-attack by a young man with a previous record of illness, cites many examples of repeated offenses, preventable by more enlightened legal processes:

• The 19-year-old daughter of a Hollywood screen writer was raped and murdered on the campus of the Los Angeles city college. Her murderer, a Bible salesman, had been paroled two years earlier by the authorities following a previous rape conviction.

• A 21-year-old housewife in Levittown, N.J., was raped in her home by a knife-wielding attacker. Her assailant, when arrested, turned out to be a prisoner on probation from a one-year morals offense committed only five months earlier.

• A pretty 24-year-old girl struck up a conversation with a surf fisherman on a New Jersey beach. Her murderer had previously been found guilty of criminally assaulting a girl, had been transferred to a mental hospital, resentenced to the penitentiary, then released.

And so on and on, ad nauseam.

It is a sad but true development that the inability of police and men in many cities to protect women has caused the women to try and protect themselves. Many now carry in their purses hatpins or long, sharp nail files. Others will not leave their homes without a metal-tipped umbrella, a hard-cover book or a tightly rolled newspaper in hand.

"One of the best safety precautions a girl can have," one police official recommends, "is a good German shepherd or a Doberman pinscher. They make great watchdogs. The trouble is that it's hard to keep such dogs cooped up in apartments. Beside, there's been a run on German shepherds, especially in Washington. The Army also wants them for duty in Vietnam."

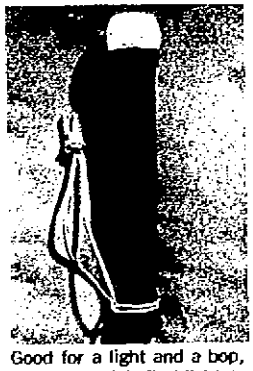
The climate of fear in which so many city women now live has also resulted in a boom in the production of so-called "female protection" devices. Available are the following:

Invento Alarm, a three-pound cylinder that emits a chilling blast that can be heard up to a mile. Cost: $10.

Pen-gun, which consists of a cartridge of tear gas inside an aluminum tube. Discharge a blast of tear gas, and supposedly it incapacitates man or beast within a range of 35 feet. Ejected tear gas may affect the victim as well as the attacker depending upon the wind direction. One New York City policeman was hospitalized as a result of being downwind at an inopportune moment. Cost: $6.95.

Lady Saver, an antimolestant consisting of a green dye with a strong pepsih smell. Comes packed in a flip-top squeeze bottle. When sprayed on the assailant it provides distinguishing characteristics to enable police identification when and if the assailant is caught.

Rebuff, a lipstick-size aerosol-type dispenser containing oleoresin capsicum, an active ingredient of cayenne pepper, similar to another aerosol product used effectively by postmen to ward off dogs.



Re-pell, an aerosol repellent containing both a chemical irritant and an invisible dye, the latter to aid police.

Shock-rod, a device in two sizes, 12-inch for purse, 29-inch for walking stick. Battery-powered current converts into a 4000-volt charge that will stun the attacker but not electrocute him.

Syringe, rubber, of the type used to wash out an infant's ears. Fill it with an irritant fluid, cork the tip with wax. One danger is that it is likely to leak when carried in a purse.

Manufacturers of these and similar protection devices insist they are doing American women a public service in producing these gadgets. Their critics contend, however, that they are merely exploiting the growing female anxiety in this country. It is probably true that most women feel more secure when carrying one of these gadgets, but it is also extremely doubtful whether a female, surprised by a heavier, stronger, excited and mentally disturbed male, could put any of them to really telling use.

Sales of the Pen-gun, for example, are rising in many urban areas, but interestingly enough, they are forbidden by law in New York City, Illinois, and California, three of the most perilous crime centers in the nation.

The right of the individual to defend himself by any available means when attacked is also hedged by countless legal restrictions. It is highly ironic, but when an alert New York girl not too long ago used a switchblade knife to ward off an attacker, she was arrested along with him on charges of carrying a concealed weapon. As one police official brilliantly explained, "We can't afford to make exceptions." A grand jury later refused to indict the girl.

In many large cities most new blocks of apartments now come equipped with peepholes and chain door-locks. In the most expensive buildings, three shifts of doormen work around the clock. Intercom systems have been installed to check all visitors, and closed TV circuits have been introduced, with cameras located at all key entrances and guards constantly observing the master screens.

FEAR EVEN INDOORS

Even so, female residents are still apprehensive. One wealthy New York matron has confessed that she is so afraid of the Central Park district and its habitués that she dare not go out on the streets even in daylight. She orders everything delivered to her apartment. Without a telephone her communication with the outside world would be approximately nothing.

The average woman, however, cannot hide behind a locked and chained door, nor does she want to. She must venture forth. And the record reveals that there is no place, however public, where she can consider herself truly safe. In this era of fright and fear she is doomed to live her life in an atmosphere of constant anxiety which lends itself to commercial exploitation and will continue to do so until an aroused citizenry, an educated society, truthfully faces the problem and begins with some resolution to do something about it.

President Johnson has attacked the appalling problem of crime by seeking to accord the minority citizen his civil rights, to include him in the top echelons of government, to end his hopeless, grinding poverty by providing him with jobs and education.

In his message to Congress this year the President also advocated the complete rebuilding of slum-infested cities. "I propose," he offered, "a Demonstration Cities Program that will offer qualifying cities of all sizes the promise of a new life for their people. I propose that we make massive additions to the supply of low and moderate-cost housing. I propose that we combine physical reconstruction and rehabilitation with effective social programs throughout the rebuilding process."

Sex offenses for the most part are executed by hostile men venting their inner turmoil on innocent women and children. Many of them, the products of broken homes with domineering mothers, were raised in slums where they survived through brutal, savage, hostile practices. Reduce the number of city slums, and you reduce the incidence of crime both black and white.

Where sex crimes continue, modern methods of progressive treatment and prevention must be introduced as in Wisconsin, California and Massachusetts, the only three states with separate facilities for the study and treatment of the sex offender.

In Wisconsin, thanks to an enlightened citizens committee that drew up and sponsored the present Wisconsin Sex Crimes Law—it was passed unanimously by the legislature—a man who is convicted of a sex offense is not turned over to the prison authorities for immediate incarceration. He is turned over to the State Department of Public Welfare for a complete physical, mental and social examination by experts. He is given psychiatric and medical treatment specifically aimed at his particular rehabilitation. He is paroled only when the investigators are convinced he can adjust to society. If they have doubts he is held in custody indefinitely—but it is the doctors, the scientists, the experts, who join in making the decision, not the judge and the prison trustees. Wisconsin does not believe that a sex offender becomes less a sex offender by merely serving time. Since 1951 the Wisconsin State Department of Public Welfare has rehabilitated a good share of its sexually ill inmates.

Another state which has introduced progressive treatment of sex offenders is California, where sexually sick men and boys are treated at the Atascadero State Hospital under the jurisdiction of the California Department of Mental Hygiene. Here, the offenders are never called inmates, are referred to always as "patients." They are accorded the best psychiatric treatment available in a security setting with the objective of returning them to society rehabilitated and capable of adjustment.

Many of today's serious sex offenders were not sex offenders to begin with. They were initiated into aberrant sex in jails and other institutions supposedly set up to correct them. Of 175 men arrested in Philadelphia for rape and rape-murder in the first eight months of 1962, 140 had records of previous crimes and commitment to correctional institutions, which proves exactly how little correction had been achieved.

If society is truly outraged by the seemingly omnipresent danger in which its women now find themselves, especially in cities and after dark, it will have to examine and reform its entire prison system, making use of its experts, social, psychiatric and medical. That is—if for future generations of women it intends to leave a heritage of peace, security and safety. ■

CRIME FACTS

The highest arrest rate for forcible attack on women in 1964 was in the 18-21 year age group. Most sex offenders came from the ranks of unskilled labor. While the crime rate for Negroes in slum areas is frequently high they are not primarily sex offenders. The highest incidence of sex crime is found among native white men. Practically all authorities agree that the genesis of sex offense lies in the parents and home backgrounds of the offenders. Most sex criminals were reared without fathers by masculine, dominating mothers and suffered major love deprivations in childhood. Forcible rape is a seasonal crime, committed most frequently during the summer months, least often during the winter months of January, February and March. Police say that 73 per cent of the nation's murders, assaults, rapes and muggings take place after dark.

In many large cities women won't go out after dark without carrying protective gadgets like this fancy key and whistle holder.

THE USA: NATION OF FRIGHTENED WOMEN

Police dogs, peepholes, pen-guns are no solution to the problem of crime

by LLOYD SHEARER

Shelby Grant walks with police dog in Los Angeles, most dangerous city for women in rapes per capita. One police official describes police dogs as "one of the best safety precautions that a girl can have."

There was a time not too long ago when women could walk safely after sundown on the city streets of this nation.

Lamentably for many women in many cities that time has passed. The streets and parks have been turned into jungles of fear where almost 50 per cent of the residents are afraid to walk alone at night. And with good reason.

In New York City, for example, at least two people are murdered each day, at least four women are raped, at least one major crime is committed every three minutes—half by drug addicts, more than 70 per cent by youths under 21.

In other cities it is even worse.

The FBI Crime Report for 1964 lists an average of 56 forcible rapes per day or assaults with the same intention. Because most women are squeamish and fearful of reporting such crimes against themselves, these figures constitute only one-fifth of the true number of assault-rapes. It has been estimated that 105 women in every 100,000 can expect to become victims of sexual attacks.

A geographical breakdown of the 1964 statistics reveals the following cities to be the most dangerous for women in the number of rapes per capita:

(1) Los Angeles (including county)
(2) Kansas City (both in Missouri and Kansas)
(3) Savannah, Ga.
(4) Charleston, S.C.
(5) Denver, Colo.
(6) Stockton, Calif.
(7) Chicago and Atlantic City, N.J.
(8) Sacramento, Calif.
(9) Houston, Tex., and Detroit, Mich.
(10) Phoenix, Ariz.

Any day now, if it hasn't already, the FBI will release its latest crime report based on 1965 figures. Among other developments it will highlight the spread of crime to the suburbs, pointing up the problem that faces practically every woman—the mounting danger of her being insulted, attacked, mugged, molested and even murdered by criminals and sex deviates in communities, large and small.

It is frightening. It is outrageous. It is shocking. But it is nevertheless true that the wealthier the nation becomes—and the U.S. has never known such prosperity as it is enjoying today—the less safety it provides for its women.

NOT SAFE ANYWHERE

Where the American woman is concerned there is now little safety whether in old age or early youth, at home or in the streets, in broad daylight or dark night, alone or in crowds. She is attacked or murdered in elevators, in subways, at the beach, walking home after church, selling Girl Scout cookies. She is attacked in her own car, in brightly lit laundromats, outside thronged shopping centers, in luxurious suburban homes, in city skyscrapers and on city streets.

Here are a few examples that show how indiscriminately such tragedy strikes:

• The 38-year-old wife of a government official was walking her dogs in a Washington, D.C., park. She was attacked by four youths. One held the dogs while the other three raped her.

• A 30-year-old mother of two children was struck on the head with a baseball bat in a St. Louis parking lot. Her two attackers, one 16, the other 17, dragged her into a backyard and raped her. She died.

• A 15-year-old girl en route to a Junior Achievement meeting boarded a bus in a Milwaukee suburb. A male passenger seized her, cut her throat with a razor. She died.

• A 40-year-old secretary was assaulted on a stairway of the State Department building in Washington. Guards were late in responding to her cries for help because they were busy investigating an attempted purse-snatching.

• A Las Vegas waitress, driven into the desert in her own car, was raped three times, then beaten up.

• A Brooklyn secretary, returning to her office after lunch, was knifed and her purse snatched in a crowded subway underpass.

These crimes were committed away from the homes of the victims. How about the long-trumpeted sanctity and the inviolable safety of the American home? Seven females, attributed to the Boston strangler, were all at home when they met their brutal deaths. Each lived in a multiple dwelling in a respectable neighborhood. In every case the murderer gained access without any visible sign of forced entry. In no case did another tenant notice anything suspicious, this at a time when almost the entire city lived in almost hysterical anxiety and strong suspicion of strangers.

These cases of crimes on women can be multiplied a thousandfold. What are their causes? In some measure the rise in metropolitan crime is due to the exodus of white people from the cities and to the ingress of Negroes and Puerto Ricans. Unskilled through lack of education, unhealthy in mind and body through lack of care, eliminated by prejudice from the mainstream of life, deprived of job opportunities, anchored economically to slum areas, seething in frustration and rebellion, robbed of hope and dreams—these minorities fight, mug, rob, rape, assault, kill to survive in a horror world they never made.

Others, mostly white, convicted of serious sex crimes, are jailed time after time, although practically every penology expert in America agrees that imprisonment per se is the least effective cure ever devised for sexual offenses. The stupidity of a society, negligent in the proper treatment of its sex criminals, is another major cause in the rising crime file.

What can be done? What is being done to protect the American woman? Law enforcement is at an all-time high. Never before have we had so many police officers to protect the lives of our women. But in cities, muggings, purse-snatchings, assaults have become so frequent that police can do little more than plead with people to become law-abiding. Officials contend justifiably enough that crimes such as rape and assault are beyond the perimeter of preventive police patrols, that the criminal can be dealt with only after he has perpetrated his foul deed.

And yet there is an important aspect of the overall problem which law enforcement agencies are ill-equipped to understand. In most cases their personnel do not know how to deal with the sex criminal once he's been caught.

As Gladys Denny Shultz points out in her well-documented book, How Many More Victims?, studies prove conclusively that the sex criminal, the woman-attacker, is a seriously sick person. Of 102 sex offenders in Sing Sing prison, it was found that all were undersexed rather than oversexed.

SEX DEFICIENCY

This sex deficiency is highly dangerous, because often the man can only be aroused by particular types of women or special situations. Since these circumstances are relatively infrequent they assume a heightened importance. The sick man must seek immediate gratification whatever the consequences. The explosion of violence by a frustrated personality results many times in a senseless, brutal, spur-of-the-moment crime from which no woman can be safe and against which the police obviously cannot protect.

This problem is often intensified by drugs or alcohol. A member of the narcotics division of the Chicago police estimates that 7000 drug addicts in his city commit 60 per cent of the crimes. New York City which has the largest drug addict population in America, approximately 60,000, discovers 10,000 new addicts a year. When "high" or in need of "a fix," a drug addict will do anything. And so will the true alcoholic. Half the rapists in another study group triggered themselves to sex violence via drink.

It is in treating these apprehended criminals that present methods are inadequate, ineffective and virtually useless. Sex crime in America is actually fostered by unenlightened legal processes.

Instead of recognizing the special nature of sex sickness and placing the offender under psychiatric or medical treatment until he can be cured if possible (more than one-half in the Sing Sing group were considered incurable even by the best-known treatment available today), intensive legal battles are fought to prove that the criminal is sane because he may have conceived or calculated his crime or attempted to conceal it.

When judged sane instead of sick, the sex offender is sentenced under due process. In a matter of time he is released uncured into the community where he is most likely to commit the same offense again and again until once more he's caught and imprisoned as part of the same vicious cycle.

Although it's been said that murder and rape incur the lowest repeater rate of all crimes, that in itself is no guarantee that the rapist will not repeat his attack if left free. Mrs. Shultz, herself the intended target of a rape-attack by a young man with a previous record of illness, cites many examples of repeated offenses, preventable by more enlightened legal processes:

• The 19-year-old daughter of a Hollywood screen writer was raped and murdered on the campus of the Los Angeles city college. Her murderer, a Bible salesman, had been paroled two years earlier by the authorities following a previous rape conviction.

• A 21-year-old housewife in Levittown, N.J., was raped in her home by a knife-wielding attacker. Her assailant, when arrested, turned out to be a prisoner on probation from a one-year morals offense committed only five months earlier.

• A pretty 24-year-old girl struck up a conversation with a surf fisherman on a New Jersey beach. Her murderer had previously been found guilty of criminally assaulting a girl, had been transferred to a mental hospital, resentenced to the penitentiary, then released.

And so on and on, ad nauseam.

It is a sad but true development that the inability of police and men in many cities to protect women has caused the women to try and protect themselves. Many now carry in their purses hatpins or long, sharp nail files. Others will not leave their homes without a metal-tipped umbrella, a hard-cover book or a tightly rolled newspaper in hand.

"One of the best safety precautions a girl can have," one police official recommends, "is a good German shepherd or a Doberman pinscher. They make great watchdogs. The trouble is that it's hard to keep such dogs cooped up in apartments. Beside, there's been a run on German shepherds, especially in Washington. The Army also wants them for duty in Vietnam."

The climate of fear in which so many city women now live has also resulted in a boom in the production of so-called "female protection" devices. Available are the following:

Invento Alarm, a three-pound cylinder that emits a chilling blast that can be heard up to a mile. Cost: $10.

Pen-gun, which consists of a cartridge of tear gas inside an aluminum tube. Discharge a blast of tear gas, and supposedly it incapacitates man or beast within a range of 35 feet. Ejected tear gas may affect the victim as well as the attacker depending upon the wind direction. One New York City policeman was hospitalized as a result of being downwind at an inopportune moment. Cost: $6.95.

Lady Saver, an antimolestant consisting of a green dye with a strong pepsin smell. Comes packed in a flip-top squeeze bottle. When sprayed on the assailant it provides distinguishing characteristics to enable police identification when and if the assailant is caught.

Rebuff, a lipstick-size aerosol-type dispenser containing oleoresin capsicum, an active ingredient of cayenne pepper, similar to another aerosol product used effectively by postmen to ward off dogs.

Re-pell, an aerosol repellent containing both a chemical irritant and an invisible dye, the latter to aid police.

Shock-rod, a device in two sizes, 12-inch for purse, 29-inch for walking stick. Battery-powered current converts into a 4000-volt charge that will stun the attacker but not electrocute him.

Syringe, rubber, of the type used to wash out an infant's ears. Fill it with an irritant fluid, cork the tip with wax. One danger is that it is likely to leak when carried in a purse.

Manufacturers of these and similar protection devices insist they are doing American women a public service in producing these gadgets. Their critics contend, however, that they are merely exploiting the growing female anxiety in this country. It is probably true that most women feel more secure when carrying one of these gadgets, but it is also extremely doubtful whether a female, surprised by a heavier, stronger, excited and mentally disturbed male, could put any

ANYTHING CAN HAPPEN IN THE PEACE CORPS

by ROBERT G. DEINDORFER

Five years ago this week the late John F. Kennedy stroked his small, crabbed signature to a Presidential Order and created an imaginative new government agency.

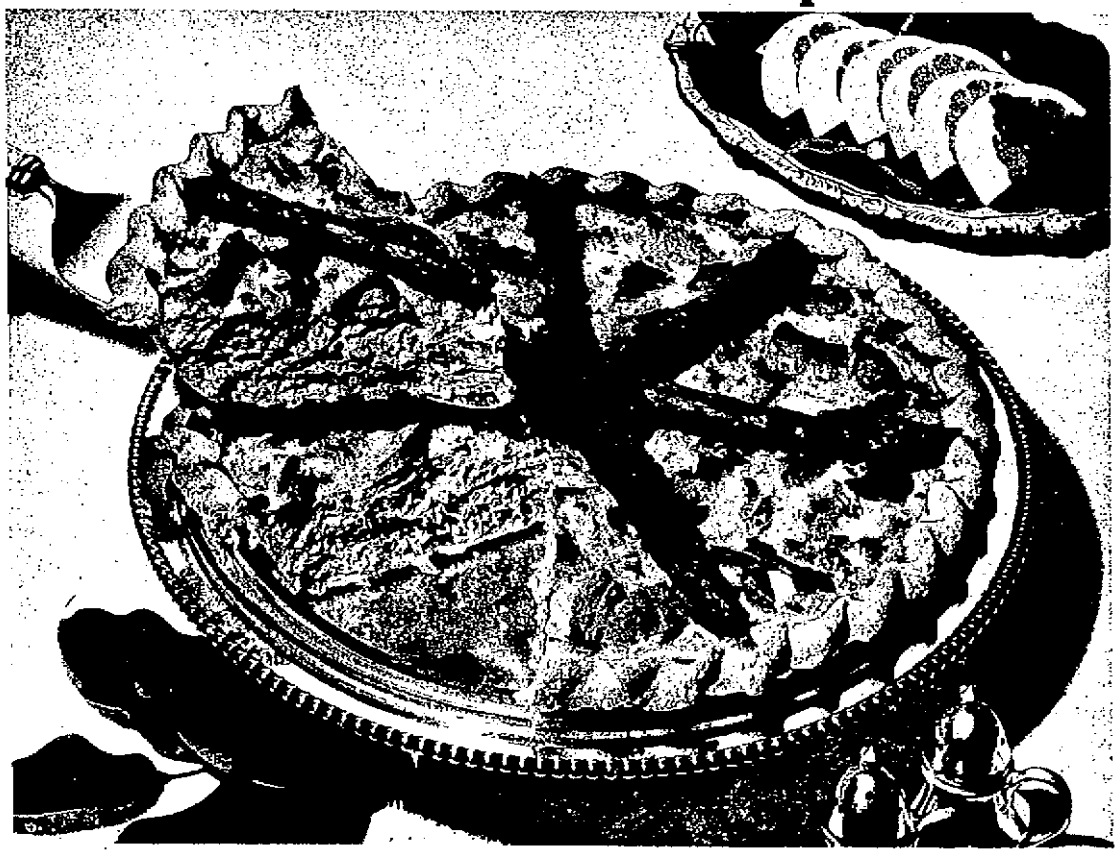
Today America's bold and venturesome Peace Corps is a popular success both at home and abroad. In 48 different countries on four continents 12,000 hard-working volunteers teach school, erect sewage systems, help build roads and bridges, staff hospitals, bring modern farming to worn out land.

Quite plainly, the Peace Corps has fulfilled the bright promise Kennedy first saw in it. In five dramatic years it has made innumerable substantial contributions to underdeveloped nations struggling to climb up into the 20th century. During those same years volunteers experienced personal, significant incidents of their own. Isolated individual moments may not add up to earth-shaking achievement. But taken together, a selection of these incidents—frivolous and otherwise—helps to bring out the full flavor of life abroad in the Peace Corps. Here are some of the most outstanding:

• Until the day it happened, volunteer Dave Coombs hadn't ever tried one of the standard issue water purification pills. Like many another young Peace Corpsman, he'd carried the pills around in his pocket, just in case, without ever getting around to using one.

As Coombs sat in the home of a big, bluff farmer named Don José in southern Chile, he realized the time finally had come. A pitcher of water stood on the dining room table around which they were seated.

All of a sudden Coombs saw his chance to certify the water he'd be drinking without insulting his host. While José turned his back for a moment Coombs, with a gambler's gesture, dropped two purification pills into the pitcher.



Then Don José spun back around again. A dramatic transformation came over him. His dark moustache bristled, his eyeballs abruptly enlarged and his chest filled with air. Sputtering, he picked up the pitcher, clumped across the dining room, emptied the water out the window.

In the kitchen the farmer boisterously scolded and cursed his wife for daring to serve bad water to their guest. All the time Coombs sat in his chair listening to the clamor, helpless, unable to confess his involvement for fear of offending these new friends. The memory of that day still lingers in Dave Coombs's mind. Until then he hadn't known that purification pills turn water a bright shade of orange-brown.

• On the day the Dominican revolution erupted in April 1965, Geer Wilcox, a lean, crew-cut young volunteer teacher, returned alone to his small, fourth-floor apartment in the northwest of Santo Domingo. On a Wednesday evening rebel forces dropped a flutter of leaflets threatening to bomb homes in that area. By phone Wilcox and two other volunteers who lived nearby were told to walk out to the residence of an American official as soon as they could. Next morning Wilcox slung a knapsack over his shoulder and the three of them set out afoot across a field.

Along the way they passed bands of both rebel and loyalist troopers, truck-

CAN WE CURE SEX OFFENDERS? THREE STATES ARE TRYING

Arlene Del Fava of New York was arrested but not indicted for defending herself against attacker with switchblade knife.

of them to really telling use.

Sales of the Pen-gun, for example, are rising in many urban areas, but interestingly enough, they are forbidden by law in New York City, Illinois, and California, three of the most perilous crime centers in the nation.

The right of the individual to defend himself by any available means when attacked is also hedged by countless legal restrictions. It is highly ironic, but when an alert New York girl not too long ago used a switchblade knife to ward off an attacker, she was arrested along with him on charges of carrying a concealed weapon. As one police official brilliantly explained, "We can't afford to make exceptions." A grand jury later refused to indict the girl.

In many large cities most new blocks of apartments now come equipped with peepholes and chain door-locks. In the most expensive buildings, three shifts of doormen work around the clock. Intercom systems have been installed to check all visitors, and closed TV circuits have been introduced, with cameras located at all key entrances and guards constantly observing the master screens.

FEAR EVEN INDOORS

Even so, female residents are still apprehensive. One wealthy New York matron has confessed that she is so afraid of the Central Park district and its habitués that she dare not go out on the streets even in daylight. She orders everything delivered to her apartment. Without a telephone her communication with the outside world would be approximately nothing.

The average woman, however, cannot hide behind a locked and chained door, nor does she want to. She must venture forth. And the record reveals that there is no place, however public, where she can consider herself truly safe. In this era of fright and fear she is doomed to live her life in an atmosphere of constant anxiety which lends itself to commercial exploitation and will continue to do so until an aroused citizenry, an educated society, truthfully faces the problem and begins with some resolution to do something about it.

President Johnson has attacked the appalling problem of crime by seeking to accord the minority citizen his civil rights, to include him in the top echelons of government, to end his hopeless, grinding poverty by providing him with jobs and education.

In his message to Congress this year the President also advocated the complete rebuilding of slum-infested cities. "I propose," he offered, "a Demonstration Cities Program that will offer qualifying cities of all sizes the promise of a new life for their people. loads of soldiers and a medium tank strafed from the air minutes later. At one point a Dominican doctor gave them a lift in his car. Not far off the roadway, bursts of gunfire crackled in the warm Caribbean air.

At the end of his hazardous trek the young American was assigned to work with others in the kitchen of a local hotel. Despite a lack of experience, he energetically helped distribute food to men, women and children and, later, sat by a telephone relaying messages to a radio station.

In turbulent Santo Domingo, the Peace Corps demonstrated its ability to react well under crisis conditions. Yet Wilcox was regarded as extraordinary by even the high standards of other volunteers on the scene. Geer Wilcox, 24 years old, happened to be totally blind.

• For two days rackety anti-American demonstrations boiled through the old provincial capital of Amasya in north-central Turkey. Angry and emotional Turks gathered together by the hundreds, listened to inflammatory speeches, marched around the village square loudly protesting the American position on Cyprus.

On Sunday afternoon a part of the demonstration moved indoors to a nearby coffeehouse where the Turks continued their criticism until a young civil servant leaped up onto a table.

"We have forgotten Bill Aron," he said. "What about our friend Bill Aron?"

An awkward flutter of silence fell over the crowd. The men stared at one another, nodded, wondered whether their demonstration had hurt the feelings of the Peace Corps schoolteacher. Finally, a great mountain of an apple farmer spoke.

"We should go tell Bill our thanks," he said.

Up the hill they trooped, in twos and threes, heavy boots clumping on the hard track of the land, others joining in along the way. When 23-year-old Bill Aron opened the door more than 70 Turks stood outside his two-room adobe home.

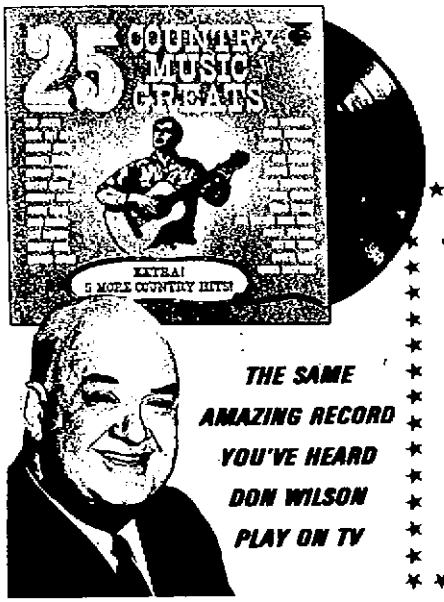
A shopkeeper named Mehmet stepped forward. "Bill, don't take offense at what went on in Amasya today," he said. The others nodded. "It wasn't about you personally. It was—ah—politics. We like you, we think highly of you—and we wish you to stay with us here always."

David Coombs experienced amusing crisis during good will visit in southern Chile.

• On Lee Makela's very first day as a schoolteacher in Thailand, he was asked to keep order in a class of 35 young girls. He sat at the desk, smiling a little, wondering if the girls would show any special welcome for a new teacher.

Moments later a student walked up to the desk, knelt beside him and handed Makela a dish of rambutan leaves, each one carefully peeled, all of them beautifully placed on the plate. His face opened in a smile of thanks as Makela squinted at the Thai writing on the card in the plate. He couldn't read Thai, not yet, but he could guess what the card said—"To our teacher" or "Welcome to our school."

With a visible show of pleasure, Makela took a piece of rambutan and ate it. The girls in the class giggled. Then a second girl brought him a dish, and a third, and a fourth. Makela did the best he could to keep up with the flow of gifts. Smiling, nodding, sampling each one to avoid hurting any feelings, the teacher managed to show his appreciation.



As more and more plates arrived at the desk, the young Peace Corps volunteer desperately tried to think of some diplomatic way out of his predicament. He couldn't. While the girls continued to giggle, he sampled a bit of each gift and nodded his thanks.

Finally the head mistress of the school, attracted perhaps by the laughter, appeared in the doorway. She stood watching Lee Makela attempt to devour the growing array of fruit. Then, smiling faintly, she walked across the room and leaned over the desk.

"You are presently eating the girls' final examinations in Proper Preparation of Fruits and Vegetables," she said. "Please leave enough for the examiner."

Traffic Patrolman John O'Connell, instructor of Chicago's pioneering driving courses for deaf and hard of hearing, puts across a lesson in sign language.

Deaf pupils discuss in sign language a traffic accident depicted in a blown-up photo. As drivers, the deaf have compiled an outstanding safety record.

Patrolman O'Connell demonstrates alert driving maneuver as deaf student sits in model driver's seat. Rest of class of about 50, welcoming the chance to learn, watches attentively.

PRIZE PUPILS IN A SPECIAL PROGRAM

by NEAL ASHBY

CHICAGO.

Denied the telephone and restricted in social and work opportunities, the deaf find the ability to drive a car a prized asset. It provides a way of getting to others with whom they can communicate. It's a mark of normalcy. Sometimes it's the means to a job. The Chicago Police Department is helping the city's deaf to learn to drive in a program believed to be the only one of its kind in the U.S.

Three times a year, classes of 40 to 50 persons who are deaf, deaf and mute or hard of hearing meet in five two-hour evening sessions. They're taught traffic regulations and safe driving techniques.

The teacher is Patrolman John O'Connell, Traffic Division veteran who has the classic visage of a benevolent Irish cop and another vital attribute: He learned the sign language as a youth from a friend who was deaf.

O'Connell has taught about 450 deaf persons since 1961. He says proudly:

"I've never heard of one of my graduates having an accident involving personal injury."

The driving courses for the deaf are a part of Chicago's pioneering Driver Improvement program operated by the police in cooperation with the Municipal Court. The students come voluntarily and consider it a privilege. Some already have driver's licenses, most do not.

"My students are of all ages," O'Connell reports. "There are always several young men who need a driver's license to qualify for jobs they hope to get."

They come to a specially outfitted room in the court's downtown Central Office Building. In it are a working traffic light and typical road signs.

To get his lessons across, O'Connell uses movies, slides, large photos and a magnetic blackboard on which markers representing autos can be moved about. He also imparts in sign language special advice for deaf drivers.

DO'S & DON'TS

Examples: ● When stopped for a traffic light, don't start before other cars do. Should a police car or ambulance be approaching, whose siren could not be heard, the deaf driver thus would not innocently move into its path. ● Stay to the right, to keep out of the way of emergency vehicles and other cars swinging past from behind. ● Keep a close watch on the rearview mirror.

"I also tell them to keep their eyes moving," O'Connell says. "But they don't need much help on that. Their vision is phenomenal."

The program does not provide driving instruction. The deaf must learn the mechanics of driving and pass the Motor Vehicle Department test on their own.

"These deaf people really appreciate the course, because they value driving so highly," O'Connell says. "They shake hands with me after every session. And I'll tell you something. I have great confidence in them as drivers. I was riding with a deaf fellow a while back when suddenly, for no reason I could figure out, he pulled over to the curb. In about five seconds I heard a fire engine coming. He had spotted it before I heard it."

ANYTHING CAN HAPPEN IN THE PEACE CORPS

by ROBERT G. DEINDORFER

Five years ago this week the late John F. Kennedy stroked his small, crabbed signature to a Presidential Order and created an imaginative new government agency.

Today America's bold and venturesome Peace Corps is a popular success both at home and abroad. In 48 different countries on four continents 12,000 hard-working volunteers teach school, erect sewage systems, help build roads and bridges, staff hospitals, bring modern farming to worn out land.

Quite plainly, the Peace Corps has fulfilled the bright promise Kennedy first saw in it. In five dramatic years it has made innumerable substantial contributions to underdeveloped nations struggling to climb up into the 20th century. During those same years volunteers experienced personal, significant incidents of their own. Isolated individual moments may not add up to earth-shaking achievement. But taken together, a selection of these incidents—frivolous and otherwise—helps to bring out the full flavor of life abroad in the Peace Corps. Here are some of the most outstanding:

• Until the day it happened, volunteer Dave Coombs hadn't ever tried one of the standard issue water purification pills. Like many another young Peace Corpsman, he'd carried the pills around in his pocket, just in case, without ever getting around to using one.

As Coombs sat in the home of a big, bluff farmer named Don José in southern Chile, he realized the time finally had come. A pitcher of water stood on the dining room table around which they were seated.

All of a sudden Coombs saw his chance to certify the water he'd be drinking without insulting his host. While José turned his back for a moment Coombs, with a gambler's gesture, dropped two purification pills into the pitcher.

Then Don José spun back around again. A dramatic transformation came over him. His dark moustache bristled, his eyeballs abruptly enlarged and his chest filled with air. Sputtering, he picked up the pitcher, clumped across the dining room, emptied the water out the window.

In the kitchen the farmer boisterously scolded and cursed his wife for daring to serve bad water to their guest. All the time Coombs sat in his chair listening to the clamor, helpless, unable to confess his involvement for fear of offending these new friends. The memory of that day still lingers in Dave Coombs's mind. Until then he hadn't known that purification pills turn water a bright shade of orange-brown.

• On the day the Dominican revolution erupted in April 1965, Geer Wilcox, a lean, crew-cut young volunteer teacher, returned alone to his small, fourth-floor apartment in the northwest of Santo Domingo. On a Wednesday evening rebel forces dropped a flutter of leaflets threatening to bomb homes in that area. By phone Wilcox and two other volunteers who lived nearby were told to walk out to the residence of an American official as soon as they could. Next morning Wilcox slung a knapsack over his shoulder and the three of them set out afoot across a field.

Along the way they passed bands of both rebel and loyalist troopers, truck-

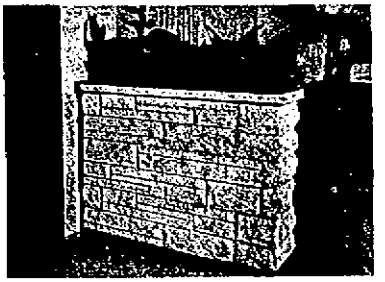
MAKE LIFE EASIER—TAKE A LOOK AT THESE SMART NEW IDEAS FOR YOUR HOME AND FAMILY ■ BY PETER DRYDEN



All-around vacuum: You can use this 5-gallon-capacity machine (above) to clean basement, garage, workshop, patio or furnace. It picks up pebbles, sticks, leaves, glass, nails—and drops them to bottom of drum, out of air flow pattern, so they don't interfere with suction. You can attach it directly to sander or saw to eliminate sawdust problems—and use its exhaust for spray painting and drying. With 6-ft. flexible hose and nozzle: $39.95. Details: Hendry, Dept. PP, Box 183, Upper Montclair, N. J.

Waffles the easy way: Newest waffle baker has grids double-coated with nonstick Teflon. After initial seasoning, you need use no oil or grease, and grids are easy to clean. Also featured: a signal light that shows both when grids are preheated and waffles done. $34.95. Westinghouse, Dept. PP, Mansfield, Ohio.

Instant bathroom cleaner: A new preparation you spray as a foam onto sinks, tubs, other surfaces, clings to vertical areas without running, kills most household germs on contact and cleans without need for rinsing. Just spray on, wipe away with dry cloth. 80¢. S. C. Johnson, Dept. PP, Racine, Wis.

For your car: Now comes an electronic ignition system you can install in 10 minutes to maintain "just tuned" engine performance, increase fuel mileage, extend point and plug life up to 50,000 miles, claims the maker. The one-piece unit—it uses a silicon controlled rectifier instead of conventional transistors—has no intricate wiring, works in any 12-volt negative ground car (or truck or boat), carries a 1-year guarantee and is designed so it will, in case of failure, automatically switch your regular ignition back on. $29.95. Norman, Dept. PP, 814 Diversey Pkwy, Chicago, Ill. 60614.

Pen and scale: Handy in the barrel of a new ballpoint pen is a little scale with postage indicator—so you can write a letter, get the correct weight (up to 4 oz.), see the postage needed for first class or air mail. $1.95 postpaid. *M. MEASURIN

THE FIRST 8-HOUR ASPIRIN

MEASURIN® measures out aspirin relief up to 8 hours!

Sleep relieved of pain...wake up relieved of pain

Measurin®—proved effective in medically supervised clinical tests. Now, after years of research, a way has been found to make a form of aspirin that gives long-lasting pain relief up to 8 hours.

Measurin ends the need to take aspirin every 4 hours. Take Measurin, instead of regular aspirin, for the temporary relief of minor aches and pains due to fatigue, neuralgia, or the common cold...simple headache...the minor aches and pains of arthritis or rheumatism. With new Measurin, you can get fast relief, and you get up to 8 hours of aspirin pain relief.

For people with pain who depend on aspirin. You can now work, sleep, or be active...relieved of pain for up to 8 hours from a single dose of new Measurin. And, if you suffer from arthritis or rheumatism, Measurin provides even better relief of early morning pain and stiffness than a bedtime dose of regular aspirin.

6,000 tiny reservoirs of aspirin are compressed in each Measurin tablet. Your stomach fluids diffuse into the aspirin and then, for as long as 8 hours, aspirin relief is measured out gently into your system.

Both prompt and prolonged aspirin pain relief with Measurin. For years, doctors have recommended regular aspirin as a pain-reliever more than any other medicine—especially to those with the minor aches and pains of arthritis or rheumatism. Now, with new Measurin, it is at last possible to get both fast and prolonged aspirin relief in one effective medication. Remember, too, Measurin is gentle to the stomach.

Volunteer Geer Wilcox did yeoman service in Santo Domingo —and is totally blind.

loads of soldiers and a medium tank strafed from the air minutes later. At one point a Dominican doctor gave them a lift in his car. Not far off the roadway, bursts of gunfire crackled in the warm Caribbean air.

At the end of his hazardous trek the young American was assigned to work with others in the kitchen of a local hotel. Despite a lack of experience, he energetically helped distribute food to men, women and children and, later, sat by a telephone relaying messages to a radio station.

In turbulent Santo Domingo, the Peace Corps demonstrated its ability to react well under crisis conditions. Yet Wilcox was regarded as extraordinary by even the high standards of other volunteers on the scene. Geer Wilcox, 24 years old, happened to be totally blind.

• For two days rackety anti-American demonstrations boiled through the old provincial capital of Amasya in north-central Turkey. Angry and emotional Turks gathered together by the hundreds, listened to inflammatory speeches, marched around the village square loudly protesting the American position on Cyprus.

On Sunday afternoon a part of the demonstration moved indoors to a nearby coffeehouse where the Turks continued their criticism until a young civil servant leaped up onto a table.

"We have forgotten Bill Aron," he said. "What about our friend Bill Aron?"

An awkward flutter of silence fell over the crowd. The men stared at one another, nodded, wondered whether their demonstration had hurt the feelings of the Peace Corps schoolteacher. Finally, a great mountain of an apple farmer spoke.

"We should go tell Bill our thanks," he said.

Up the hill they trooped, in twos and threes, heavy boots clumping on the hard track of the land, others joining in along the way. When 23-year-old Bill Aron opened the door more than 70 Turks stood outside his two-room adobe home.

A shopkeeper named Mehmet stepped forward. "Bill, don't take offense at what went on in Amasya today," he said. The others nodded. "It wasn't about you personally. It was—ah—politics. We like you, we think highly of you—and we wish you to stay with us here always."

• On Lee Makela's very first day as a schoolteacher in Thailand, he was asked to keep order in a class of 35 young girls. He sat at the desk, smiling a little, wondering if the girls would show any special welcome for a new teacher.

Moments later a student walked up to the desk, knelt beside him and handed Makela a dish of rambutan leaves, each one carefully peeled, all of them beautifully placed on the plate. His face opened in a smile of thanks as Makela squinted at the Thai writing on the card in the plate. He couldn't read Thai, not yet, but he could guess what the card said—"To our teacher" or "Welcome to our school."

With a visible show of pleasure, Makela took a piece of rambutan and ate it. The girls in the class giggled. Then a second girl brought him a dish, and a third, and a fourth. Makela did the best he could to keep up with the flow of gifts. Smiling, nodding, sampling each one to avoid hurting any feelings, the teacher managed to show his appreciation.

As more and more plates arrived at the desk, the young Peace Corps volunteer desperately tried to think of some diplomatic way out of his predicament. He couldn't. While the girls continued to giggle, he sampled a bit of each gift and nodded his thanks.

Finally the head mistress of the school, attracted perhaps by the laughter, appeared in the doorway. She stood watching Lee Makela attempt to devour the growing array of fruit. Then, smiling faintly, she walked across the room and leaned over the desk.

"You are presently eating the girls' final examinations in Proper Preparation of Fruits and Vegetables," she said. "Please leave enough for the examiner."

David Coombs experienced amusing crisis during good will visit in southern Chile.

BUBBLE COFFEE RING

by Beth Merriman

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

The next time the "girls" in your neighborhood get together at your house for late morning coffee, serve this mouth-watering Filbert Bubble Ring. Make it the day before, reheat it when they arrive and your reputation as a baking expert will be enhanced.

FILBERT BUBBLE RING

1 cup firmly packed brown sugar
2 teaspoons cinnamon
Sweet Dough (see recipe below)
½ cup butter or margarine, melted
1 cup toasted chopped filberts
¼ cup golden raisins

Mix sugar and cinnamon. Shape dough into 1-inch balls; dip in butter, coat with sugar-cinnamon mixture. Place half the balls in well-greased 9-inch tube pan, scatter with half the filberts and raisins. Repeat. Cover; let rise in warm place until double in bulk, about 1 hour. Bake at 375° for 1 hour, or until cake tests done. Cool in pan 10 minutes. Invert pan on serving dish; let stand several minutes before removing pan. Serve cake warm or cooled.

SWEET DOUGH:

½ cup milk
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup butter or margarine, softened
2 packages active dry yeast
½ cup warm water (105° to 115°)
2 eggs, slightly beaten
1 tablespoon grated lemon peel
4½ cups sifted all-purpose flour

Scald milk, stir in sugar, salt and butter. Cool to lukewarm. Sprinkle yeast over warm water in large bowl; let stand 5 minutes, then stir until blended. Stir in milk mixture, eggs, lemon peel and 2 cups flour. Beat until smooth. Stir in remaining flour to make soft dough. Cover with damp towel. Chill at least 2 to 3 hours or overnight. Knead dough on lightly floured surface until smooth and elastic. Shape as desired. FROM PARADE'S TEST KITCHEN

Here's a new one (and it's really great!) Dole pineapple and tuna salad

Make a tuna salad the usual way—with chopped green onion, celery and mayonnaise. Surround it with drained Dole pineapple chunks. You'll be surprised how good pineapple and tuna taste together! Dole pineapple is always a special treat, because it's always Hawaiian pineapple. The soil and climate of Hawaii put something into Dole's flavor that pineapple from other parts of the world just never has!

LIMITED OFFER: Unusual Monkey Pod salad servers for only $1.50 plus either 1 Dole label and 1 tuna label —or 2 Dole labels.

If you could buy them in a store, you'd expect to pay up to $4.00—but they're available only through Dole. The graceful shape of these handsome servers makes them easy to handle as well as decorative. They are beautifully carved and highly polished to show the rich grain of the rare monkey pod wood. An elegant addition to any salad bowl!

Pick Dole: the pineapple with the fresh-fruit taste (Hawaii's best, America's favorite!)

AMERICANS IN JAPAN

Interior designers Dale and wife Pat Keller own and operate one of the largest such businesses in the Orient. Their firm, Pacific House, boasts branches in Tokyo, Hong Kong and Taipei, plans to expand soon to Manila and Bangkok. The Kellers met in Tokyo, married there, now have two sons.

TOKYO.

Since World War II thousands of Americans, either as military personnel, businessmen or tourists, have been exposed to both the exotic delights and—for Westerners—the sometimes incredible frustrations of life in Japan. Most have served their time, looked around and gone home. A few, like those shown in these photos, have stayed behind. They stay because they like Japan's kaleidoscopic countryside, its climate and its peoples' unique approach to life or because they have businesses they feel they can't leave. This transition from West to East, however, hasn't been easy. Differences in customs can be wildly exasperating to those trying to carry on a business by Western standards, and the language is one of the world's most difficult to learn. Yet all admit Japan offers them something special—some allure to which each has happily succumbed. —BERNARD KRISHER

BUBBLE COFFEE RING

by Beth Merriman

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

The next time the "girls" in your neighborhood get together at your house for late morning coffee, serve this mouth-watering Filbert Bubble Ring. Make it the day before, reheat it when they arrive and your reputation as a baking expert will be enhanced.

FILBERT BUBBLE RING

1 cup firmly packed brown sugar
2 teaspoons cinnamon
Sweet Dough (see recipe below)
½ cup butter or margarine, melted
1 cup toasted chopped filberts
¼ cup golden raisins

Mix sugar and cinnamon. Shape dough into 1-inch balls; dip in butter, coat with sugar-cinnamon mixture. Place half the balls in well-greased 9-inch tube pan, scatter with half the filberts and raisins. Repeat. Cover; let rise in warm place until double in bulk, about 1 hour. Bake at 375° for 1 hour, or until cake tests done. Cool in pan 10 minutes. Invert pan on serving dish; let stand several minutes before removing pan. Serve cake warm or cooled.

SWEET DOUGH:

½ cup milk
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup butter or margarine, softened
2 packages active dry yeast
½ cup warm water (105° to 115°)
2 eggs, slightly beaten
1 tablespoon grated lemon peel
4½ cups sifted all-purpose flour

Scald milk, stir in sugar, salt and butter. Cool to lukewarm. Sprinkle yeast over warm water in large bowl; let stand 5 minutes, then stir until blended. Stir in milk mixture, eggs, lemon peel and 2 cups flour. Beat until smooth. Stir in remaining flour to make soft dough. Cover with damp towel. Chill at least 2 to 3 hours or overnight. Knead dough on lightly floured surface until smooth and elastic. Shape as desired. FROM PARADE'S TEST KITCHEN

My Favorite Jokes

EDITOR'S NOTE: Everett Everett Everett is a comic who makes his home in Revere, Mass., but claims to be at home in any state because he's played them all. Now in his late 40's, Everett started out at Revere High where he wrote skits, majored in dramatics, worked after hours in neighborhood clubs for pin money. He formed a comic trio called "The Nuts Brothers" and within two years appeared at the Shamrock in Houston, the Town Casino in Buffalo, the Three Rivers Inn in Syracuse and many other top spots. Ten years ago Everett became a single, entertained servicemen in Germany, booked himself as an emcee on the cruise ship circuit and a social director at summer resorts. He's married, has three children, and prefers to play Boston and environs. This summer he will work as emcee and social director at the Griswold Hotel in Groton, Conn. The following jokes are culled from his routines at the Playboy Club in New Orleans, the Riverside in Reno, and the 500 Club in Atlantic City.

My daughter, a precocious child, asked her mother why she didn't have another baby.

"I'm sorry," my wife explained. "Babies are expensive, and right now we can't afford one."

"Mommy," my daughter answered. "Women don't buy babies. I think you and I better have a little talk."

Last week my wife and I celebrated our tin anniversary—12 years eating out of cans.

Two coeds, attending their first football game, sat and watched eagerly while the rain came down in buckets. Said one: "Those poor football players out there, so muddy and dirty. How will they ever get clean?"

"You sure are ignorant," declared her pal. "That's what the scrub team is for."

A famous film queen was asked if she really was publicity-crazy and would do anything to get her name or photograph in the newspapers.

"Don't be silly," she replied. "When I walk down Hollywood Boulevard with my pet lion, we are both always conservatively dressed."

A Broadway producer was interviewed on television. He was asked to tell the story of his success. "I was a struggling young beginner," he explained. "Trying to get my first hit on the boards was a monumental job. I was surrounded by depression, discouragement, mounting bills, all sorts of obstacles. It would have broken any other man's back. The weight I carried on my shoulders, the awful responsibility. But did I quit? Did I falter? Did I turn and run tail? Heck no. I just gritted my teeth, rolled up my sleeves, raced into a nearby phone booth, called my father and asked for another $100,000."

Among the things that money can't buy is what it used to.

Two can live as cheaply as one, only now it takes both to earn enough money to do it.

Never send a boy on a man's job, or you'll have the unions on your back.

If men dressed like women—women would turn around and look, too.

Remember, before you criticize teenagers, that a teenager in 10 years is somebody who will be complaining about teenagers.

It's a fact that a recent survey shows that nine out of 10 doctors who preferred a particular cigarette have now switched back to women.

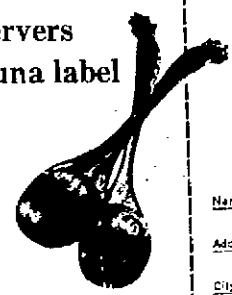
Here's a new one (and it's really great!) Dole pineapple and tuna salad



Make a tuna salad the usual way—with chopped green onion, celery and mayonnaise. Surround it with drained Dole pineapple chunks. You'll be surprised how good pineapple and tuna taste together! Dole pineapple is always a special treat, because it's always Hawaiian pineapple. The soil and climate of Hawaii put something into Dole's flavor that pineapple from other parts of the world just never has!

LIMITED OFFER: Unusual Monkey Pod salad servers for only $1.50 plus either 1 Dole label and 1 tuna label —or 2 Dole labels.

If you could buy them in a store, you'd expect to pay up to $4.00—but they're available only through Dole. The graceful shape of these handsome servers makes them easy to handle as well as decorative. They are beautifully carved and highly polished to show the rich grain of the rare monkey pod wood. An elegant addition to any salad bowl!

BEAUTY INJECTIONS

A PROGRESS REPORT

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

Ten years from today chances are excellent that any woman in this country who can afford it will boast, if she so desires, a 36-inch bust or larger, and a relatively wrinkle-free face.

She will call on her plastic surgeon or even her family physician (because the technique is not difficult to learn) to tell him what she wants in the way of complexion or curves, and the physician will provide them.

He will inject small amounts of liquid silicone which will harmlessly enlarge the bust and fill out the wrinkles.

The procedure is currently in vogue in Mexico City, Paris, Tokyo, Osaka and other foreign cities. Until recently it was spreading like a bonfire in this country, especially in California, New York, Nevada, Texas, Florida and Illinois. But last year the federal Food and Drug Administration called a halt to it by classifying silicones for injections into humans as "new drugs." The agency prohibited the use of liquid silicone on humans until specific research had been undertaken to determine its safety and effectiveness under a claimed investigational drug exemption.

OLD OR IMPURE

I know at least 100 women, mostly actresses and showgirls, who've had their busts enlarged in the past few years with silicone—a liquid about the consistency of olive oil. But today any American physician who is currently injecting patients with the material is (1) using old supplies of silicone not yet discovered and confiscated by the Food and Drug Administration or (2) using commercial silicone that is neither pure nor sterile and may cause harmful effects owing to its impurities.

Other than an ophthalmologist working on detached retinas, there is only one exception to the above statement. The exception at this writing includes six plastic surgeons and one dermatologist. These are the only physicians in the nation with a legal supply of liquid silicone. They are permitted to use it on the face and other soft tissue sites, but not in the bosom area.

These are official investigators who are conducting clinical trials under very strict regulations on a limited number of patients.

The plastic surgeons are Dr. Dicran Goulian and Dr. Thomas Rees of New York City, Dr. Ralph Blocksma of Grand Rapids, Mich., Dr. Milton Edgerton of Johns Hopkins University, Dr. Reed Dingman of the University of Michigan, Dr. Franklin Ashley of Los Angeles. The dermatologist is Dr. Norman Orentreich of New York City.

For more than six months these specialists have been working with liquid silicone, injecting it into the faces of dozens of patients, carefully watching for adverse effects, especially the slightest sign of cancer, granulomas, or fibromas which are fibrous nonmalignant tumors just beneath the skin.

Dr. Franklin Ashley, Dr. Goulian, Dr. Rees and Dr. Silas Bralcy in a paper scheduled for early publication in the Journal of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery, are expected to report on the basis of clinical trials that injection of small volumes of pure liquid silicone into the facial area causes no perceptible harm.

Last year in the same medical journal, June 1965, Volume 35, No. 6, Dr. Ashley described how he had injected 11 patients suffering from facial hemiatrophy (atrophy or degeneration limited to one side of the face) with weekly and biweekly injections of silicone ranging from 10 cc. to 1 cc.

"Care was taken," he writes, "to inject only small quantities in one place . . . and the patients were encouraged to massage the area gently either by hand or with a vibrator to help disperse the material. Patients reported a mild swelling in the area for two to four days, but minimal discomfort. Narcotics or other analgesics have not been necessary.

"The initial one or two injections often seemed to have disappeared into the face by the time of the return visit but the results of further therapy became quite apparent. No 'drifting' of the material has occurred after the initial positioning. No infection, granuloma formation, drainage or other complications have occurred in any of the patients. In followup over three years no disappearance of the initial increase in soft tissue bulk has occurred."

In researching liquid silicone (dimethyl-polysiloxane) produced by the Dow Corning Corporation of Midland, Mich. —the only medically pure silicone in this country—I have interviewed 22 physicians since 1962 who have used the chemical either on humans or animals. They all insist that it is stable, inert, nontoxic, and in its pure state without any additives, elicits practically no foreign body response. In its solid state silicone is used for heart valves, tendon substitutes, and other prosthetic devices implanted in the human body.

They feel strongly that employed knowledgeably and carefully, it is a material which can be safely injected into the human body for soft tissue augmentation or reconstruction.

Elizabeth Taylor has never had silicone treatment. But because others want to look like her, treatment is in demand.

FURTHER TRIALS

The Food and Drug Administration, however, is playing it cautiously—and justifiably so. After Dr. Ashley's report and other similar studies are carefully checked, the agency will probably permit further clinical trials on the face and the soft tissue areas except for the bosom. Once these are approved, a process which may take five or six years, the agency may authorize the fluid injection procedure of Dow Corning MDX 4-4011 Medical Fluid as safe for these areas.

When it comes to using it in the breast, the same procedure will have to be undertaken. A few specialists will be allowed to test it. If no harm is done, other investigators will be allowed to amass further data. If long-term data assure the safety and effectiveness of the material in the bosom, approval may follow.

Ten years of investigation should tell the story. Unfortunately American women are the most beauty-conscious females in the world. Many of them won't wait 10 years to have their wrinkles removed and their busts enlarged. These are the impatient ones who are flying off to Mexico City and Tokyo where medical safety procedures aren't as stringent as they are in this country.

In 1961 when I interviewed Dr. Rin Sakurai of Tokyo, reportedly the first physician to employ liquid silicone medically, he used a solution made of 99 per cent liquid silicone, ½ per cent olive oil, ½ per cent fatty acids. He named it the Sakurai Formula, and through a group of Hollywood promoters, applied for U.S. Food and Drug approval—only he refused to detail the origin or manufacturing procedure of his liquid. The agency promptly banned the Sakurai Formula from this country, confiscated batches of the solution from U.S. doctors who had purchased some from the corporation set up by the Hollywood promoters to make a financial killing.

So, ladies, for the time being bust treatment with silicone is out. But 10 years from today our daughters and sons (many Hollywood actors have had their wrinkles filled in) will be able to take full advantage of these progressive achievements in the field of cosmetic medicine. Pure silicone fluids are obviously destined to play a role in making women more beautiful and men more handsome.

AMERICANS IN JAPAN

TOKYO.

Since World War II thousands of Americans, either as military personnel, businessmen or tourists, have been exposed to both the exotic delights and—for Westerners—the sometimes incredible frustrations of life in Japan. Most have served their time, looked around and gone home. A few, like those shown in these photos, have stayed behind. They stay because they like Japan's kaleidoscopic countryside, its climate and its peoples' unique approach to life or because they have businesses they feel they can't leave. This transition from West to East, however, hasn't been easy. Differences in customs can be wildly exasperating to those trying to carry on a business by Western standards, and the language is one of the world's most difficult to learn. Yet all admit Japan offers them something special—some allure to which each has happily succumbed. —BERNARD KRISHER

8 times more power to relieve pain of HEMORRHOIDS!

Soothing Nupercainal concentrates on pain! Prolonged relief of pain, burning and itching starts in minutes.

If you suffer from the misery of hemorrhoids, remember this about remedies you can buy for temporary relief. The leading "shrinking" preparation contains no anesthetic to relieve that pain.

No wonder so many doctors recommend Nupercainal. Soothing Nupercainal relieves pain, itching, burning fast... gives prolonged relief...because it has over eight times more pain-killing power than the other most commonly-used topical anesthetic!

Nupercainal quickly puts raw nerve ends to sleep...thus puts pain to sleep. Lets you go about your business...relieved of the pain, burning and itching torment of hemorrhoids. Get Nupercainal Suppositories, today—with free, handy pocket-pack. Start to live again, in comfort! (Ointment also available.)

THE HOME LIFE OF OUR ROYAL VISITOR

WHEN FATHER IS A PRINCE

by RENÉ LECLER

Father and son—Philip and Charles—show similar mannerisms in recent appearance. But they are different in temperament. Charles is more like his mother.

Not long ago when it was learned in London that Prince Philip had named a press agent to look after his United States tour, which begins next week, one intimate of the royal family remarked: "He could have saved himself the money. One of his children would have done the job to perfection. They are always raving about how wonderful Dad is."

It is a fact that at 45, Philip, Duke of Edinburgh, Earl of Merioneth, Baron Greenwich, Knight of the Garter, Privy Councillor, Knight of the Thistle, Grand Master of the Order of the British Empire and Fellow of the Royal Society for the Advancement of Science, has the enthusiastic approval of his four children, ranging from 17 to 2.

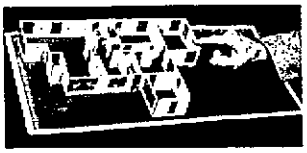
When, some time ago, a friend asked him whether he wasn't in danger of becoming a bit square, Philip raised an eyebrow and retorted: "With four kids? You must be joking." Philip holds his own without too much apparent effort. A few months ago, after a noisy pop session in the royal family's sitting room, Princess Anne got up and called to her sailor father: "See you later, navigator." Philip retorted: "Not if I can help it."

And last year Prince Charles discovered to his delight that French teenagers usually refer to people over 30 as les croulants (the crumbling ones). He taxed his father with it and Philip replied: "I'll show you who's crumbling. Choose your weapons." Charles chose swimming. Father and son went down to the Palace swimming pool and the then-44-year-old beat his 16-year-old son by a length and a half.

Philip's relationship with his children is one of unreserved affection and good-natured equality with more than a tinge of mutual respect. Philip isn't the calculating sort: he says what he thinks outright and with no apologies. He can be extremely rude, and if he thinks a remark is warranted he doesn't worry about its immediate effect. Charles and Anne know this and they don't bear grudges.

But the royal children also know that Dad is always good for a laugh—especially one directed at himself. A year ago, when Philip visited an experimental zoo, he had himself photographed holding flippers with a penguin. He sent the picture home with the caption: "I am the one on the right." Anne got hold of the film, had the picture reversed and sent it back to her father with the words: "At least the one on the right is properly dressed."

Philip is his children's best friend, and they have enormous respect for him. Although he may be number two in the realm, he is certainly number one at home. His deliberate, naval way of getting things done delights them, and they also know that he is no fool and must not be pushed too far.



Some time back, in the early Beatles era, Prince Charles developed an abiding dislike of barbers and wore his hair moplike over his face. Philip, used to regulation haircuts, objected. In a letter to his sister, Charles asked: "And how is old short-back-and-sides?" Next time Charles went home on vacation, the first person to greet him at the London station was the royal barber, who apologized and repeated his instructions: "Old short-back-and-sides sends his compliments. He wants you worked on right away, before he sees you. This way, sir." Charles's hair has been relatively short ever since.

PHILIP & THE FLYING PORRIDGE

Even the younger royal children have learned by now that their father is a no-nonsense man. One morning a few months ago, Prince Philip opened the door of the Buckingham Palace nursery and narrowly missed a flying spoonful of porridge which Andrew, 5, had carefully aimed at the wall. Father said nothing, went in and sat down astride a nursery chair, took the spoon and quickly ate all the porridge. Wiping his lips he told the governess: "This stuff's too good for babies. Give it to me instead every morning." Within three days Prince Andrew was clamoring to be allowed porridge again.

One of the few failings which Philip has as a father is that he is absolutely convinced that he knows what constitutes correct upbringing—the kind he himself had, of course. He got his way when Charles was sent to the tough, character-forming Gordonstoun School some years ago, notwithstanding the fact that Charles, considerably more dreamy and sensitive than his father, might have been harmed by it. As it happens, he seems

A PROGRESS REPORT

Ten years from today chances are excellent that any woman in this country who can afford it will boast, if she so desires, a 36-inch bust or larger, and a relatively wrinkle-free face.

She will call on her plastic surgeon or even her family physician (because the technique is not difficult to learn) to tell him what she wants in the way of complexion or curves, and the physician will provide them.

He will inject small amounts of liquid silicone which will harmlessly enlarge the bust and fill out the wrinkles.

The procedure is currently in vogue in Mexico City, Paris, Tokyo, Osaka and other foreign cities. Until recently it was spreading like a bonfire in this country, especially in California, New York, Nevada, Texas, Florida and Illinois. But last year the federal Food and Drug Administration called a halt to it by classifying silicones for injections into humans as "new drugs." The agency prohibited the use of liquid silicone on humans until specific research had been undertaken to determine its safety and effectiveness under a claimed investigational drug exemption.

OLD OR IMPURE

I know at least 100 women, mostly actresses and showgirls, who've had their busts enlarged in the past few years with silicone—a liquid about the consistency of olive oil. But today any American physician who is currently injecting patients with the material is (1) using old supplies of silicone not yet discovered and confiscated by the Food and Drug Administration or (2) using commercial silicone that is neither pure nor sterile and may cause harmful effects owing to its impurities.

Other than an ophthalmologist working on detached retinas, there is only one exception to the above statement. The exception at this writing includes six plastic surgeons and one dermatologist. These are the only physicians in the nation with a legal supply of liquid silicone. They are permitted to use it on the face and other soft tissue sites, but not in the bosom area.

These are official investigators who are conducting clinical trials under very strict regulations on a limited number of patients.

The plastic surgeons are Dr. Dicran Goulian and Dr. Thomas Rees of New York City, Dr. Ralph Blocksma of Grand Rapids, Mich., Dr. Milton Edgerton of Johns Hopkins University, Dr. Reed Dingman of the University of Michigan, Dr. Franklin Ashley of Los Angeles. The dermatologist is Dr. Norman Orentreich of New York City.

For more than six months these specialists have been working with liquid silicone, injecting it into the faces of dozens of patients, carefully watching for adverse effects, especially the slightest sign of cancer, granulomas, or fibromas which are fibrous nonmalignant tumors just beneath the skin.

Dr. Franklin Ashley, Dr. Goulian, Dr. Rees and Dr. Silas Braley in a paper scheduled for early publication in the Journal of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery, are expected to report on the basis of clinical trials that injection of small volumes of pure liquid silicone into the facial area causes no perceptible harm.

Last year in the same medical journal, June 1965, Volume 35, No. 6, Dr. Ashley described how he had injected 11 patients suffering from facial hemiatrophy (atrophy or degeneration limited to one side of the face) with weekly and biweekly injections of silicone ranging from 10 cc. to 1 cc.

"Care was taken," he writes, "to inject only small quantities in one place . . . and the patients were encouraged to massage the area gently either by hand or with a vibrator to help disperse the material. Patients reported a mild swelling in the area for two to four days, but minimal discomfort. Narcotics or other analgesics have not been necessary.

"The initial one or two injections often seemed to have disappeared into the face by the time of the return visit but the results of further therapy became quite apparent. No 'drifting' of the material has occurred after the initial positioning. No infection, granuloma formation, drainage or other complications have occurred in any of the patients. In followup over three years no disappearance of the initial increase in soft tissue bulk has occurred."

In researching liquid silicone (dimethyl-polysiloxane) produced by the Dow Corning Corporation of Midland, Mich.—the only medically pure silicone in this country—I have interviewed 22 physicians since 1962 who have used the chemical either on humans or animals. They all insist that it is stable, inert, nontoxic, and in its pure state without any additives, elicits practically no foreign body response. In its solid state silicone is used for heart valves, tendon substitutes, and other prosthetic devices implanted in the human body.

They feel strongly that employed knowledgeably and carefully, it is a material which can be safely injected into the human body for soft tissue augmentation or reconstruction.

Elizabeth Taylor has never had silicone treatment. But because others want to look like her, treatment is in demand.

FURTHER TRIALS

The Food and Drug Administration, however, is playing it cautiously—and justifiably so. After Dr. Ashley's report and other similar studies are carefully checked, the agency will probably permit further clinical trials on the face and the soft tissue areas except for the bosom. Once these are approved, a process which may take five or six years, the agency may authorize the fluid injection procedure of Dow Corning MDX 4-4011 Medical Fluid as safe for these areas.

When it comes to using it in the breast, the same procedure will have to be undertaken. A few specialists will be allowed to test it. If no harm is done, other investigators will be allowed to amass further data. If long-term data assure the safety and effectiveness of the material in the bosom, approval may follow.

Ten years of investigation should tell the story. Unfortunately American women are the most beauty-conscious females in the world. Many of them won't wait 10 years to have their wrinkles removed and their busts enlarged. These are the impatient ones who are flying off to Mexico City and Tokyo where medical safety procedures aren't as stringent as they are in this country.

In 1961 when I interviewed Dr. Rin Sakurai of Tokyo, reportedly the first physician to employ liquid silicone medically, he used a solution made of 99 per cent liquid silicone; ½ per cent olive oil, ½ per cent fatty acids. He named it the Sakurai Formula, and through a group of Hollywood promoters, applied for U.S. Food and Drug approval—only he refused to detail the origin or manufacturing procedure of his liquid. The agency promptly banned the Sakurai Formula from this country, confiscated batches of the solution from U.S. doctors who had purchased some from the corporation set up by the Hollywood promoters to make a financial killing.

So, ladies, for the time being bust treatment with silicone is out. But 10 years from today our daughters and sons (many Hollywood actors have had their wrinkles filled in) will be able to take full advantage of these progressive achievements in the field of cosmetic medicine. Pure silicone fluids are obviously destined to play a role in making women more beautiful and men more handsome.

to have borne the ordeal well and bravely and now acts and behaves so much like his father that it has become a matter of public comment.

The royal father's relationship with Anne is easier. Like him, she is an extrovert, talkative, argumentative and vital. She is as tough as he is. At one time, the joke was going the rounds that it was Anne who ought to have gone to Gordonstoun.

For her father Anne has what amounts to hero worship. Two years ago, after she had gone to her first adult dance, the Queen is reported to have asked her what she thought of the boys. After a moment's reflection, she told her mother: "All right, I suppose. But none of them was like Daddy. They didn't stand up straight and you couldn't hear what they were saying."

Philip, who has many faults, has one great quality that serves him well when it comes to dealing with children: He is direct, chummy but firm, and considers them to be pint-size adults until proved otherwise. Once, during a dinner, someone asked him how he dealt with his young family. Right away the Queen's husband replied: "I think of them as if they were several years older than they really are. It flatters them and gives them a sense of responsibility."

EXPERT STORYTELLER

He also realizes instinctively what interests children. One of Britain's best television speakers—although he rarely appears on TV—he knows how to tell a story. Years ago, when he traveled a great deal in strange places, one could have sworn he was doing it for his children's benefit. He always returned with reels of color film which he had expertly taken himself, notes of amusing events and anecdotes, collections of strange butterflies, bits of dried vegetation. Evening after evening, Charles and Anne used to sit there enthralled, listening to every word he said. His stories helped them to acquire a rare understanding of the world. His imitation of the kookaburra, Australia's laughing bird, remains in the annals of the family as one of the most bloodcurdling performances ever heard.

Since the royal children will all have to lead semipublic lives one day, Prince Philip is determined that they learn decorum. Once, when Charles objected to wearing the kilt for a visit to Scotland, Philip left him behind in London, saying: "The Scots like to see the men of the royal family wearing the kilt. They have the right to it and if you can't be bothered, there is no Scotland for you."

However, the roles of the royal parents are reversed when it comes to serious matters of discipline. Just as it is Prince Philip who administers the royal household, it is the Queen who doles out praise or blame according to need. Eighteen months ago, when Charles was caught in a Scottish public house drinking the now famous and still illicit cherry brandy, it was the Queen who flew north to remonstrate. Anne, too, knows that in matters of public behavior, it is the Queen's word that really counts.

Once, at a dinner given in his honor by schoolmasters, the man who walks through life two paces behind his wife gave his own recipe for bringing up a family. "Lay down the law once and for all," he told his listeners. "Don't ever argue about it. Forget the little infractions. Let children develop normally between the guidelines. If something wrong develops, step on it hard, there and then." As an ex-naval man, he might have been quoting verbatim from the Queen's manual on what constitutes a happy ship.

Father and daughter compare notes at polo match. Princess Anne, like Philip, loves to ride, is outgoing, friendly and direct.

THE HOME LIFE OF OUR ROYAL VISITOR

WHEN FATHER IS A PRINCE

by RENÉ LECLER

Father and son—Philip and Charles—show similar mannerisms in recent appearance. But they are different in temperament. Charles is more like his mother.

Not long ago when it was learned in London that Prince Philip had named a press agent to look after his United States tour, which begins next week, one intimate of the royal family remarked: "He could have saved himself the money. One of his children would have done the job to perfection. They are always raving about how wonderful Dad is."

It is a fact that at 45, Philip, Duke of Edinburgh, Earl of Merioneth, Baron Greenwich, Knight of the Garter, Privy Councillor, Knight of the Thistle, Grand Master of the Order of the British Empire and Fellow of the Royal Society for the Advancement of Science, has the enthusiastic approval of his four children, ranging from 17 to 2.

When, some time ago, a friend asked him whether he wasn't in danger of becoming a bit square, Philip raised an eyebrow and retorted: "With four kids? You must be joking." Philip holds his own without too much apparent effort. A few months ago, after a noisy pop session in the royal family's sitting room, Princess Anne got up and called to her sailor father: "See you later, navigator." Philip retorted: "Not if I can help it."

And last year Prince Charles discovered to his delight that French teenagers usually refer to people over 30 as les croulants (the crumbling ones). He taxed his father with it and Philip replied: "I'll show you who's crumbling. Choose your weapons." Charles chose swimming. Father and son went down to the Palace swimming pool and the then-44-year-old beat his 16-year-old son by a length and a half.

Philip's relationship with his children is one of unreserved affection and good-natured equality with more than a tinge of mutual respect. Philip isn't the calculating sort: he says what he thinks outright and with no apologies. He can be extremely rude, and if he thinks a remark is warranted he doesn't worry about its immediate effect. Charles and Anne know this and they don't bear grudges.

But the royal children also know that Dad is always good for a laugh—especially one directed at himself. A year ago, when Philip visited an experimental zoo, he had himself photographed holding flippers with a penguin. He sent the picture home with the caption: "I am the one on the right." Anne got hold of the film, had the picture reversed and sent it back to her father with the words: "At least the one on the right is properly dressed."

Philip is his children's best friend, and they have enormous respect for him. Although he may be number two in the realm, he is certainly number one at home. His deliberate, naval way of getting things done delights them, and they also know that he is no fool and must not be pushed too far.

Some time back, in the early Beatles era, Prince Charles developed an abiding dislike of barbers and wore his hair moplike over his face. Philip, used to regulation haircuts, objected. In a letter to his sister, Charles asked: "And how is old short-back-and-sides?" Next time Charles went home on vacation, the first person to greet him at the London station was the royal barber, who apologized and repeated his instructions: "Old short-back-and-sides sends his compliments. He wants you worked on right away, before he sees you. This way, sir." Charles's hair has been relatively short ever since.

PHILIP & THE FLYING PORRIDGE

Even the younger royal children have learned by now that their father is a no-nonsense man. One morning a few months ago, Prince Philip opened the door of the Buckingham Palace nursery and narrowly missed a flying spoonful of porridge which Andrew, 5, had carefully aimed at the wall. Father said nothing, went in and sat down astride a nursery chair, took the spoon and quickly ate all the porridge. Wiping his lips he told the governess: "This stuff's too good for babies. Give it to me instead every morning." Within three days Prince Andrew was clamoring to be allowed porridge again.

One of the few failings which Philip has as a father is that he is absolutely convinced that he knows what constitutes correct upbringing—the kind he himself had, of course. He got his way when Charles was sent to the tough, character-forming Gordonstoun School some years ago, notwithstanding the fact that Charles, considerably more dreamy and sensitive than his father, might have been harmed by it. As it happens, he seems NATIONAL GUARD & RESERVE. "Why draft untrained men for the war in Vietnam when trained members of the Reserve and National Guard are available?" This is one of the questions most frequently asked of draft board members today. The main reason the National Guard and Reserve have not been called up yet is that under sections 672 and 673 of Title 10 of the existing law, a congressional resolution would be necessary, and the top military commanders believe at this time Congress would restrict such a callup to one year of active duty. "By the time you called up the men in the Reserve and National Guard," explains one Pentagon spokesman, "trained them, transported them, assigned them, their year would be up and you'd get darn little fighting time out of them." Several National Guard divisions, however, are now being brought up to a state of "increased readiness." They are the 28th Infantry Division (Pa., Md., Ohio), the 38th (Ind., Ill., Mich.), the 47th (Minn., Wis., Okla.) plus the following infantry brigades: the 29th from Hawaii, the 67th from Nebraska and Iowa, the 69th from Kansas and Missouri. Also one brigade each from the 36th Division (Tex.), the 41st Division (Ore. and Wash.) and the 49th Division (Calif.). A congressional resolution extending the tour of duty to 24 months, a distinct near probability, will send the above men into action and the Ready Reserve on alert for immediate callup. During the Berlin and Cuban crises, Congress authorized the callup of a million Reservists for a 24-month tour of duty if necessary.

MOTORCYCLE ACCIDENTS. The American College of Surgeons has asked its members to call parental, professional and public attention to "a new epidemic gaining ground in the United States"--the rising number of accidents resulting from motorcycles and scooters. There are an estimated 1 million motorcycles registered in this country. The ratio of deaths to the number of motorcycles is more than double the fatality rate with automobiles. Four Minnesota physicians who've made a study of 200 victims of motorcycle accidents in Minneapolis suggest: "It would be prudent to insist that drivers of motorcycles receive special instruction and demonstrate proficiency in the use of these machines before venturing onto our highways and city streets." Six months ago, in a trend toward safety training, New York State began requiring new motorcycle drivers to take special tests. Formerly an ordinary auto driving license was enough. Dr. James C. Drye, professor of surgery at the University of Louisville School of Medicine, a city plagued by a high incidence of motorcycle accidents, refers to the motorbike as "the most lethal weapon on our highways and streets." In Europe where motorbikes are popular because they're relatively cheap, they are known as "the doctors' friend." In the Canadian provinces of Alberta, Nova Scotia, British Columbia, protective helmets are compulsory gear for all motorbike drivers. What bothers most physicians about motorcycle accidents is the age of their victims. "They're so young," says Dr. Drye, "so pitifully young to die."

CHINESE BIRTH CONTROL. Red China is trying to limit its population now estimated at 750 million. Birth control clinics are springing up everywhere. In addition new regulations have been issued. The legal age for marriage is now 18 for women, 20 for men. Party leaders, however, are asked to defer marriage to later years and to set an example to the people by limiting births. University students are no longer permitted to marry until after graduation. Those who marry while in school are immediately expelled. Most widely used contraceptive device in China is the uterine bow, contraceptive pills being too expensive for mass distribution.

MARRIAGE BROKERS. Marriage brokers in Germany are becoming big business. There are now more than 100 "marriage institutes" in West Germany, doing an estimated annual gross business of $20 million. Practically every German periodical from the sophisticated liberal Die Zeit to the reactionary National Zeitung contains marital advertisements. It is estimated that as many as one out of three contemporary German marriages began with an advertisement. Many of the ads are inserted by parents on behalf of their offspring. "We seek for our daughter without her knowledge a young man up to 30, physically healthy, of good character, in excellent financial condition. Our daughter is not beautiful but charming, attractive, intelligent, sportlich-und-natürlich." Owing to the war there are a million spare unmarried German women, aged 35 to 50, who read the marriage ads daily with hope. Largest marriage agency in Germany is owned by Frau Dorothea Romba who runs 32 branches, spends $2500 a week inserting advertisements. Unlike this country there is surprisingly little embarrassment in Germany in making use of a marriage bureau. Neither women nor men are shy. "Why should they be?" asks Frau Romba. "In today's society it is the only way for so many of them to have a choice."

CONCENTRATED UNIONS. Figures released by the Labor Department reveal that the two most solidly unionized states in the nation are Washington with 43.1% of its eligible labor force unionized and West Virginia with 42%. Based on 1964 figures, almost 50% of the country's unionized workers are concentrated in five states: New York, California, Pennsylvania, Illinois and Ohio. The state least union-organized is North Carolina.

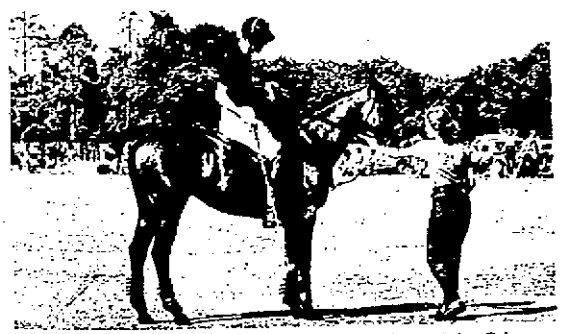
RECOMMENDED READING. The Vital Few by Jonathan Hughes, Houghton Mifflin Co., eight fascinating success stories of American industrial giants such as Ford, Whitney, Harriman, Carnegie, etc. The Proud Tower by Barbara Tuchman, Macmillan, a memorable history of the years preceding World War I. Both are headed for the nonfiction bestseller lists.

to have borne the ordeal well and bravely and now acts and behaves so much like his father that it has become a matter of public comment.

The royal father's relationship with Anne is easier. Like him, she is an extrovert, talkative, argumentative and vital. She is as tough as he is. At one time, the joke was going the rounds that it was Anne who ought to have gone to Gordonstoun.

For her father Anne has what amounts to hero worship. Two years ago, after she had gone to her first adult dance, the Queen is reported to have asked her what she thought of the boys. After a moment's reflection, she told her mother: "All right, I suppose. But none of them was like Daddy. They didn't stand up straight and you couldn't hear what they were saying."

Philip, who has many faults, has one great quality that serves him well when it comes to dealing with children: He is direct, chummy but firm, and considers them to be pint-size adults until proved otherwise. Once, during a dinner, someone asked him how he dealt with his young family. Right away the Queen's husband replied: "I think of them as if they were several years older than they really are. It flatters them and gives them a sense of responsibility."



EXPERT STORYTELLER

He also realizes instinctively what interests children. One of Britain's best television speakers—although he rarely appears on TV—he knows how to tell a story. Years ago, when he traveled a great deal in strange places, one could have sworn he was doing it for his children's benefit. He always returned with reels of color film which he had expertly taken himself, notes of amusing events and anecdotes, collections of strange butterflies, bits of dried vegetation. Evening after evening, Charles and Anne used to sit there enthralled, listening to every word he said. His stories helped them to acquire a rare understanding of the world. His imitation of the kookaburra, Australia's laughing bird, remains in the annals of the family as one of the most bloodcurdling performances ever heard.

Since the royal children will all have to lead semipublic lives one day, Prince Philip is determined that they learn decorum. Once, when Charles objected to wearing the kilt for a visit to Scotland, Philip left him behind in London, saying: "The Scots like to see the men of the royal family wearing the kilt. They have the right to it and if you can't be bothered, there is no Scotland for you."

However, the roles of the royal parents are reversed when it comes to serious matters of discipline. Just as it is Prince Philip who administers the royal household, it is the Queen who doles out praise or blame according to need. Eighteen months ago, when Charles was caught in a Scottish public house drinking the now famous and still illicit cherry brandy, it was the Queen who flew north to remonstrate. Anne, too, knows that in matters of public behavior, it is the Queen's word that really counts.

Once, at a dinner given in his honor by schoolmasters, the man who walks through life two paces behind his wife gave his own recipe for bringing up a family. "Lay down the law once and for all," he told his listeners. "Don't ever argue about it. Forget the little infractions. Let children develop normally between the guidelines. If something wrong develops, step on it hard, there and then." As an ex-naval man, he might have been quoting verbatim from the Queen's manual on what constitutes a happy ship.

Father and daughter compare notes at polo match. Princess Anne, like Philip, loves to ride, is outgoing, friendly and direct.

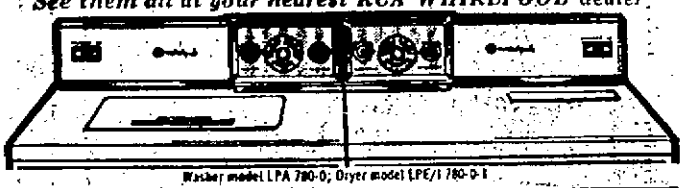
NOW...a washer and dryer that give proper care to Permanent Press garments ...you can even let the dryer do the ironing



ORDINARY CARE—Here's a pair of Permanent Press slacks washed in a regular cycle of an average washer and then drip-dried. You'll have to agree that they would need pressing before you'd want to wear them. (These photographs are all unretouched.)

BETTER CARE—These same pants with Permanent Press were washed in a Wash 'N Wear cycle and drip-dried. They look better. Seams are smoother and there's a better crease, but they still don't live up to that "no ironing" promise.

PROPER CARE—Here they were washed in the Wash 'N Wear cycle of an RCA WHIRLPOOL washer and tumble dried in the Wash 'N Wear cycle of an RCA WHIRLPOOL dryer. You can see the amazing difference. Fabric is smooth, seams and waistband are flat, creases are sharp. The dryer really "did the ironing".

Proper care for Permanent Press is only one reason why you get more for your money when you buy an RCA WHIRLPOOL washer and dryer. They have lots more exclusive features to help you do a better laundry job on everything in your wardrobe.

See them all at your nearest RCA WHIRLPOOL dealer.

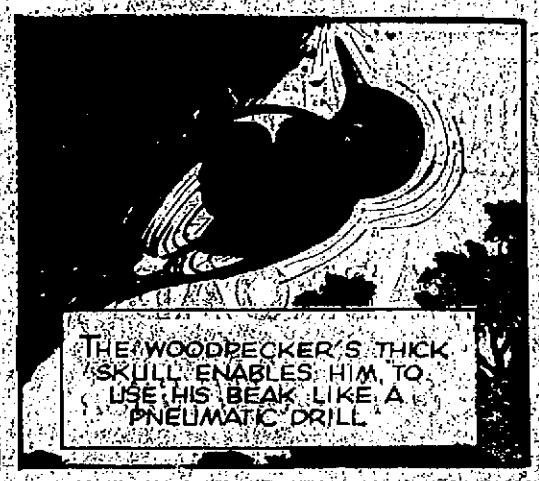
Drye, professor of surgery at the University of Louisville School of Medicine, a city plagued by a high incidence of motorcycle accidents, refers to the motorbike as "the most lethal weapon on our highways and streets." In Europe where motorbikes are popular because they're relatively cheap, they are known as "the doctors' friend." In the Canadian provinces of Alberta, Nova Scotia, British Columbia, protective helmets are compulsory gear for all motorbike drivers. What bothers most physicians about motorcycle accidents is the age of their victims. "They're so young," says Dr. Drye, "so pitifully young to die."

CHINESE BIRTH CONTROL. Red China is trying to limit its population now estimated at 750 million. Birth control clinics are springing up everywhere. In addition new regulations have been issued. The legal age for marriage is now 18 for women, 20 for men. Party leaders, however, are asked to defer marriage to later years and to set an example to the people by limiting births. University students are no longer permitted to marry until after graduation. Those who marry while in school are immediately expelled. Most widely used contraceptive device in China is the uterine bow, contraceptive pills being too expensive for mass distribution.



MARRIAGE BROKERS. Marriage brokers in Germany are becoming big business. There are now more than 100 "marriage institutes" in West Germany, doing an estimated annual gross business of $20 million. Practically every German periodical from the sophisticated liberal Die Zeit to the reactionary National Zeitung contains marital advertisements. It is estimated that as many as one out of three contemporary German marriages began with an advertisement. Many of the ads are inserted by parents on behalf of their offspring. "We seek for our daughter without her knowledge a young man up to 30, physically healthy, of good character, in excellent financial condition. Our daughter is not beautiful but charming, attractive, intelligent, sportlich-und-natürlich." Owing to the war there are a million spare unmarried German women, aged 35 to 50, who read the marriage ads daily with hope. Largest marriage agency in Germany is owned by Frau Dorothea Romba who runs 32 branches, spends $2500 a week inserting advertisements. Unlike this country there is surprisingly little embarrassment in Germany in making use of a marriage bureau. Neither women nor men are shy. "Why should they be?" asks Frau Romba. "In today's society it is the only way for so many of them to have a choice."

CONCENTRATED UNIONS. Figures released by the Labor Department reveal that the two most solidly unionized states in the nation are Washington with 43.1% of its eligible labor force unionized and West Virginia with 42%. Based on 1964 figures, almost 50% of the country's unionized workers are concentrated in five states: New York, California, Pennsylvania, Illinois and Ohio. The state least union-organized is North Carolina.

RECOMMENDED READING. The Vital Few by Jonathan Hughes, Houghton Mifflin Co., eight fascinating success stories of American industrial giants such as Ford, Whitney, Harriman, Carnegie, etc. The Proud Tower by Barbara Tuchman, Macmillan. a memorable history of the years preceding World War I. Both are headed for the nonfiction bestseller lists.

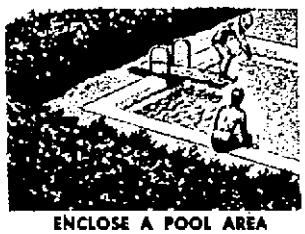
100 Feet—48 Plants . . . $9.95

KEEP PROWLERS OUT

Keeps out trespassers and vandals even more completely than a wire or wood fence.



SET OFF CHILDREN'S PLAY AREA

Gives children their own private play area.

SECLUDE A PATIO OR BARBECUE AREA

Insures privacy for your family and guests. Also blocks out unsightly views—alleys—old buildings, etc.

ENCLOSE A POOL AREA

Prevents unnoticed children from getting into pool area . . . also provides privacy.

Circle Your Grounds with A Living Rose Fence

Here's a new easy way for solving your fencing problems . . . for secluding a patio or swimming pool, surrounding your yard, house or for accentuating a walk or driveway with such a great savings in money and time you will be amazed and delighted. It's RED KNIGHT, our name for the improved Dr. Huey living fence of roses that grows in most any soil or weather condition into the beautiful yet absolutely impregnable protective fence of your dreams. Ordinary hedges offer practicability and beauty but the RED KNIGHT Living Fence of Roses offers so much more . . .

PROTECTION—PRIVACY—BEAUTY—ECONOMY

RED KNIGHT gives the protection of barbed wire yet adds beauty and value to your property. It keeps children and pets in the yard . . . discourages trespassers and vandals. At the low, low cost of less than 12c a foot, savings up to $100.00, compared to wire or brick, on a 25 ft. fence are entirely possible. Can you imagine any fence more beautiful than a living fence that produces masses of dark red flowers to beautify driveways or lanes as well as surrounding yards and pools or blocking out unsightly areas? Privacy from nosy and curious people is insured yet your RED KNIGHT fence has no unfriendly "GO AWAY—DON'T COME BACK AGAIN" look like stone, brick, wood or wire fences. It's the fence neighbors will be glad to talk over and about.

Why Red Knight is Your Best Living Fence Offer

Only the finest (Improved Dr. Huey) field grown plants with the strongest root systems are included in this offer. Given room to spread and develop, they are ready, willing and fully able to grow you a Living Fence that's strong and beautiful yet fully protective beyond your fondest expectations. Plants are all one year old nursery grown, never transplanted. For your convenience, preprimed under 12 inches high with strong root systems. For beauty, protection, for satisfaction and economy, mail your order today and get your genuine RED KNIGHT plants now at terrifically low money saving prices.

MAIL ORDER TODAY AND SOON YOU MAY BE WRITING US LETTERS OF PRAISE

PROTECTS CORNER LOT. The lawn of our corner house was a mess from people taking short cuts. A hedge didn't work. Then we got your RED KNIGHT LIVING FENCE. In just a little over a year our lawn and RED KNIGHT FENCE look beautiful.

STRONGER THAN WIRE OR WOOD. I had two fences before I bought the RED KNIGHT LIVING FENCE but between the wild kids and the weather they didn't hold up. I've had the RED KNIGHT for two years and it's stronger and prettier than my wood and wire fences ever were.

NO GREEN THUMB NEEDED. It doesn't take a "green thumb" to grow your RED KNIGHT LIVING FENCE. I enclosed the children's play area with ours and now it's 3 ft. tall and covered with beautiful blooms.

BLOCKS OUT UNSIGHTLY AREA. In back of our yard is a prairie used as a dump. We bought 25 ft. of your RED KNIGHT LIVING FENCE and it does an excellent job of screening the awful prairie. We are no longer ashamed to entertain guests in our back yard.

Thousands of Beautiful RED ROSES LIKE THESE

The RED KNIGHT LIVING ROSE FENCE produces masses of dark red semi-double floribunda-type flowers, several on one stem. Many blooms first year and has a tendency to bloom more than once yearly.

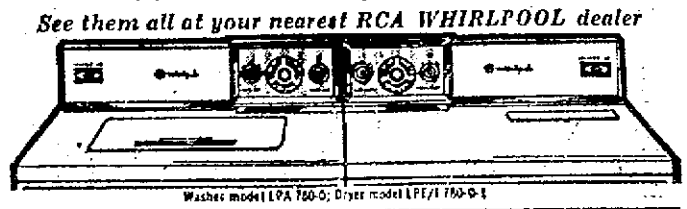
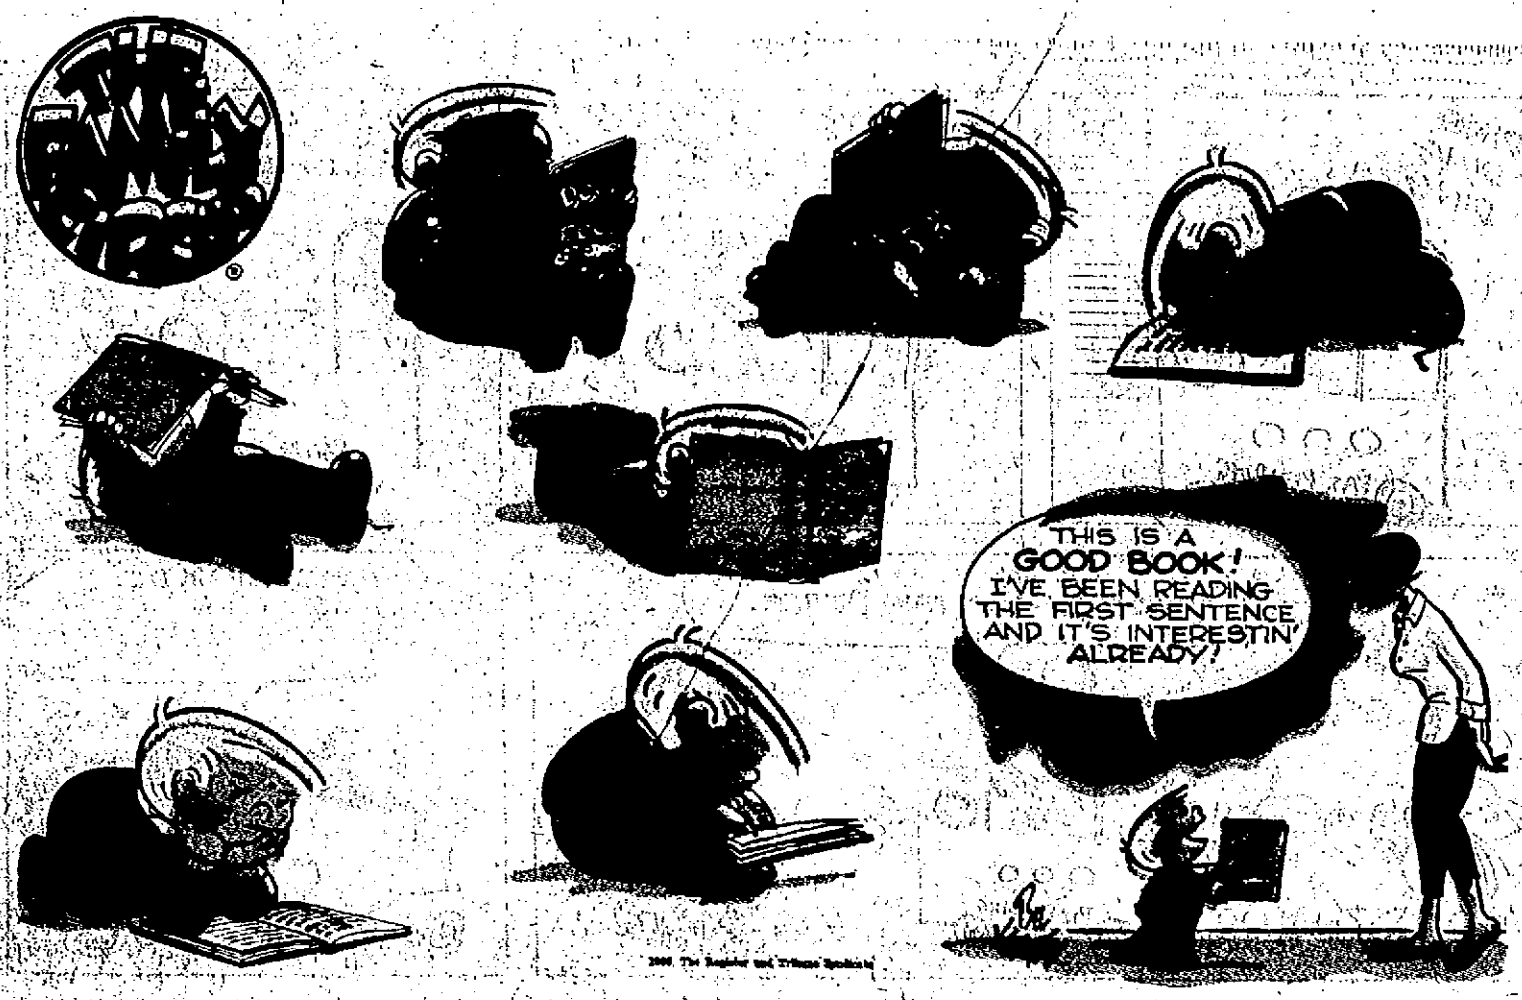
NOW...a washer and dryer that give proper care to Permanent Press garments ...you can even let the dryer do the ironing

ORDINARY CARE—Here's a pair of Permanent Press slacks washed in a regular cycle of an average washer and then drip-dried. You'll have to agree that they would need pressing before you'd want to wear them. (These photographs are all unretouched.)

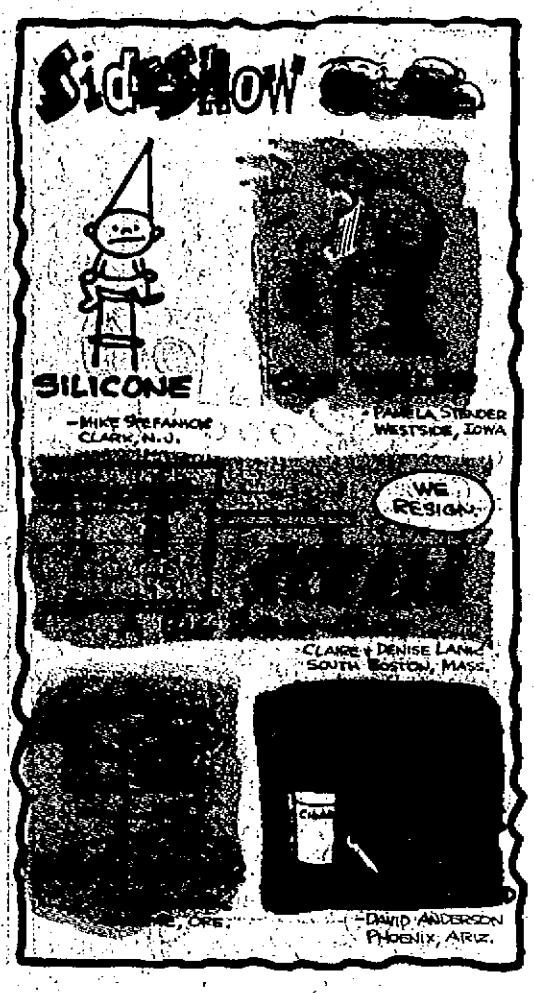


BETTER CARE—These same pants with Permanent Press were washed in a Wash 'N Wear cycle and drip-dried. They look better. Seams are smoother and there's a better crease, but they still don't live up to that "no ironing" promise.

PROPER CARE—Here they were washed in the Wash 'N Wear cycle of an RCA WHIRLPOOL washer and tumble dried in the Wash 'N Wear cycle of an RCA WHIRLPOOL dryer. You can see the amazing difference. Fabric is smooth, seams and waistband are flat, creases are sharp. The dryer really "did the ironing".



Proper care for Permanent Press is only one reason why you get more for your money when you buy an RCA WHIRLPOOL washer and dryer. They have lots more exclusive features to help you do a better laundry job on everything in your wardrobe.



See them all at your nearest RCA WHIRLPOOL dealer

Washer model LPA 760-0; Dryer model LPE/I 760-0-E
